Preface.

Homer D. L. Sweet, the compiler of this work, was thirty years collecting material for it. He was an invalid during its entire preparation, and died on November 16, 1893, when all except the appendix and this preface were in type.

Mr. Sweet was an upright, noble man, having the Avery characteristics of honesty and justice, and in his dealings leaned to the generous side. For many years and until his death he was secretary of the Onondaga Historical Society. The sketch of his life, on page 612, by himself, was written in the simple, homely strain in which he spoke of his own doings, if he mentioned them at all. No man was better posted on the history of Onondaga County, than he, and he was a bureau of information upon all subjects pertaining to it—geographical, geological and biographical. Homer Sweet had not many close friends, his physical condition tending to draw him to himself, but those who were most intimate with him, without exception, loved the man.

While it is very difficult to make such a work perfect, all the care possible has been taken by Mr. Sweet to make this so, and if one is an Avery, or a descendant from an Avery family, and their name, or that of their immediate ancestors, is not found in its assumed proper place, it is safe to conclude that they are not descendants from the Groton branch of the Avery family. If there are omissions, it is because of the difficulty in getting members to respond to letters of enquiry, and such errors as may be found have been caused from lack of facts or from erroneous statements.

To consult the work with satisfaction, one needs to understand the key or plan upon which it is arranged.

Each of the three branches of the original family are carried along separately, so that one may have to consult the index of each family before finding the name sought, and, as the same names run through all the families, the correct one may be difficult to locate, and only possible by reference to ancestors or descendants. Look for mother's name, if known, if the name sought is Avery, or for father's name if the mother was an Avery. Titles, such as honorable or captain, or the name of woman to whom married will help to point out the name.

Each head of a family is printed in black-faced type at the left of the page. Each such name is followed by one or more numbers in common type, and these numbers refer to the person's father or mother, grandfather or grandmother, and by turning back to these numbers in the order given, the ancestors may be traced to one of the three original branches.

When a prominent name is followed by another name in black-faced type, it is the family name of the person to whom they were married, and following is given the names of their children, which is preceded by a number. By turning forward to these numbers, the descendants of any member may be traced.

More than to any other person except Mr. Sweet, the existence of this book is due to Dr. Elroy M. Avery, of Cleveland, Ohio, who assisted materially in its design and character with both pen and purse.

Financial aid was supplied by others, notably by Mr. William A. Sweet, of Syracuse, N. Y.; Dr. A. R. Thomas, of Philadelphia; Mr. William Avery, of Boston; Mr. John D. Rockefeller and Mr. William Rockefeller, of the Standard Oil company.

Any member of the family desiring corrections or additions to be made in a second edition of this work, to be printed at some time in the future when it seems desirable, are requested to communicate the same to Mr. Elroy M. Avery, No. 657 Woodland Hills Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

CHAPTER ONE.

THE FOUNDERS OF THE FAMILY.

CHRISTOPHER.

CHRISTOPHER AVERY, a weaver, was born in England about 1590. There are several traditions with regard to his immigration to the new world. One is that he came from Salisbury, Wilts County, England, in the "Arbella," with John Winthrop, and landed at Salem, Mass., June 12, 1630. Another tradition is that he came over with the younger Winthrop, in 1631, and that, on the voyage, the subsequent governor of Connecticut formed a strong and life-long attachment for Christopher Avery's young son, James. The shipping list of the "Arbella" is not known to be in existence, although it may form a part of the voluminous, unpublished and unexamined archives of the British admiralty office relating to that period. If it is ever found it will probably determine this doubt.

The family is very old in Cornwall, and the Christopher Avery branch may have originated there. In 1310, a Thomas Avery was found at Bodmin, Cornwall; in 1543, John, Thomas, David, and Richard Avery were assessed in Cornwall; in 1605, Thomas Avery was mayor of Tintagel; and in 1679, mention was made of Christopher Avery's meadow at Tintagel. The late Mr. John D. Baldwin, of Worcester, Mass., was of the opinion that Christopher Avery's ancestors came originally from Cornwall. A Christopher Avery buried his wife, Mary, at Salisbury, in 1591, and they may possibly have been the parents of our Christopher. See Appendix A.

There is also some question as to where Christopher Avery first took up his abode on this side of the water. Mr. Baldwin believed that he lived in Boston for several years and went to Gloucester about 1644, while Mr. Harris, of Groton, thinks that it is probable that he went directly to the fishing establishment at Cape Ann and settled on "the farms" adjacent, and that he had a close connection with the Rev. Mr. Blinman and his "Welsh Colony."

"Who would not, will not, if he can,
 Bathe in the breezes of fair Cape Ann—
 Rest in the bowers her bays enfold,
 Loved by the sachems and squaws of old?
 Home where the white magnolias bloom,
 Sweet with the bayberry's chaste perfume,
 Hugged by the woods and kissed by the sea—
 Where is the Eden like to thee?"

But it is asserted that Avery, the layman, did not well agree with Blinman, the minister at Gloucester, that he was presented at court for speaking "scoffingly of him," that he did not accompany the minister to New London, as most of his flock did, and that he did not join his son there until Blinman had gone back to England.

Christopher Avery was selectman at Gloucester in 1646, 1652 and 1654. At a court in Salem he took the freeman's oath, June 29, 1652; was chosen and sworn clerk of the band, constable, and clerk of the market. His wife did not come with him to this country, and, in 1654, he was relieved of a fine imposed for living apart from her, as the following shows;

In 1658, he sold his lands at Gloucester and removed to Boston, where, on the 18th of March, 1658-9, he purchased a home in what is now the business centre of Boston. The following is a copy of the deed :

The land thus sold for forty pounds sterling was a small lot about twenty-six by forty-six feet. It was located in what is now the centre of the post-office building, facing on Devonshire Street. The famous old spring, which gave the name to Spring Lane and which is now preserved under the post-office, was near. This Avery plot was a part of or at least adjoined the site of two notable resorts of later days,—the well-known restaurant whence first came the famous "Julien soup," and the "Stackpole House," not much less famous. The Winthrop estate was not far away, and near by, in after years, Benjamin Franklin, was born. Christopher Avery did not long retain this property, for on the "two and twentjeth day of march one thousand Sixe hundred Sixty & three," he sold the land to Ambrose Dew for forty pounds. There had evidently been no increase of value in the five years that he had held possession. After being owned by two or three different persons, it was bought by Mr. Stackpole about 1790.

Christopher Avery now followed his son James to Connecticut, and, August 8, 1665, purchased a house, orchard and lot of Robert Burrows in New London. Here he claimed exemption from watching and training on account of age; in June, 1667, and was made a freeman of the colony, October, 1669. Charles Hill, the town clerk, made this record of his decease: "Christopher Avery's death, vide, near the death of Mother Brewster," but the date of her death does not appear. Minor, in his diary, however, records that Christopher Avery died March 12, 1679.

According to an affidavit in the probate court, he left an only son, James.

JAMES.

CAPTAIN JAMES AVERY, the only child of Christopher and properly the founder of the family that we call the Groton Averys, was born in England about 1620. He came to America with his father, and lived at Gloucester for several years. He married Joanna Greenslade, of Boston, November 10, 1643, as appears from the record at Gloucester. She received a letter of dismissal from the church at Boston to the one at Gloucester in 1644:

"17 of 1 mo. 1644. Our sister Joan Greenslade, now the wife of one James Averill had granted her by the Church's silence, letter, of recommendation to the Ch. at Gloster."

Nothing is known of her ancestry. The only other trace of the Greenslade family in America in the seventeenth century that I have found is a petition with the following heading: "1663, July 4, A Declaration of ye Townes of Scarborow & Tfalmouth Black Point & Casco to be Presented to ye Hon<sup>d</sup> Court at York." This petition carries numerous signatures, including that of Thomas Greenslad. At that time, the province of Maine was claimed by the heirs of Sir Ferdinando Gorges and by the colony of Massachusetts Bay, the struggle for jurisdiction ending in favor of the Bay colony in 1677. A possible relationship between Thomas Greenslad and Joanna Greenslade is suggested by the fact that the first born son of the latter was named James (for the father) and that the second born was named Thomas.

Miss Caulkins's "History of New London," p. 67, says:

"On the nineteenth of October, 1650, grants were made by the townsmen to 'Mr. Blynman, Obadiah Bruen, Hughe Caukin, Hughe Roberts, John Coite, Andrew Lester, James Averye, Robert Isbell.'"

JAMES AVERY.

"These were all from Gloucester, a town on the eastern coast of Massachusetts, situated upon the peninsula of Cape Ann. Mr. Richard Blinman had been the minister of Gloucester for eight years, and was now engaged to become the minister of the Pequot plantation. The others were a party of his friends who purposed to move with him, and came on to make preparatory arrangements."

It appears that James Avery went back to Gloucester, sold his possessions there to his father and, in 1651, returned to New London. In March of that year, "the principal body of these eastern emigrants arrived. * * * * * Early in 1651, New Street, in the rear of the town plot, was opened for the accommodation of the Cape Ann company. This position was designated as 'beyond the brook and the ministry lot.' It was carved into house lots and took the name of Cape Ann Lane. The lots on this street were nine in number, of six acres each, extending both sides of the narrow street from the alder swamp in front to Cedar Swamp on the west. Beginning at the lower end, Hugh Calkins had the first lot by the Lyme road, or highway to Nahantick, as it was then called, and next to him was his son-in-law, Hugh Roberts; then Coite, Lester, Avery, Allen, Meades, Hough, Isbell." These New Street home-lots were dreary and uninviting. Some of the new-comers became discouraged and went away and "even those who had the courage to settle down in this part of the plantation, soon abandoned the land to pasturage or waste and found other homesteads."

The registry entitled "Births in New London" begins with the following record:

"Hannah, the daughter of James Avery, was born 11 Oct., 1644.

James, the son of do.—15 Dec. 1646.

Mary, the daughter of do.—19 Feb. 1647."

These three were born in Gloucester, and their births were there recorded; the transferred record "is not a solitary instance of loose and inaccurate registry." The interval between the births of James and Mary, as above recorded, was fourteen months instead of two months, as at first glance appears,—a result of the observance of the Julian calendar in those days. The calendar-amendment act, an English statute of 1751, established the first day of January as the beginning of each year (instead of Lady-day, March 25), adopted the Gregorian or "new style" in place of the Julian or "old style" calendar, and cancelled the then existing excess of eleven days by making the third day of September, 1752, the fourteenth. Hence the double writing of the year in dates falling in January, February and March, so frequently met with in the following century. The last date in the registry-record above quoted might be written, 19 Feb., 1647 (O. S.), or 29 Feb., 1648 (N. S.), or 19 Feb., 1647-'48.

In addition to his grant of land, October 19, 1650, and of a town lot on Cape Ann Lane, early in 1651, James Avery soon received a grant of the "Little Owl Meadow," "not far from the town plot on the North side of the Mill Brook." But ideas grew and there was a quick thirsting after large domains. About 1652, he was granted a farm in South Groton, where lands were especially desirable, as they might be cultivated immediately. He, however, continued to live with his family on his town lot for several years. Early in 1653, he secured another farm, one of the "Pocketannock grants," further up the river, in what is now the town of Ledyard. About 1656, he built "The Hive of the Averys," at the head of Poquonnock Plain, in the present town of Groton, a mile and a half from the River Thames. In June, 1684, the old Bl'nman edifice at New London, "the unadorned church and watch-tower of the wilderness," was sold to Captain Avery for six pounds, with the condition that he should remove it in one month's time. According to tradition, the church was taken down and its materials carried across the river and added to the house he had already built at Poquonnock. In spite of this analytic and synthetic process, the house seems to have retained some of its sacred character and, even a century later, "the same timbers, the same boards, joyfully resounded once more to the ancient but well remembered voices of exhortation and praise." The antique dwelling, of which we give a fine illustration, is still in good repair and is occupied and owned, as it has ever been, by an Avery family. With its charming situation, the old-time combination constitutes one of the most interesting and picturesque farm-houses in the country. Here James Avery lived until he died. The present occupant (1893) is the Groton town-clerk, Mr. James D. Avery (No. 1623).

James Avery seems to have taken, at once, an active part in private business and public affairs. On the twelfth of October, 1667, he petitioned the general court as follows :

This house was built at the head of Poquonnoc Plain, in the town of New London (now Groton), Conn., in 1636, and is still in good condition. Here its builder, Captain James Avery, lived until his death in 1700, since which time it has been the home of some of his descendants.

"The request of James Avery of New London to this Honored Assembly is, that whereas the Country have putt me upon some publique employment, and haue done what seruice I am capeable of, that this Assembly would please to grant me, as they have done to diuerse others, a percell of land which belongs to the Country, soe much as theyshall think meet, where it may be found ; which I shall thankfully accept ; and ever pray for your prosperity."

In May of the following year, the general court made the following record :

"Lieutenant James Avery hath likewise by this Court granted to him a Hundred Acres of land for a farme, in which there may not be aboute twenty acres of meadow."

A like reward for public services was made by the colony in 1675.

He soon became active in military affairs and is generally spoken of by the title of Ensign, Lieutenant or Captain. The region in which he had made his home was formerly the chief seat of the formidable Pequot tribe that had been almost exterminated by the English a few years before. The Pequot Fort, taken in 1637 by Captain John Mason, in command of the Connecticut troops and their Mohegan and Narragansett allies, was on the Mystic River, on the eastern line of Groton. After the Pequot War, a few survivors of that once dreaded tribe still lived in the haunts of their fathers, with the Narragansetts on the east, and the Mohegans, under their sachem, Uncas, near by on the west. In 1657, the Narragansetts made a wild foray and Uncas fled from the blood and fire that marked their course. He took refuge in a fort and was besieged by his unrelenting foes. But just in time, "Lieutenant James Avery, Mr. Brewster, Richard Haughton, Samuel Lothrop, and others well armed, succeeded in throwing themselves into the fort ; and the Narragansetts, fearing to engage in a conflict with the English, broke up the siege and returned home." The legislature approved of the measures that had been taken for the protection of the faithful ally of the English.

Great Britain proclaimed war with the States General in February, 1665, and, in June, America received tidings that the Dutch admiral, DeRuyter, had orders to visit New York with a large force. The northern colonies were alarmed at the approach of so formidable an enemy and began preparations for defence. The following item appears in the record of a session of the Connecticut general court, held at Hartford, July 6, 1665 :

"This Court haueing by his Majestie's order bene informed that DeRuiter is likely to assault his Majestie's Colonies in these parts of the world and that it is his royall pleasure that his subjects here should put themselves in a posture of defence agaynst the comon adversary, In pursuance thereof, doe order that each plantation in this Colony should consider of some way for the discouery of the approach of the enemy : And that vpon the discovery of the enemy they presently giue notice thereof to ye Committee appointed by the Court, who are to act therein according to the power committed to them by this Assembly."

The committee in charge from Southerton to Guilford was "Maior Mason, Ens : Avery, Thomas Minor, Robt Chapman, or any three of them." "Which said Committees being mett in their respectiue limits are hereby impowred to order and appoint how and in what way the order established for aid and reliefe in such cases may be effectually attended." In this same year (1665), the general court confirmed Ensign James Avery as "lieutenant to ye Trainband at New London."

In 1667, the Pequot remnant was transferred to a reservation, although, as the historian informs us, "Mr. Winthrop, Captain Denison, Captain James Avery and some other men of influence, dissented from these views and labored for the accommodation of the Pequots." The fair disposition and judicial temperament of Mr. Avery are here clearly shown—qualities that doubtless gave him much of the great influence that we know he possessed with the friendly Indians of that region. For several years, before and after this, the commissioners of the United Colonies referred almost everything relating to the Pequots to Messrs. Denison, Stanton and Avery for adjustment, and the Connecticut general court records contain references, too numerous to mention in detail, of which the following (May 11, 1666) must suffice as examples :

"Lt. Avery and James Morgan are appointed and required by this Court to lay out the land for Coassatuck Indians according to ye determination of ye comittee ; and likewise to lay out the northern bounds of Stonington, and also ye land granted to Thomas Minor and John Gallop respectiueiy."

"Robin Cussinamo is appointed Gouvernor ouer the Pequots on this side Mistick Riuer, and Cushauakim and Yoimatimo are appointed as Assistants to ye said Cussinemo in gouerneing the said Indians. And Lt. James Avery, Cary Latham and John Gallop are desired to assist by advice and counsell to these Governours as occasion or necessity may present."

In 1678, the said commissioners granted Captain Avery five pounds "for his good service in assisting in the Government of the Pequots for sundry years past." See Plymouth Colony Records, Vol. 10.

In 1668, he and Cary Latham were chosen by the town to settle the boundary line with the sachem Uncas. The £15 that secured the desired formal deed was paid by James Avery and two others, each of whom was indemnified by the town with 200 acres of land. Captain Avery's services seem to have been often called for by the town and by individuals in the settling of such controversies.

In June, 1672, the general court ordered that Captain John Winthrop should be the "cheife military officer" for the county of New London, and Licutenant James Avery, his second.

In 1673, danger was apprehended from the Dutch, and each county was ordered to prepare for defence. New London County was to add a hundred "dragoones" to her train-bands, and for "such forces as shall be called out of that county, James Avery [was] appoynted Captain."

New England's long continued freedom from the horrors of Indian war was abruptly ended in 1675. The name of King Philip became a terror to the English settlers from Connecticut to Casco Bay. In the summer months, Massachusetts suffered untold agony and, in October, the general court at Hartford practically put Connecticut under martial law.

"Forasmuch as this Court, by reason of intelligence (both from our freinds towards the Narrogansetts and also from Major Andross) of great combinations and threatenings of the Indians against the English; and peticularly against the greatest part of this Colony, and that speedily to be put in execution, the late experience and motion of the enemie seeming to suite such a designe, haue seen cause to call backe their present forces unto Hartford to be improved as farther occasion may call for; It is therefore hereby ordered, that each county doe speedily rayse out of their severall townes in their respective countyes, sixty souldiers, well fitted with hors armes and ammunition, as dragoones, who shall be imbodyed for motion in their severall respective countyes for the defence of the Colony against any sudden assault of the enemie. And because of the difficulty and danger of moueing over the riuier at Savbrooke, this Court orders Savbrooke and Kenilworth to fall in with New Haven, as part thereof in this undertaking. The proportioning of each plantation and all other things necessary for the well ordering of the severall companyes is left to the ciuill authority in each county to order as they shall judg most conduceable to the end afoarsayd; and that they be ready for the releife of each other upon notice, as any exigence may call for. And because there are the Moheags and Pequots dwelling amongst those fower townes of New London County, it is ordered that Captain James Auery take the command of forty English from the three townes of New London, Stoneington and Lyme, to be raysed together with such of the Pequots as he likes, and Captain John Mason shall take twenty English from Norwich with the Moheags; each party to quarter and lye where they may be of best vse for the end afoarsaid, and to joyne together as there may be any occasion or exigence, vpon notice from Major John Winthrop; they to appoynt such inferior officers as they shall thinke most meet."

At a meeting of the council of the colony in the following February, "there was order to Capt. Avery, Capt. Denison and Lnt. Minor to rayse some forces to surpriz or destroy the enemy; as more at large by the letter on file may appeare." From said letter, I clip the following sentence:

"The Council, considering the difficulty of collecting any considerable body of the enlisted soldiers from the several townes, for an immediate march against the enemy, order that Captains Avery and Denison, and Lieut. Minor, should forthwith gather as many men as possible, from the three nearest towns (New London, Norwich and Stonington), and, taking with them the Mohegan and Pequot Indians, march against the enemy." At a meeting of the council in the following month, it was written in the record that:

"For the encouragement of such as shall goe forth volunteers against our Indian enemies in the Narragancett Countrey and to prevent their gathering and settling there, we have thought meet to declare, that whosoever shall imploy themselves in this service, whether Indians or English, and goe forth under the command of Capt. George Denison or Capt. James Avery or Lnt. Thomas Minor or Ens: Tho: Leffingwell, shall haue all such plunder as they shall seize, both of persons and corn or other estate, to be dissposed by them in way of sale, so as they may best advantage themselves, provided Authority haue had the first tender of their dispose of captiues, alloweing them the market price; to be diuided amongst them, to the priuate souldiers, each man alike, and to the commanders so much a better part according as there is difference in their wages; and all wounded men to be healed at the Country's charge."

In the following August, "the Councill agreed and ordered that the right and division of the captives be left to the decision and determination of Capt. John Mason, Capt. James Avery and Mr. Daniel Witherell, whoe are desired and impowered to disspossesse the said captiues, whither in hands of the Pequots, Moheags or Narangancetts, to such persons to whome of right they doe belong, according to the seuerall agreements as the claymers shall make their demands by." The question of the disposition of booty again came up in the council and, in January, 1676-'77, it was ordered that "whateuer captiues or plunder shall be taken is to be tryed and condemned by a Court Marshall, that so no wrong may be done. The Court Marshall for New London County are appoynted to be Major Ed: Palmes, Capt. James Auery, Lnt. Samuel Mason and Lnt. Tho: Minor, or any three of them."

The commissioners of the United Colonies of New England put a force of a thousand men under command of Governor Josiah Winslow of Plymouth. In early winter, he was in the hostile country where a great battle was fought on Sunday, December 19, 1675. The Narragansett fort was in what is South Kingston, R. I. It included five or six acres of dry ground, was surrounded by a swamp and defended by palisades and felled trees. The only entrance was by a bridge made by a felled tree and commanded by a block house. Within, were not fewer than 3,500 warriors. The fight was desperate, for, on either side, it was a clear case of conquer or die. Victory was for the English. It is said that 700 Indians were killed that day and that of their wounded, 300 died. The power of the Narragansett tribe was broken. In this fight, the Pequot allies were commanded by Captain James Avery; Captain John Gallop, who commanded the Mohegans, was slain.

The Narragansett fight enraged the Indians and made them desperate. The English plantations were in greater danger than before. In the following February, began "that series of forays into the Indian territory, which, issuing at short intervals from New London County and led by those noted Indian fighters, Denison and Avery, contributed in no small degree to the favorable result." In the third of these excursions, the chief surviving sachem of the Narragansetts, Canonchet, the son of Miantonomo, was captured—"one of the great exploits of the war." The particulars of his capture and execution may be found in Hubbard's "Indian Wars," pp. 165-9, and in Trumbull's "History of Connecticut," I. 343-5.

Captain Avery was equally prominent in the civil matters of the town and colony. He was chosen townsman, (i. e., selectman,) in 1660 and held that office twenty years. What seems to have been one of his earliest acts in this official capacity shows a laudable desire to preserve the public documents and is thus recorded:

"Feb. 6, 1660.—For the settling, perfecting and fairly recording of all records, for the town's use and good of after posterity, wee agreed that there shall be a towne booke, with an Alphabet in it, wherein all acts passed, orders or agreements, shall hereafter be fairly recorded, whether past or to come, for the effecting hereof, we agree that all the old bookes of records shall be searched into for what is material concerning the public good, to be drawn out into a booke provided and paid for by the Recorder, who shall have 6*s.* paid him out of the town rate for every act, law or order recorded."

This is signed by the townsmen, Obadiah Bruen (who was recorder), Hugh Calkin, James Rogers, James Avery and William Nichols. Unfortunately, the full measure of the advantages which these wise townsmen intended to confer upon "after posterity" was made scant by the performance.

For the next few years, the records contain frequent references to James Avery in connection with such matters as the collection of tax-rates, arbitrations like that between "Goodman Packer and the Indians", the killing of wolves, for which he claimed the bounty of twenty shillings each, the laying out of the king's highways, the adjustment of the bounds between New London and Saybrook (which adjustment proved to be unsatisfactory to his fellow-citizens), the naming of a day for the cutting of wood for the minister, etc. In February, 1665-'66, it was "Voted by ye Towne that Leiff. Avery and James Morgan have power to agree with any person that hath a serviceable horse to be employed in fetching up Mr. Bradstreet and what agreement they make the towne to allowe and make good the same." The next year, and as a consequence of this carte blanche, Goodman Prentice received ten shillings for the use of his horse, and Goodman Royce fifteen shillings "for ye minister's dyet." On June 1, 1666, it was "Voted by a Vnanimous consent that Mr. Bradstreet is accepted to ye worke of ye ministry amongst us, and that he have 80 lb. pr yeare to encourage him in the worke, to be gathered by way of rate." The town also voted to build a girt house "36 foote in length, and 25 in breadth and 13 studd betwixt ye joynts with a stack of stone chimneys in the midst," all at a cost of a hundred pounds, with an extra appropriation to "paye ye masons for building a stone chimney and glaze ye house windowes." These records give us an interesting peep into the old New England town-meeting and throw an instructive side light on the characters of our fathers.

Originally, the Connecticut general court not only enacted the laws of the colony, but administered them, criminally as well as civilly. As it was difficult to try all of these cases at Hartford, and in answer to a petition from New London, the general court "doe order for ye present that there shall be an assistant and 3 commissioners in that Town who shall have full power to issue small causes, and ye punishing small crimes." Among the first commissioners appointed for this particular court at New London, was Captain James Avery. The appointment was conferred upon him by the general court in 1663. His office as commissioner was much like that of a justice of the peace. The first court record of "Judge" Avery that I have found is dated May 31, 1664; "Deputy-governor Mason and Messrs. Talcott, Bruen and Avery on the bench." In 1666, the county of New London was constituted with its county court. Of this county court, James Avery was for many years one of the commissioners. Before this court came actions for small debts and complaints of evil-speaking and disorderly conduct. Wills were proved and marriages performed the same as in the higher courts. A few of the examples cited by Miss Caulkins may serve to illustrate the manners and customs of those days:

"June 30, 1664. Mrs. Houghton summons Mrs. Skillinger before the commissioners to answer for abusing her daughter in the meeting house; we not finding legal proofs hereof, judge it meet that Mrs. Houghton tutor her daughter better and not occasion disturbance by any unmeet carriage to her betters hereafter, and this being the first time, we enforce no further."

Another case was against "a person belonging to Seabrook for uttering contumelious speeches against his Majesty when in liquor; to be whipt immediately at New London and a quarter of a year hence at Seabrook; Mr. Chapitan to see it done."

"1667. Goodwife Willey presented for not attending public worship and bringing her children thither; fined 5s.

"George Tongue and wife were solemnly reprimanded for their many offences against God and man and each other. On their submission and promise of reformation, and engaging to keep up the solemn duty of prayer and the service of God in the family, they were released by paying a fine of £3.

"John Lewis and Sarah Chapman presented for sitting together on the Lord's Day under an apple tree in Goodman Chapman's orchard."

"1673. James Rogers, Jr., for sailing in a vessel on the Lord's day, fined 20s.

"Edward Stallion for sailing his vessel from New London to Norwich on the Sabbath, 40s."

"Sept., 1674. Complaint entered against Stonington for want of convenient highways to the meeting-house. The court ordered that there shall be four principal highways according as they shall agree among themselves to the four angles, and one also to the landing place, to be stated by James Avery and James Morgan within 4 months."

That the county court had admiralty powers appears from the following:

"1680. Thomas Dymond vs. barque Providence, stranded on Fisher's Island, for salvage of goods."

"1682. New London was presented for not having a grammar-school; fined £10; also for not having an English school for reading and writing, £5."

There were numerous presentations of James Rogers for profanation of the Sabbath and kindred offenses. He had extensive lands and a greater interest in the trade of the port than any other person in the place. He and his family became dissenters from the established church and allied themselves to the Sabbatarians or Seventh-day Baptists of Rhode Island. After 1677, his son, John Rogers, drew off from the Sabbatarians, assumed the ministerial offices of preaching and baptizing and organized a new sect called the Rogerenes. Miss Caulkins says that "a great and predominant trait of the founder of the sect, and of his immediate followers, was their determination to be persecuted. They were aggressive, and never better pleased than when, by shaking the pillars, they had brought down the edifice upon their own heads. They esteemed it a matter of duty, not only to suffer fines, distraintment, degradation, imprisonment and felonious penalties with patience, but to obtrude themselves upon the law, and challenge its power, and in fact to persecute others, by interrupting their worship, and vehemently denouncing what they esteemed sacred." These offences were promptly met by penalties. "Fines were many times repeated and the estates of the offenders melted under the seizures of the constables as snow melts before the sun." "It is probable that all penalties would have been silently dropped had they not kept up the aggressive system of testifying, as it was called; that is, presenting themselves in the religious assemblies of their neighbors to utter their testimony against the worship. John Rogers and the elder sister were the principal offenders, they often carrying their work into meeting and interrupting the service with exclamations and protests against what was said or done." The foregoing is intended simply to illuminate the following from the records of the county court:

"April 14, 1685. Judges upon the bench, Fitch, Avery and Wetherell. John Rogers, James Rogers, Jr., Samuel Beebee, Jr., and Joanna Way, are complained of for profaning God's holy day by servile work, and are grown to that height of impiety as to come at several times into the town to re-baptize several persons; and when God's people were met together on the Lord's day to worship God, several of them came and made great disturbance, behaving themselves in such a frantic manner as if possessed with a diabolical spirit, so affrighting and amazing that several women swooned and fainted away. John Rogers to be whipped fifteen lashes, and for unlawfully re-baptizing to pay £5. The others to be whipped."

Now all men by these Sharts that I James Avery Sr.

DEED FROM JAMES AVERY, SR., TO JAMES AVERY, JR.

The Hon. Richard A. Wheeler, for many years the judge of probate at Stonington, Conn., says (Novembr 10, 1888): "Mr. Avery held the office of commissioner for a good many years, and, judging from his position in civil and military life, he must have been a man of marked abilities, fitted for the exigencies of the times in which he lived." Miss Caulkins says that "after 1666, for fifteen or twenty years, the commissioners (justices) for New London were almost invariably Messrs. Avery, Wetherell and Palmes." (History of New London, p. 180.)

Captain James Avery was twelve times elected to the general court from 1658 to 1680. Groton was set off from New London as a separate town in 1705. In 1871, Judge Wheeler published a list of representatives from Groton from its organization, at the end of which occur these words: "It is worthy of note that out of the 545 representatives of the town of Groton, 104 have borne the name of Avery and all were descendants of Captain James Avery."

There was then a close union between church and state, each being part of the other. The Congregational church was fully "established," wholly "orthodox," and the only one recognized by law. The minister's salary was raised by public tax and a few of the old rate-lists for this purpose are still preserved. In that for 1664, the names of 105 property holders appear. The name of "John Winthrop, Squire," heads the list. He was then a non-resident; his property was set down at £185. The estate of James Rogers is set down at £548—nearly double that of any other tax-payer. The next highest are John Pickett, £299, 10s.; James Morgan, £252; Robert Burrows, £246; James Avery, £236; and Cary Latham, £217. At that time, land was hardly taken into account in the estimate of the value of a man's estate.

James Avery was prominent in matters relating to the church, and the references to him in such connection are numerous. For example, in February, 1677-'78, when it was resolved in town-meeting to build a new meeting-house to take the place of the out-grown Blinman house, the building-committee consisted of Captain Avery and two others. In 1683, he was a member of a committee of which Major John Winthrop was chairman, to send a letter to the Rev. Mr. Mather and the Rev. Samuel Willard, at Boston, for advice concerning a successor for the Rev. Mr. Bradstreet, deceased. The church record kept by the Rev. Mr. Bradstreet, begins October 5, 1670, the day of his ordination. It begins with the following list:

“THE MEMBERS OF THE CHURCH.

Lieutenant James Avery and wife,
Thomas Miner and wife,
James Morgan, senior, and wife.”

and eighteen others. Thus we see that the wife, Joanna, was living in the latter part of 1670; the Rev. John Avery says that she was living in 1693. The date of her death is not known. She was the mother of all his children.

About 1655, a certain Abigail, surname unknown, was married to Samuel, the son of William Cheeseboro, the founder of Stonington. Their daughter, Abigail Cheeseboro, married John, the son of Captain James Avery: Samuel Cheeseboro was buried July 31, 1673, and on June 15, 1675, his widow was married to Mr. Joshua Holmes. Mr. Holmes died in 1694, and on July 4, 1698, his widow was married to the widowed Captain James Avery. Captain James Avery died April 18, 1700; his widow was living as late as 1714. His four sons married and had twenty daughters. The four sons had thirty-two sons. At least twenty-five of the grandsons became heads of families, and there is nothing in the records to show that the other seven were not married. These twenty-five grandsons, of whose families we have the records, had one hundred and two sons. Of these, at least eighty-five might have married, and it is known that sixty-nine of them did marry.

In studying the records of those days, the careful student is strongly impressed with the fact that Captain James Avery was a very remarkable man. Living as he did in stirring times, he was a leader among strong men, enjoying their confidence and respect because he deserved them. Especially is it to be noted that, although the state then took cognizance of affairs which we now call private and interfered in the details of family life and personal relations in a way that would not be tolerated now, he was never censured or “presented” for any shortcoming or alleged dereliction of duty or propriety. Eminent in all the relations of life, his descendants look upon him with pride and affection as one sans peur et sans reproche.

CHAPTER TWO.

JAMES, JUNIOR.

JAMES AVERY, jr., like his father before him, was an important man of affairs. He was deputy to the General Court at Hartford, for New London, six times from 1690 to 1702, Commissioner of the Peace, Lieutenant and Captain of the trainband, an advisor and counselor of the Pequot tribe, and a committee on boundary disputes between towns and the location of public lands. He and his wife joined the 1st Church of Christ in New London, in 1672. He, with Mr. Crary, appeared before the General Court at its May session, 1696, in behalf of the inhabitants on the East side of New London river, to grant the said people liberty to embody themselves into church estate. This was the origin of the first church in Groton. Capt. James Avery and his wife are the first names in the list of those who were in full communion in the Church of Christ, in Groton, in the old Church Record, begun by John Owen, pastor, before 1727. Their tombstones, in a very good state of preservation, stand near the center of West burying-ground at Poquonoc.

43

CAPTAIN PARKE AVERY, as known in the town records, but sometimes called Elder Parke because he separated from "the standing order" and preached every Sunday to the people of Groton in "the great room" of the old Avery mansion, at the head of Birch Plains in Poquonoc, where the service and seats for all were free, and the horses of attendants were well cared for by faithful servants during the hours of worship. This separation was occasioned by the too rigid enforcement of tythes, that was becoming very unpopular, and it is a matter of history that almost everybody in town soon went to hear him, until the meeting-house of "the standing order" was so unfrequented that it was closed for a considerable period.

The old captain or elder had large wealth for those days, and was, withal, a man of mark. At the beginning of the revolutionary war, he was a member of the colonial legislature at Hartford, and was decidedly in favor of fighting, if necessary, for our national independence. He wrote to his sons that he thought war would be declared, that he was too old and infirm to take the field himself, but advised them to stand by their country. His sons, Parke, jr., Jasper, Ebenezer, and Elisha, accordingly held themselves in readiness, served in the colonial ranks throughout the war, and were all in Fort Griswold on the 6th September, 1781.

68

Tabitha, eldest daughter of 20-2 and Tabitha Gardiner ; married, July 9, O. S., 1741, Dr. Henry [died January 7, 1802.

Skilton, born in Coventry, Eng., November 19, O. S., 1718. children : Lucy, born April 5, 1742. Elizabeth, born February 11, 1743. Mary, born February 12, 1746. Avery, born April 30, 1748. James, born June 1, 1749. Tabitha, born August 26, 1752. Tabitha, 2d, born November 20, 1758. Sarah, born April 11, 1757.

There is a little story relating to Tabitha Avery and Dr. Henry Skilton, that may be of some interest. John Skilton was a silk or ribbon weaver in Coventry, England, somewhere about 1715. He had a family of children, all of them young, of which Henry was the oldest. The tradition handed down in the family is, that John Skilton went out one Saturday evening to purchase supplies for his family; was seized by the press-gang on the streets of Coventry; was hurried away without being allowed to communicate with his family; on shipboard he was horribly brutalized, beaten and abused, and never returned to his family. His son Henry, later, at the age of about eighteen, resolved that England was no place for him to marry and raise a family in. Although without money he made up his mind to emigrate to America. Starting with a little pack, slung to a stick over his shoulder, he walked to Bristol; there obtained a position of clerk on an English war vessel bound for Boston; deserted the ship when he reached Boston, as he originally intended and had a right to do; drifted down into Rhode Island; studied medicine; became interested in the radical religious ideas of the Rhode Island of that day, and finally settled down to the practice of medicine in the town of Preston, Conn. After he had achieved the purchase of a horse for use in his practice, he was in the habit of riding his horse to church regularly, a pillion being one of the trappings. Joseph Avery (20) was also the father of a family of five. He owned an outlying farm, where he had cattle and hay. As fall came on, he offered his oldest son the title to this outlying farm, provided he would go and occupy the small house upon it during the coming winter, and feed, water and care for the cattle till spring. This offer the oldest son declined to accept; whereupon a younger sister, Tabitha Avery, proposed to accept the offer if she were given the opportunity, and it was arranged that she should spend the winter at the farm, for the purposes above indicated. While so engaged she was in the habit of attending church on foot—the same church attended by the young doctor, who, taking advantage of his opportunity offered her the use of his pillion and his escort to and from the church and her residence; the eventual result being an engagement and marriage.

EVERY SKILTON married March 26, 1771, Parthenia Judd, daughter of Timothy Judd, born August 6, 1754, died March 30, 1839. Children: Milicent, born October 5, 1772. James, born April 10, 1777. Lucy, born July 21, 1780. Henry, born July 17, 1783. Polly, born May 22, 1786. Parthenia, born October 2, 1788. Tabitha, born May 2, 1791.

JAMES SKILTON, Esquire, married, June 30, 1799, Chloe Steel, born October 2, 1730, died April 30, 1867. Children:

Elijah Steel, born May 17, 1800. Avery Judd, born February 1, 1802. Julius J. G., born June 24, 1804. Henry Bennett, born August 29, 1806. John Chester, born April 30, 1809. Hannah Maria, born February 4, 1812. Samuel W. S., born June 20, 1814. Milicent Parthenia, born December 24, 1816. George Frederick, born February 11, 1820. Mary Augusta, born November 14, 1823. Of the children of Henry and Tabitha Skilton, Mary, who married Elisha Atwood, left a great many more descendants than Avery and Sarah, the only others that lived to adult life and married. Avery Skilton was a comparatively quiet sort of man, and did not have the energy or apparent ability of his father. Sarah, however, who married Richards, (and the family record says has had two children, as to whom I have only information about one, the daughter, Eliza.) was a very remarkable woman and had a remarkable career. She was a sort of prime minister to Jemima Wilkinson, the "Universal Friend;" was her business manager and very capable. She held the titles to the real estate of the fraternity, which, after her death, was in litigation for thirty years, out of which her name and character came with the endorsements of the Courts and of the later historians of Yates county. Her husband died early, and she with a daughter joined Jemima Wilkinson in her efforts to improve society and purify religion. The fraternity was first started in Pennsylvania, but finally moved into Yates County, New York State, where Sarah died November 30, 1793. The later historians vindicate the high purposes of Jemima, and her followers are said to have been of ability and character above the average down to this day.

DOCTOR AVERY JUDD SKILTON, son of James (who married Chloe Steel), son of Avery (who married Parthenia Judd), son of Dr. Henry (who married Tabitha Avery), was born in Watertown, Litchfield Co., Ct., February 1, 1802. Commenced practice in Troy, N. Y., in the year 1826, and died there March 20, 1858. He married Mary Augusta Candee, of New Haven, and Oxford, Ct., March 2, 1828. She was born January 30, 1804, and died in Troy, May 14, 1865. They had nine children, six of whom are still living: James Avery, Mary T., Julius Augustus, Charles Candee, Julia Augusta, Juliette, Augustine, George Steel, Ella Frances, Kitty Josephine,

His professional life was so successful and laborious that he seemed to have crowded the work of sixty into those thirty odd years. He is known, in addition to other regular work, to have assisted at the birth of thirty children in a single month, without having a single night's sleep in that time. In addition to keeping up with the progress of the science of medicine, he did the same in the sciences of botany, mineralogy, geology, conchology, palcontology, and all branches of biology.

He likewise devoted himself to the study of genealogies of many New England families, particularly the Avery, Judd, Steel, Skilton, Candee and related families, conducting a large domestic and foreign correspondence during many years, and making extended personal searches of public and private records. He devoted much time for many years to the work of obtaining Avery geneological records, making extended journeys for that purpose, most of which have been lost since his death. He did not publish, and his papers, letters and family pictures, &c., were destroyed in the great fire of 1862 in Troy, N. Y.; but he was one of the pioneers, had a remarkable faculty for this study, as for many others, and some of the results of his researches and contributions are to be found in the Judd and Steel genealogies, in Cothren's Ancient Woodbury, and in Timlow.

He was a man of thorough New England type, as his ancestry would indicate, of high character, intelligence and professional standards. He had great skill and deep insight, and was in almost everything in advance of his time. Among his virtues were modesty, fidelity to duty, and careful consideration for and attention to the poor and suffering. These received a large share of his time, attention and skill, without regard for reward of any kind, and were never neglected by him. Among his ancestors were the Steels, Judds, and many others among the pioneer settlers of Wethersfield, Windsor and Hartford, Waterbury and Watertown, Ct.

JULIUS A. SKILTON, M. D., A. M., Consul General to Mexico, had a very stirring experience, first as an assistant surgeon in the army, and later as medical director of the cavalry in the Gulf Department, in which capacity he accompanied the Red River expedition, the expedition against Mobile, and the subsequent expedition into Alabama and Georgia. He was in Vera Cruz soon after the close of the Rebellion when the French were being bombarded by the Mexicans, and was the medical officer of the guard which protected President Juarez and family on their way to Mexico City after the execution of Maximilian. Later he had charge of Maximilian's effects and of the exhumation of his body and the preparation for its shipment to Europe. In both these fields of activity he had remarkable experiences, and the Consul Generalship in Mexico was created under the Grant administration and given to him in recognition of especially valuable services.

LIEUTENANT PARKE AVERY was forty years old at the time of the battle. At that time he resided on the farm given him by his father, now owned and occupied by Mr. Hempstead, on the old turnpike road to Mystic, near the ancient gristmill known in the town records as Dunbar's mill, which is still there on the bank of the stream and is still actively grinding bags of Indian corn into meal for its customers.

When the Lieutenant entered the fort on the morning of the battle he took with him his eldest son, Thomas, still in his 'teens, who in the engagement fell dead at his side, at the very moment he was cheering him on to "do his duty." He was himself most severely wounded in the head and body—more severely it is believed than any other one who survived. He was left among the slain by the enemy, but finally recovered and lived forty years afterwards. The wound in his head was inflicted by a bayonet, as if thrust downward from above, and probably in a hand to hand conflict with one of the enemy who had scaled the wall. It took the eye entirely out, broke in the eyebrow, and left a cavity up and down in the forehead nearly an inch in depth.

When President Monroe, himself a colonel in the war, visited Fort Griswold in 1817, he had a reception of all the old survivors of that battle inside the ramparts, and gave them a cordial greeting. Parke Avery and his brother Ebenezer were there. As the former was introduced, the President with a tear trembling in his eye, placed his finger along the cavity over the eyeless socket of the veteran, then nearly eighty years old, and said: "This looks like the crossing of steel," and then remarked, "it is not often that contending forces come to so close quarters."

Lieutenant Parke was so proud of his boy who had so nobly died by his side in the fight, that he changed the name of his youngest son, then just out of the cradle, from Silas Dean to Thomas, that the name of his brave boy might continue in his family. A few years after the war he moved to the old Avery mansion on Birch Plains, which had been occupied by his ancestors for five generations, and there later in life he was faithfully cared for by his son, Youngs Avery, until his death, in the year 1820.

He was a man of more than ordinary intelligence and had a faculty of enlivening his conversation with genuine wit and humor. While his friends were carrying him on their shoulders across the old Indian field, southeast of the fort, beyond the cemetery and through Dark Hollow to the old family mansion beyond, at the head of the plains, one of them called for an additional bandage for the head to prevent his brains from running out, when another facetiously remarked: "The Lieutenant might lose half his brains and then have more than most of us can boast of."

Up to the time of his death, he was in receipt of a small pension from the government—paid to him semi-annually. He had an old widowed aunt who lived at the top of the river bank, in the valley of the Poquonoc, for whom he had much affection, and to whom he gave a moiety of his pension in consideration that her little homestead there should fall to him or his heirs at the time of her death. The transaction grew out of a desire on his part to keep her in possession of a little ready money while she lived, and from no expectation of making a speculation, for a worthy woman of the olden time was Aunt Thankful Avery, who had raised a family of no less than thirteen children, and lived herself to be a hundred years old! Twice a year, when the pension was paid, the old lady promptly put in an appearance for her stipend. On one of her last calls the old Lieutenant congratulated her upon her long life, but as soon as she had left he turned to his son, and with a shrug of the shoulder and a twinkle in his solitary eye, remarked: "Well, Youngs, I do believe that is the poorest speculation I ever made in my life."

One of his great grandsons, who as a boy from eight to ten years old, knew the veteran well in the last years of his life, says, "If there ever was a true patriot he was one." Up to the end of his life he took special delight in denouncing the tories and those who sold supplies to the British during the war, sometimes pointing them out to his great grandchildren as with the finger of scorn.

When the British fleet bombarded Stonington Point, in 1814, it was almost impossible to keep the old gentleman at home, although at the time more than seventy years of age. On one occasion he hobbled away with his cane towards the Point, ten or twelve miles distant, and it was with great difficulty that he could be persuaded to return. He said he knew the British would be whipped; he could not do much himself, but he wanted at least to get as far as the top of Fort Hill, where he could see it done

JASPER AVERY, brother of Lieutenant Parke Avery, was slain in the fort. He resided with his family at the house near High Rock, two or three hundred rods southwest of the old Avery mansion on Birch Plains, which his father, Capt. Parke Avery, had given him, and which is now occupied by Mr. Crane. He rushed off through Dark Hollow to the forts on hearing the alarm guns on the day of the battle, and as a corpse was carried back upon the shoulders of his neighbors the next morning.

EBENEZER AVERY, brother of Lieutenant Parke Avery, resided with his young family in the house on the ferry bank built for him by his father, Capt. Parke Avery, which is now owned and occupied by Simon Huntington, at the corner of Main and Latham streets. He rushed into the fort early in the morning and took an active part in preparation for the battle. He was severely wounded in the conflict by a shot or bayonet wound in the shoulder, which cut the cords of his neck and rendered him so senseless that he was left among the slain. He lived many years afterwards and worked at his trade (that of a tailor) in a room of his own dwelling-house. He and his brother Parke were at the reception given to the veterans of Groton Heights, within the walls of the old fort, by President Monroe, when on a visit to the spot in 1817.

It was to his house, at the foot of the Heights, that the wounded were taken after the battle, and where many of the dead and dying were identified by their relatives and friends. It is said that the bloodstains on the floors were to be seen for years, for the old patriot would not consent that they should be washed out.

SIMEON AVERY was appointed January 1, 1778, First Lieutenant in the Fifth Company, Capt. Eliphalet Homes, First Connecticut Regiment, Colonel Josiah Starr, and that he was then "doing adjutant's duty." On May 13, 1778, he took the oath of allegiance at Valley Forge, as Second Lieutenant. The oath was required by resolve of Congress, February 3, 1778. This oath is preserved in the archives.

On August 25, 1782, according to an arrangement of the officers of the Connecticut line, Avery appears as fourteenth in the list of Lieutenants, and as attached to the Fifth Regiment. November 19, 1782, by a resolve of Congress, new regulations for the army were authorized and directed, which resulted in a new arrangement. In pursuance of this, a list was prepared from which it appears that certain officers were obliged to retire, and others, who by rank were entitled to remain in service, had retired by exchanging with junior officers previous to the promulgation of the resolution of November 19. In this last category Simeon Avery appears.

The First Regiment of the Connecticut line was enlisted mainly in New London County. This regiment was formed after January 1, 1777 ; their rendezvous was at New London. Jedediah Huntington, of Norwich, was Colonel, and Samuel Prentice, of Stonington, was Lieutenant-Colonel. Simeon Avery enlisted in the Stonington and Groton company which joined this regiment. He was elected Ensign January 1, 1777; was promoted to Second Lieutenant January 1, 1778, and on November 15, was elected First Lieutenant, and was then appointed Adjutant of the regiment, and continued as such to 1781.

He took the field in the spring of 1777, at Peckskill, N.Y., and remained there in camp until ordered, under General McDowgall, to Washington's army in September, 1777. Engaged on the left flank at the battle of Germantown, October 4, and suffered some losses in killed, wounded and prisoners. Wintered at Valley Forge in Huntington's Brigade—the winter of 1777-8. They were present and participated in the battle of Monmouth, June 28, 1778. From there they came to White Plains, N. Y., in Huntington's Brigade, and remained there until ordered into winter quarters with the Connecticut division at the town of Reading, Ct., where they remained during the winter of 1778-9. During the year 1779, they remained on the east side of the Hudson River, and in repelling General Tryon's invasion, Captain Selden's light company was detached to Meig's light infantry; were present at the capture of Stony Point, July 15, 1779; wintered in Morristown huts, in the winter of 1779 and 1780, and served along the Hudson through the year 1780, and wintered at Camp Connecticut, above the Robinson House, and were consolidated in new regiments and served from 1781 to 1783.

Four years an Adjutant in one of the best Connecticut Regiments, and having so distinguished himself at Germantown, Monmouth, and endured the hardships of Valley Forge and at Stony Point so as to attract the particular notice of Washington, and at his solicitation was appointed his aid.

He represented the Worcester District in Congress, six years, from 1863 to 1869. He has written two books, "The Pre-Historic Nations" and "Ancient America," which have been successfully published by Harper & Brothers.

In connection with Reverend William Clift, he compiled and published the "Denison Genealogy," and issued it in 1881. This is a large and very valuable book of 424 pages.

He was connected with Mr. Clift in procuring the data for this volume, and from 1867 to his death, was constantly on the look-out for material. After the Denison volume was published, he copied 301 families out of Mr. Clift's books, in a neat round hand, well fitted for the compositor. This collection of family records was invaluable to this work, but as a compilation, was of no value, in consequence of so much lacking material. This could not be supplied without great effort, and in many places is still in a chaotic state. This will easily be seen by what follows, and illustrates the difficulty of compiling such a vast work. A house cannot be built until the materials are gathered. In his work he was generally accurate, but was led into errors by others who had not sufficient data to determine the truth.

EBENEZER, 3d, was a soldier of the revolution, and Edwin A. Fitch says that he was one of the company to remove the specie from Boston to Philadelphia. "I have often heard him rehearse the story of that trip. It was in the winter season, and they started with the treasure on sleds drawn by oxen. Before their arrival at their destination, their shoes became worn through to the ground, and with frozen and bleeding feet they were compelled to trudge on to the end." He was once elected as representative to the State Legislature of Connecticut.

NATHAN AVERY was born at Groton, Ct. In March, 1776, he enlisted at Groton for nine months under Captain Edward Mott, who being promoted to Major in June, was succeeded by Captain Oliver Coit, promoted from Lieutenant. The company was stationed at Fort Griswold, in Groton, Ct., until September, when it was ordered to West Chester, N. Y., in the command of Major John Ely, and he (Nathan Avery) was in the battle of White Plains, October 28, 1776, and discharged at North Castle, N. Y., late in November, 1776. He also served three months, from September, 1779, at Fort Trumbull, in New London, Ct., in command of Col. Wells. After this he served two tours, each of about three months' duration, one of which terminated when Col. Ledyard was killed, September 6, 1781, but he could not furnish fuller details on account of age and illness, which had impaired his memory. These items were, of course, furnished by him in his application for pension, as also the following: Born March 31, 1759, in Groton, Ct., where he resided till after the war, when he removed to Orange Co., Vt., successively residing therein at Fairlee, Bradford and Newbury, locating at the latter place in 1796, and residing there till his death, in 1841. He applied for pension in June, 1832. He was the only one of the name who was in Fort Griswold who escaped death, wounds or capture.

 born February 9, 1770, d. y. Abigail, born September, 1772,
 d. y. Lydia, born July 10, 1775.

JOHN HURLBUT was born in Groton, Ct., March 12, 1730. In the movements which immediately preceded the Revolution he was associated with Col. Ledyard and several others in the town, as a committee of correspondence.

Deacon Hurlbut visited the Susquehanna Valley as early as May, 1773, having bought a right in the Connecticut "Susquehanna Company." Selling his farm in Groton in the summer of 1777, he, in the spring of 1778, with wife and children, with two wagons, horses, cattle, sheep and swine, left his late home in New England, for the Connecticut colony on the Susquehanna. Detained on the way by sickness they reached their destination in November, 1779. Deacon Hurlbut was a member of the Connecticut Assembly from Wyoming in 1779, 1780 and 1781. In the absence of a clergyman in Wyoming, he frequently officiated by preaching a sermon.

Of Mrs. Hurlbut, she is said to have been "of great excellence of character, a meek and devoted Christian." There is evidence, too, that her patriotism was no less than that of her husband, for it is told that she first proposed to send their two oldest sons (one aged 19 and the other 16) to aid in their country's necessities. She survived her husband many years.

GARDINER AVERY was born in Preston, Ct., in 1752. He and his two brothers were Revolutionary soldiers, and were among the first who marched to Roxbury, Mass., in 1775, where he remained until the British left Boston, when he went to New York, where he remained until the close of 1776. He enlisted in 1776 ; served one year as a private under Capt. Ball and Colonel Larnet, from Massachusetts ; was in the battle at Chester. At the age of sixty-six, on April 15, 1818, from Oneida Co., N. Y., he made a successful application for a pension. He was a farmer in Monson, where all his children were born. In 1810, he removed to Sauquoit, Oneida Co., N. Y. (then called Paris), where he died December 28, 1831, aged 81, and where his wife died fifteen hours before him, December 27, 1831. They were buried December 29, in the same grave. They lived in wedlock fifty-nine years, and were warm-hearted, happy Christians. T. G. A.

UNCLE DAVID AVERY'S STORY.

I was born in Poquonoc, Ct., in the year 1779. In 1795, I started for the western part of the State of New York, commonly called the Genesees. I came, in company with Hezekiah Avery and wife, Daniel Avery and wife, Ebenezer Avery and wife, Dudley Avery and wife, and several young men. Nathaniel Gallop and wife came with us to Albany, and stopped there.

We came on a sloop, owned and commanded by Amos Avery. One of the young men had a violin, and when we bade farewell to Groton Bank, we left under the sounds of music. A great crowd of relatives and friends stood on the bank to bid us farewell, and long gazed upon us, as we sailed down the Thames into Long Island Sound. At the lighthouse we took on board another family, named Babcock.

We had not been in the Sound more than fifteen minutes when there came up a strong southeaster, and every lady on board was seasick. We ran all day under close-reefed sails, and at night anchored in a bay under the lee of Long Island, the ladies all going on shore to a house. In the morning we again spread sail for New York, and arrived there on the third day. On the following day, against a head-wind, we started up the Hudson for Albany. Day after day, during flood-tide, we beat up the river, and, as the ebb came, we dropped anchor. To while away the time, the young folks often danced on deck, to the music of young Smith's violin. Sometimes we went on shore. Near Albany we ran on the rocks, knocking every one down, but finally got off without injury. On the sixteenth day from New York we arrived at Albany, a trip now made by rail in five hours.

At Albany we had our goods placed on hired wagons and transported a few miles across to Schenectady, on the Mohawk, where each family bought a batteux and started up that river. In passing the rapids called "Old Knock 'em Stiff," we had great difficulty, and came near capsizing some of the boats, but finally got to Little Falls, Mrs. Babcock having died on the passage. At that place we had our boats and effects hauled in wagons round the Falls, and put in the river above, the distance being about a mile.

Our next point was Fort Schuyler (now Utica), where we found two log houses in a dense forest; thence moved on to Fort Stanwix (now Rome), the head of canoe navigation. From there we hired our goods and boats hauled through a dense wilderness, thirty miles, to the mouth of Wood Creek, on the Oneida lake, there not being a house in the whole distance. Next morning we converted our tents into sails and started the little fleet across the lake, which was very rough, but we got safely across to Fort Brewerton, tarried a little, and continued to Three River Point, thence up Seneca River to Cayuga Lake, and up to our destination, where Aurora stands, having been forty days on our journey, which is now performed by rail via Albany, Hartford, and Norwich, in about twelve hours.

My brother, Ben Avery, and I worked for hire that summer, and in the fall, or early winter, in company with Capt. Daniel Avery and others, with our packs on our backs, started back on foot for Groton, New London county. I was lame from a cut, and suffered much. From Oneida Castle for nine miles there was not a house, and the snow was knee-deep, so we travelled in Indian file, there being seven or eight of us.

In the following spring my father moved out by the same route we had taken.

In 1808 I returned again to Groton and married my present wife and cousin, Fanny, a daughter of Colonel Ebenezer Avery, whose father, also named Ebenezer, was one of the nine Avery martyrs who fell at Fort Griswold, on Groton Heights, in 1781.

When married I bought a chaise, and came back in rather better style than when we moved out, thirteen years before. In conclusion, I have lived ever since 1796 on the same piece of land then entered, 17 miles south of Auburn, on the Poplar Ridge road.—Taken from the lips of David Avery, by Mrs. C. B. Sabin, No. 1531, and printed in the New York Evangelist, 1870.

DANIEL AVERY, M C., was but 15 years old when his father was slain in Fort Griswold, and being the eldest son, was by necessity compelled to be leader. What his career was until 1794 I have never learned. Sometime in 1794 he visited Aurora, Onondaga County, N. Y., (now Cayuga,) and purchased land and made arrangements for clearing some land and erecting buildings for the accommodation of those who were to follow. He emigrated in the spring of 1795 (see "Uncle David's Story") with his family, and at once took an active part in the new settlement. This land, originally devoted to the "Soldiers of the Revolution," was surveyed in 1789, and drawn by ballot by the commissioners in 1790, so that the settlement could not have been in a very advanced state. He made purchases in different places in the county, and selected his lands with good judgment, so that he accumulated a handsome fortune. He was one of the principal men in that region, and without becoming a politician, in its present signification, was the favorite and leading man in several counties. He represented the 14th District of the State in the twelfth Congress, the 20th in the thirteenth and one session in the fourteenth. These districts comprised several counties at that time, when there were only eighteen Congressmen in the whole State—just what proportion of the State I cannot determine. He was the first man to vote for the resolution declaring war with Great Britain, and the only man in the New York delegation. He was one of the Commissioners of the Land Office at Albany for twenty years, and in various ways contributed to the growth of the country, and particularly the village of Aurora, so that he was considered by his neighbors as the principal founder of the village. He was a man of great energy, great resources, and wonderfully successful in most of his undertakings.

DOCTOR DUDLEY AVERY was born in Groton, Ct., and I know nothing of him until 1794. He visited Aurora early enough, so that in November he was considered a citizen of the State, as land was deeded to him as being of this place (Aurora). In 1795, he and his family emigrated with the colony (see "Uncle David's Story"). He probably had the management of clearing the lands and building houses for those who were to follow in the spring of 1795. July 5, 1798, he was appointed by Abiatha Hull, sheriff of Onondaga County, as his deputy. This was no hollow honor; it meant more than appears on the surface. Onondaga County then embraced all of the "Military Tract," or a territory twice as large as the whole State of Rhode Island, and the amount of miles of travel necessary for a deputy to perform his duties, was well up in the thousands.

Beside his duties being arduous, they were somewhat responsible. He was entrusted with the ballots cast for Congressmen in the general election of 1796, and carried them to Albany and delivered them to Lewis A. Scott, Secretary of State, January 2, 1797. A journey from Aurora or Auburn to Albany, in that season of the year, was no trifling affair, for the streams were not bridged nor the waters navigable. In 1804, after the death of his wife, he returned to Groton, studied medicine, was admitted to practice medicine and surgery and started west, seeking for a place to settle.

He located for a time in Cincinnati, and finally removed to Baton Rouge, La., whilst that portion of Louisiana was still claimed by the Spanish government, and was one of the leaders in the attack on the Spanish forces at Baton Rouge, capturing their fort and putting an end to Spanish dominion in Louisiana. Here he had a very successful practice and accumulated quite a fortune. He became a leader, and was a member of the State Legislature in 1814-15. He acted as a surgeon at all the battles and skirmishes around New Orleans, but if he did much at the final battle, he must have practiced on the enemy. At the close of the war commerce was revived, and he built a vessel individually and with the intention of opening up a trade with New York. On a trial trip he died of Yellow fever on the coast of Cuba, in 1816.

RUFUS AVERY'S NARRATIVE.

As I belonged to the garrison at Fort Griswold when Benedict Arnold's army came to New London and Groton, on the sixth of September, 1781, and made their attack on both places, I had every opportunity to know all the movements through the day and time of the battle. I am requested to give a particular account of the conduct of the enemy. I had charge of the garrison the night before the enemy appeared anywhere near us, or were expected by any one at that time to trouble us. But about three o'clock in the morning, as soon as I had daylight so as to see the fleet, it appeared a short distance below the lighthouse. The fleet consisted of thirty-two vessels in number, —ships, brigs, schooners, and sloops. I immediately sent word to Capt. William Latham, who commanded the said fort, and who was not far distant. He very soon came to the fort and saw the enemy's fleet, and immediately sent a notice to Col. William

Ledyard, who was commander of the harbor, Fort Griswold, and Fort Trumbull. He soon arrived at the garrison, saw the fleet, then ordered two large guns to be loaded with heavy charges of good powder, &c. Capt. William Latham took charge of one gun that was discharged at the northeast part of the fort, and I took charge of the gun on the west side of the fort, so as to give a "larum" to the country in the best manner that it could be done. We discharged then regular "larums." Two guns was the regular "larum," but the enemy understood that, and they discharged a third gun similar to ours and timed it alike, which broke our alarm, which discouraged our troops coming to our assistance. Col. William Ledyard immediately sent out two expresses, one from each fort, to call on every captain of a militia company of men to hurry them into our relief. But not many came to our assistance. Their excuse was that they supposed it to be only a false alarm. The discharge of the third gun by the enemy entirely changed the alarm. It was customary, when there was a good prize brought into the harbor, or on the receipt of any good news, to rejoice by discharging three cannon, and this the enemy understood. They landed eight hundred officers and men, and some horses and large guns and carriages on the beach at Eastern Point, Groton side of the river, about eight o'clock in the morning, and on the New London side of the river, below the lighthouse on the beach, seven hundred officers and men at the same time. The army on the Groton side was divided into two divisions, about four hundred in each division. Col. Eyre took command of the division southeast of the fort, about one hundred and thirty rods from the fort, behind a ledge of rocks. Major Montgomery took command of his division, about one hundred and fifty rods from the fort, behind a high hill of land. The army on New London side of the river found better and more accommodating marching land than on the Groton side, and as soon as they got against Fort Trumbull they separated into two divisions: one went on to the town of New London, and plundered and set fire to the shipping and buildings, and the other division marched directly down to Fort Trumbull. Capt. Shapley, who commanded the fort, saw that he was likely to be overpowered by the enemy, spiked up the cannon, and embarked on board his boats, which were prepared for him and his men if wanted. But the enemy were so quick upon him that before he and his small company could get out of gunshot in their boats a number of his men got badly wounded. Those who were able to get to Fort Griswold reached there, and most of them were slain. Col. Eyre and Maj. Montgomery had their divisions stationed about nine o'clock in the morning. As soon as they appeared in sight we gave a number of shots at them, but they would endeavor to disappear immediately. About ten o'clock in the forenoon they sent their flag to demand of Col. Ledyard the surrender of the fort. The party with the flag approached within about forty rods of the fort, and we discharged a musket ball before them, and brought them to a stand. Col. Ledyard called a council of war to take the minds of his fellow officers and friends as to what was to be done. They agreed to send a flag to meet theirs, and chose Capt. Elijah Avery, Capt. Amos Stanton, and Capt. John Williams. They immediately met the British flag, and received a demand to give up the fort to them. Our flag soon returned with the summons, which was to surrender the fort to them. Inquiry was made of the council as to what must be done, and the answer was sent to the British flag that the fort would not be given up. Their flag went back to Col. Eyre's division, and soon returned to within seventy rods of the fort, when they were met again by our flag, which brought back to Col. Ledyard the demand if they had to take the fort by storm they should put martial law in force; that is, whom they did not kill with balls should be put to death with sword and bayonet. Our flag went to the British flag with Col. Ledyard's answer that he should not give up the fort to them, let the consequence be what it might. While the flags were passing between us we were exchanging shots with the British at Fort Trumbull, of which they had got possession of said fort before the commencement of the battle at Fort Griswold. We could have a shot into Fort Trumbull among the enemy without difficulty, but they could not raise a shot so high as to come into Fort Griswold. Having obtained possession of our good powder and shot left by Capt. Shapley in the fort, they used it against us.

About eleven o'clock in the forenoon the enemy found out what we were determined to do. Both divisions started; that of Col. Eyre came on in solid column. As soon as he got on level ground we were prepared to salute them with a gun that took in an eighteen-pound ball, but was then loaded with two bags of grape shot. Capt. Elias Henry Halsey directed the gun, and took aim at the enemy. He had practiced on board of privateers, and he did his duty well. I was present with him and others near the gun, and when the shot struck among the enemy, it cleared a wide space in their solid column. It was reported on good authority that about twenty men were killed and wounded by that charge of grape shot. As soon as the enemy's column was broken by their loss of officers and men, they scattered and trailed their arms, and came on with a quick march and oblique step toward the fort, inclining to the west. During this time we hove cannon and musket shot among the enemy. Col. Eyre's division came up to the south side and west side of the fort, where he was mortally wounded. Major Montgomery, who started with his division at the same time that Eyre did to come to the fort in solid column, inclined to the north, until they got east of the redoubt or battery, which is east of the fort, when a large number of them came very quick into the battery. Our officers threw a heavy charge of grape shot among them, which destroyed a large number. They then started for the fort, a part of them in platoons, discharging their guns as they advanced, while some scattering officers and soldiers came 'round to the east and north part of the fort. As soon as the enemy got 'round the fort one man attempted to open the gate. He lost his life. There was hard fighting some time before the second man made the trial to open the gate, which he did. Our little number of one hundred and fifty-five officers and soldiers, most of whom were volunteers when the battle began, were soon overpowered. Then there was no block-house on the parade, as there is now, and the enemy had every opportunity to kill and wound almost every man in the fort. When they had overpowered us and driven us from our stations at the breastwork of the fort, Col. Wm. Ledyard, seeing what few officers and men he had left to do any more fighting, they quit their posts, and went on the open parade in the fort, where the enemy had every opportunity to massacre us. There were about six of the enemy to one of us. The enemy mounted the parapet seemingly all as one, swung their hats around once, and discharged their guns, and those they did not kill with ball they meant to kill with the bayonet. I was on the west side of the fort, with Capt. Edward Latham and Mr. Christopher Latham, on the platform; had a full sight of the enemy's conduct, and within five feet of these two men. I had at that time a ball and bayonet hole in my coat. As soon as the enemy discharged their guns they knocked down the two men before mentioned with the brith of their guns, and put their bayonets into them, but did not quite kill them. By this time, Major Montgomery's division, then under the command of Capt. Bromfield (the other gates having been unbolted by one of the men), marched in through the gates, and formed a solid column. At this time I left my station on the west side of the fort, and went across the south part of the parade towards the south end of the barrack. Col. Wm. Ledyard was on the parade, marching towards the enemy under Capt. Bromfield, raising and lowering his sword. He was then about six or eight feet from the British officer. I turned my eyes from Ledyard and stepped up to the door of the barrack, and saw the enemy discharging their guns through the windows. I turned myself immediately about, and the enemy had executed Col. Ledyard, in less time than one minnte after I saw him. The column then continued marching toward the south end of the parade. I could do no better than to pass across the parade before the enemy's column, as they discharged the volleys of three platoons, the fire of which I went through. I believe there was not less than five or six hundred men of the enemy on the parade in the fort. They killed and wounded nearly every man in the fort as quick as they could, which was done in about one minute. I expected my time would come with the rest. One mad-looking fellow put his bayonet to my side, and swore, "Bejasus, he would skipper me." I looked him very earnestly in the face and eyes, and asked for mercy and to spare my life. He attempted three times to put the bayonet in me, but I must say I believe God forbade him, for I was completely in his power, as well as others that was present with the enemy. The enemy at the same time massacred Lieut. Enoch Stanton within four or five feet of me. A platoon of about ten men marched up near where I stood, where two larger outer doors to the magazine made a space wide enough for ten men to stand in one rank. They discharged their guns into the magazine among the dead and wounded, and some well ones, and some they killed and wounded. That platoon fell back, and another platoon came forward to discharge their guns into the outer part of the magazine, where the others did. As they made ready to fire, Capt. Bromfield came suddenly 'round the corner of the magazine, and very quickly raised his sword, exclaiming, "Stop firing! You'll send us all to hell together!" Their language was bad as well as their conduct. I was near him when he spoke. Bromfield knew there must be, of course, much powder scattered about the magazine, and a great quantity deposited there, but I expect the reason it did not take fire was that there was so much human blood to put it out. They did not bayonet many after they ceased firing their guns. I was amongst them all the time, and they very soon left off killing, and then went stripping and robbing the dead and wounded, and also those that were not wounded. Then they ordered each one of us to march out to the northeast part of the parade, and those that could not go themselves, from their wounds, were to be helped by those who were well. Mr. Samuel Edgecomb, jr., and myself were ordered to take Ensign Charles Eldredge out of the magazine. He was a very large, heavy man, who had been shot in the knee-joint. We poor prisoners were taken out on the parade, about two rods from the gates of the fort, and every man ordered to sit down immediately, and if not obeyed at once the bayonet was to be put into him. The battle was then finished, which was about one o'clock in the afternoon; the enemy began to take care of their dead and wounded. The first thing they did was to take off six of the outer doors of the barrack, and with four men to a door would bring in one man at a time on each door. There were twenty-four men at work about two hours as fast as they could walk and deposit them on the west side of the parade in the fort, where it was the most comfortable place they could find, while we poor prisoners were put in the most uncomfortable spot on the parade, in the fort, where the sun shone down so very warm on us that it made us feel more unhappy. Some of the wounded men lay dying. Capt. Youngs Ledyard and Capt. Nathan Moore were among the number. I sat on the ground with the other prisoners, and these two fine men lay on the ground by me, Ledyard's head on one thigh, and Moore's head on the other.

They both died that night. While I was with them they had their reason, and requested water for their thirst. I asked of the enemy water for my brother prisoners to drink, as well as for myself. They granted my request. The well was within two rods of us. I watched them when they brought the water to me for us to drink, to see that they did not put anything in it to poison us; for they had repeatedly said that we must die before the sun went down, because that was in the summons sent to Col. Wm. Ledyard that those who were not killed by the musket-ball should die by the sword and bayonet. But happy for us that were alive, they did not offer to hurt any one man, and they said that was a falsehood. They kept us on the ground in the garrison about two hours after the battle was over, and then ordered every man who was able to walk to rise up immediately. Sentries with loaded guns and fixed bayonets were placed around us, with orders to shoot or bayonet any one that did not obey the officer. I was obliged to leave two dying men who were resting on me as they lay on the ground beside me. We marched down on the bank by the river so as to be ready to embark to go on board the British fleet. Then, about thirty of us, every man was ordered to sit down, and, as at other times, were surrounded with sentries. Capt. Bromfield came and took the names of the wounded that were able to march down with us. I sat where I had a fair view of the enemy's conduct. The sun was about half an hour high, and they were setting fire to the buildings, and bringing down plunder by us as we were placed at the lower part of the village. At the same time a large number of the enemy between us and the fort were getting ready to quit the ground. They loaded up our very large, heavy ammunition wagon, that belonged to the fort, with the wounded men who could not go themselves, and about twenty of the soldiers drew it out of the fort and brought it to the brow of the hill on which the fort stood, which was very steep, and about thirty rods distant. As soon as the enemy began to move the wagon down the hill, they began to put themselves in a position to hold it back with all their power. They found it too much for them to do; they released their hold on the wagon as quickly as possible, to prevent being run over by the wagon themselves, leaving it to run down the hill with great speed. It ran about twelve rods to a large apple-tree stump, and both shafts of the wagon struck very hard, and hurt the wounded men very much. A great number of the enemy were near where the wagon stopped, and they immediately ran to the wagon, and brought that and the wounded men by where we prisoners were sitting on the ground, and deposited them in the house near by, that belonged to Ensign Ebenezer Avery, who was one that was in the wagon when it started down the hill. Some of the enemy had set fire to the house before the wounded prisoners were placed in it, but the fire was put out by some of the others. Capt. Bromfield paroled the wounded men who were left, and took Ebenezer Ledyard, Esq., as a hostage for them left on parole, to see them forthcoming, if called for. By this time the enemy's boats came up to the shore near where we prisoners were. The officer spoke with a doleful sound: "Come, you rebels, go on board the boats." That touched my feelings more than anything that passed that day. I realized that I should have to leave my dear wife and my good neighbors and friends, and also my native land, and suffer with cold and hunger, as I was in the power of a cruel foe or enemy; but I was still in the hands of a higher power, which was a great consolation for me, for I am sensible that God has preserved my life through many hardships, and when in danger of losing my life many times in the wars, etc. When we prisoners had marched down to the shore, the boats that were to receive us on board were kept off where the water was about knee-deep, and we were marched down in two ranks, one on each side of the boat. The officer that had the command very harshly ordered us to "get on board immediately." There were about twelve prisoners in a boat. They rowed us down to an armed sloop, commanded by one Capt. Thomas, as they called him, a refugee tory, who lay with his vessel within the fleet. As soon as they put us on board the sloop they shut us down in the hold of the vessel, where they had a fire for cooking, which made it very hot and smoky. They stopped up the hatchway, making it so close that we had no air to breathe. We begged that they would spare our lives; and they gave us some relief by opening the hatchway, and letting one or two of us on deck at a time during the night, but with sentries with guns and bayonets to watch us. They did not give us anything to eat for about twenty-four hours, and then only a mess made of hogs' brains that they caught on Groton bank, with other plunder. While we were on board Thomas's sloop we had nothing to eat or drink that we could hardly swallow. This continued about three days. There were a number of weapons of war where we were placed in the vessel, and some of the prisoners whispered together that there was an opportunity to make a prize of the sloop. This somehow got to the officers' ears, and they immediately shut us down in the hold of the vessel. I felt very certain that we would have to suffer, for they seemed so enraged that they appeared to have an intention to massacre us all. They soon got ready, and began to call us up on deck, one by one. As I came up they tied my hands behind me with strong rope yarns, binding them together, and winding the rope yarn so hard as to nearly bring my shoulder-blades to touch each other. Then they had a boat come from a fourteen-gun brig commanded by a Capt. Steel, by name and nature. I was ordered to get over the side of the sloop without the use of my hands, the bulwarks above the deck being all of three feet in height, and then I had to fall into the boat that was to carry us to the brig, and was made to lay down under the seats on which the rowers sat; as though we were brutes about to be slaughtered. After we were put on board the brig, we were ordered to stand in one rank beside the gunwale of the vessel, and a spar was placed before us, leaving about one foot space for each man to stand in, with a sentry to nearly every man, with orders to bayonet or shoot anyone who offered to move. They kept us in that situation about two hours with the rain and cold with very thin clothing upon us, and then gave us liberty to go about the main deck, and were obliged to lie on the wet deck without anything to eat or drink for supper. We were on board the brig about four days, and then put on board a ship commanded by Capt. Scott, who appeared very friendly to we prisoners. He took me on the quarter deck with him. He was apparently about sixty years of age, and I remained with him until I was exchanged. Capt. Nathaniel Shaw came down to New York with the American flag after me and four young men that were made prisoners with me, that belonged to the garrison at Fort Griswold, and during the time of the battle behaved like good soldiers. General Mifflin came with the British flag to meet the American flag. I sailed with him about twenty miles in the flag-boat. He asked me some questions, and I gave him little or no information. I told him I was very sorry that they came to destroy so many good men, and cause so much distress to families and desolation to the community, by burning so much valuable property; and further, that I did not believe they would gain any honor by it. He replied, we might thank our own countrymen for it. I told him that I should not. I then turned to the General and said, "Will you answer me a few questions?" "As many as you please, sir," was his reply. I made many enquiries, and asked him how many of the enemy were missing that were engaged in the attack on Groton and New London, remarking, "Sir, I expect you can tell us, as you are the Commissary of the British army." He said, "I find in the returns that there were two hundred and twenty odd missing, but I don't know what became of them." Here I conclude the foregoing particular account from my own personal knowledge of the British attack and capture of Fort Griswold, and their brutal conduct at New London and Groton, and also of their barbarous treatment of the prisoners who fell into their hands.

CALEB AVERY was living near the present location of the navy yard, and entered the fort as a volunteer, and was stationed near the southeast corner of the works. Seeing the treatment accorded to the garrison he fled to the magazine; as he was turning to enter, he saw the killing of Ledyard, as heretofore described. He was not wounded, and was taken a prisoner to New York, and confined in the old Sugar House, but returned home late in the fall, as I learn from his daughter, Mrs. Eliza Avery Williams, now living on Groton Bank.

PETER AVERY resided near the place where the house of George Daboll stands, near Centre Groton. He was about twenty years old at the time of the battle, and was taken to New York as a prisoner of war. He described the sufferings of the prisoners as being very great from hunger, and afterwards spoke of the grateful relish that he enjoyed of a couple of raw potatoes that he purloined, when in prison, from the basket of an old cook, the taste of which he said he at times still realized in his imagination as having been the most delicious morsels he had ever eaten. He became a thrifty farmer and grazier at Centre Groton, when he traded extensively in stock, raising and purchasing horses and mules for the West India trade which was for many years carried on from New London. He spent much of his time in the saddle, traveling over the state in the prosecution of his business, often riding on horseback to Hartford and New Haven. He owned and used the first wagon or chaise that appeared in Groton, and it was regarded as much of a curiosity as the first locomotive engine that ever appeared here. He lived to the age of eighty years, and died at the house more recently owned by Elisha Niles, on the Mystic turnpike.

ROBERT NILES AVERY was a sea captain, sailing to foreign lands. At the age of eighteen years he had full command of a ship. He brought home many rare and beautiful things to adorn his home. He followed the sea for many years, but finally, after his family had long entreated, he quit the sea and settled down at home. He commenced at once to repair and modernize his house, and needing some sand, one day he took a small boy and a team to the sand bank. Not knowing its dangerous condition, the sand caved in on him and killed him, six months after leaving the sea.

PEREZ JONES AVERY was a lawyer of high standing and an advocate of eminence. He possessed by nature the divine afflatus that made him the equal of any in argument of cases before a jury. He was the projector and builder of the Portage Lake and Lake Superior Canal. This canal is situated about half way between Sault St. Mary's Canal and Dubuque. It cuts the base of Keweenaw peninsula, and is about two miles long. It enables vessels to avoid the circuit around the point, and saves many miles of sailing or boating. He developed for his company a vast estate; but his company was very much extended, and the effect of the Chicago fire of 1871 was to place it at the mercy of the Government of the United States at a period when the making of rapid fortunes had corrupted the officers of government, and accustomed them to look favorably upon fraud. The company made the best fight it could, but after fighting until 1877, the Russo-Turkish war defeated their efforts for a loan in London, and left it prostrate at the mercy of their enemies, and the syndicate have realized about forty millions from an estate which they wrung from it at a cost to them of less than two millions.

JONATHAN AVERY SHEPHERD, S. T. D. (AUTOBIOGRAPHY.)

I was born in Brandon, Vt., and was taken by my parents to Brazil, South America, in the autumn of 1821. I was left fatherless, and returned with my widowed mother, in December, 1825. While there I learned to read and speak Portuguese, as well as English. At fourteen, I began to prepare for college with a view to the Baptist ministry, and at eighteen entered Middleburgh College, Vermont. At twenty I entered the Episcopal Church, and commenced to prepare for the Episcopal ministry. I graduated at twenty-two, and at twenty-six was ordained a deacon of the Episcopal Church, in Louisville, Ky., where for a time I was missionary. At twenty-eight, I took priest's orders, and Paris, Ky., was my first parish.

Shelby College, Shelbyville, Ky., about 1840 or 1841, was opened to the Episcopal Church, and I was, in 1841 appointed by the trustees the first professor (too young to be president), yet with the expectation that I was to be the organizer. I felt that I was too young, a graduate of only two years and a half, so I declined. It was subsequently organized with several professors. The president was taken sick, and I was ordered to leave my parish and assist him with his classes (the Rev. Dr. Drane), and in 1844 I followed this president to Wilmington, N. C., to become assistant minister, and in the summer of 1846 took charge of the parish of Scuppernong, N. C., on the Albemarle Sound, southern side, a region known as "Little Dismal Swamp," considerably larger than the "Dismal Swamp" of Virginia, the two being exactly alike—Lake Drummond being in the middle of the "Dismal Swamp" in Virginia, and Lake Scuppernong in the middle of the "Dismal Swamp" in North Carolina.

Within twenty-five yards of this lake I lived seven years. The church, a shell, was built before the Revolutionary war, and in another part of my parish was a ruined chapel where Wesley had preached, a place quite remarkable.

In 1853, St. Andrew's College in Mississippi was left by the headmaster, a Jew, leaving the whole burden on Bishop Green. He wrote, urging me to go to Jackson, Miss., to take the mastership of the college off his hands, and on April 1, I decided to do so. On May 6, 1854, I was married to Evelyn M. Turner, of Baltimore, at Jackson, Miss. In March, 1855, I opened a private school for boys in San Francisco, Cal., and by December it was by far the most select and popular school in that city. In 1858, I returned to the Atlantic side to prepare for a professorship, and to take part in organizing the grand university of the south. Money enough was subscribed to make it one of the grand institutions of the country. But meantime, war mutterings prevented organization, and secession annihilated seven-eighths of the subscriptions. Therefore, in November, 1858, I started a private school for girls in Montgomery, Ala., which developed into a very large ladies' seminary. This was "Hamner Hall." The smallest number of pupils that I had was during "Sherman's raid through Georgia." At that time my school numbered eighty-seven pupils. I sold out and had a vacation of one year.

In the spring of 1866, finding nothing to do, I concluded to build a school, this time for boys, and soon built a three story building above a basement at Ellicott's mills, now Ellicott city, ten miles by road, fifteen miles by rail from Baltimore. School opened in it on September 26, 1866. This was a very thorough school in classics, mathematics, &c. Our advanced boys found no difficulty in any competitive examination, either in classics or the counting room. Even now, after a lapse of more than fifteen years, I sometimes think the requirements which I made as the standard for "excellence" and "gold medal" as almost exclusive. A first grade certificate for two successive years required attendance as follows: Prayers twice daily, three meals, rising, retiring, school call four times daily, study hour at night, church and bible lesson on Sunday; not one absence, or one tardy, or one lesson failure in two years, nor one reproof for anything. In case of sickness, a reasonable time was allowed to "make up." The candidate might attain "excellent," but not the "medal." The school attained only such standard that there was no abatement whatever in the demand for "excellent" graduates:

Our boys were noted for surpassing those of all other schools in or about the "city of schools" (Baltimore) for their superior gentlemanly bearing. Especially noted were they when allowed to accept invitations to a party. How do you think this was effected? Very simply. When they were allowed to go, Mrs. Shepherd gave them an extra good supper, and they were instructed to "eat heartily."

At the party it was the universal comment, "The Clement boys," or "the Shepherd boys are waiting on the ladies," while the other boys were snatching or gormandizing. Our boys rarely ate until all the ladies were through, so they were enabled to give their whole time, and then they were disciplined to seem altogether indifferent. The consequence was in the end, they were especially helped by host and hostess to the best. "St. Clements" was the third and last school I gathered and built.

My churches: First, "Scuppernong," which I left in 1853, a fine cruciform church and very comfortable and commodious. Second, in the Mississippi Forest, near Lake Washington, erected in 1853, a $10,000 brick structure, and very handsome. General Wade Hampton, his brother, and father, were vestrymen. Third, in Santa Rosa, California, a small church enlarged to three times its original size. Churchly in proportions, exceedingly churchly in appearance within and without, and very comfortable. A choir of surpliced boys, colored stoles and altar cloths, for different seasons. White for the great festivals of our Lord, Christmas-tide, Epiphany, and Easter. Purple for Advent-tide and Lent. Red, not for any season, but for days of the martyrs. Green for the neutral season, or doctrinal season, Trinity to Advent.

I am a very careful, painstaking and conscientious ritualist, but not a fancy one. Every iota of my service is symbolical; not fussy, natural, easy, and strictly in harmony with the ancient but not Roman usages of the Church.

PROFESSOR CHARLES AVERY, LL.D., was principal of different academies, at Clinton, Homer, Fairfield, and Belleville, all in New York, and four years (1830-'34) kept a boys' boarding school at Clinton. He graduated at Hamilton College, N. Y., in 1820, and was, from 1834 to 1869, professor of chemistry and natural philosophy in that institution. In 1834-'35, he raised the greater part of fifty thousand dollars for Hamilton College, which he and Dr. Sereno Edwards Dwight, then president of the college, secured as a permanent fund for its maintenance. In 1854-'55, he raised seventy-two thousand dollars during those two years of special effort for the purpose, while at the same time giving, in each year, his regular course of chemical lectures in the college. Of this sum, twenty thousand dollars were devoted, half to the building of the astronomical observatory, and half to the purchase of the fine large telescope in the observatory, having an object-glass of thirteen inches diameter, one of the finest in the country. Two thousand more were expended in building a new chemical laboratory, which, like the observatory and telescope, was a matter wholly of his own origination and procurement. As long as the observatory lasts, now called the Litchfield Observatory, from the generous contribution of thirty thousand dollars for its proper management, by Edwin C. Litchfield, Esq., of Brooklyn, N. Y., the name of Professor Charles Avery, its sole originator and founder, should be gratefully remembered, and it doubtless will be. In 1859, he raised ten thousand dollars in Clinton, and in connection with a newly appointed college commissioner, fourteen thousand more in Utica, for the purposes of a general college fund. He introduced into his department of instruction, for the first time, chemical analysis and agricultural chemistry, and made the chemical equipments of the college, which at his entrance into the professorship amounted literally to nothing, such as to compare favorably with those of the best endowed of the land. He procured also, by direct personal effort, a number of the permanently endowed prizes of the college, as the Clark, Kellogg, and Underwood prizes; and first originated the system of endowed prizes, which are so numerous in that institution, and which are all offshoots of those which he first secured. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and was elected, in 1871, Professor of the Homœopathic College of New York.—From the Strong "Genealogy."

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN AVERY was born in Aurora, Cayuga county, N. Y., December 3, 1801. He graduated from Union college in 1822, after which he studied law at the earnest solicitation of his father, and was admitted to the bar in New York city. The study and practice of law were distasteful to him. His natural mechanical inclination precluded deep interest in any other direction.

His early experience on his father's farm had convinced him that the plows then in use were imperfect—that there was need for improvement in form and in general construction. Determining to see what he could do in both directions, he provided himself with patterns, a pocket furnace (as it was then called), and other apparatus for a small foundry, and went on a coasting vessel from New York city to Richmond, Virginia, where he wished to make his first business venture.

Finding little encouragement in Richmond, he went to Clarksville, Mecklenburg county, Va., where, in company with Caleb H. Richmond, a practical moulder, he opened his foundry in a pine log building, 18 x 20 feet in size, covered with slabs made from the "old fields" pine. To begin with, they bought a single ton of metal. They would not incur debt or solicit credit; attended strictly and energetically to business; lived frugally and soon began to reap their reward in success.

After a few years, the owners of the land on which their foundry was built determining to profit by their success, refused to continue the lease. This obliged the young men to seek a new field for operation, which they found in Milton, Caswell county, N. C. A few years later, the same conditions recurring, they removed to Meadville, Halifax county, Va., where they bought land, built on a larger scale, and settled permanently. During their association, Mr. Avery was the business manager—assisting also in the toilful work of the foundry, at which his more skilled partner assiduously labored. At Meadsville the partnership was ended—kindly and harmoniously—Mr. Avery always cherishing pleasant memories of his first associate in business, which were warmly reciprocated.

On the death of his father, in 1842, Mr. Avery was appointed executor of his estate, and in 1843, sold his Virginia property—foundry, workshop and plantation—to a younger brother, and returned to Aurora.

On April 27, 1844, Mr. Avery was married by Rev. Dr. Nott, of Union College, to Miss Susanna Howes Look, eldest daughter of Mr. Samuel Look, a widely-known farmer of Central New York. A year or two later, he bought and rebuilt the family homestead in the beautiful village on the shore of Cayuga Lake, intending to make it their future home.

In 1846, Mr. Avery furnished his active young nephew, Daniel Humphrey Avery, with plow patterns, other essentials, and a roving commission to go through the southern and southwestern states and select the most eligible place for a plow manufactory. With excellent judgment, the young man chose Louisville as the scene for future operations. After a few months, he felt the need of his uncle's experience, and urged his coming for a short time. Mr. Avery reached Louisville on Christmas day, 1847, intending to stay a few weeks only, but he became so interested in the congenial business which he had once relinquished, that he decided to make Louisville his winter abode. It soon became his permanent home.

The first years of the business yielded small returns, and would to many men have been discouraging. The ignorance of, and prejudice against, cast-iron plows were so general, that for a long time the sale of a single one was an event. Much of the encouragement in those days was similar to that given by Mr. James Hewitt, of Rock Hill, near Louisville, who owned large plantations farther south. He said, "My friend, if you can succeed in introducing your plows you will have fortune enough; but I do not believe you can." The nephew had unbounded confidence in his uncle's wisdom and ability—the uncle never doubted that the excellence and inexpensiveness of their work would, in time, commend it to those who needed it. So they went on hopefully and cheerfully till a satisfactory measure of success crowned their efforts.

The nephew, after a few years, engaged in a successful business in Tuscaloosa, Ala., where he died during the war. Long before the war, Mr. Avery had built a large manufactory at the corner of Fifteenth and Main streets—the nucleus of the future immense establishment. During the war, his business, which had been almost exclusively south, was prostrated, and his buildings were used by the government as a hospital. Through these dark days the cause of the Union was dear to his heart, and he was outspoken in its favor. At one of the times which seemed to him crucial, he determined to raise the “Stars and Stripes” over his buildings. His friends protested against this daring act, assuring him that it would endanger his property and perhaps his life. His uniform reply was, that the time had come when it was a man’s duty to declare his principles. The flag was raised, and no evil result followed.

In 1868, Mr. Avery, with his sons and son-in-law, John C. Coonley, formed a partnership under the style of B. F. Avery & Sons. This relieved him from business care, and gave him an opportunity for a visit to the old world.

Accordingly, with his wife and four of their six children, he went to Europe in 1869, and returned in 1871, having enjoyed, as only one of his nature and cultured tastes could enjoy, what he saw and heard. After his return, he did not again take up the care of business, but lived in quiet happiness with his family, his friends and his books. After 1857, he and his family spent a portion of every summer in Wyoming, N. Y., a place where the reunion of relatives and friends was greatly enjoyed.

Before leaving Aurora, 1847, Mr. Avery united with the Presbyterian church. On going to Louisville, he became a member of Dr. Edward P. Humphrey’s church, and later, a member and an elder in the Eleventh and Walnut street church, which office he held at his death. He was liberal in his religious views, sympathizing with Christians of whatever name, and contributed in aid of other denominations as well as his own.

In person Mr. Avery was of medium height and erect bearing. His hair and flowing beard were white, his face pale, his eyes blue and full of expression. He was dignified, but never austere, his exterior being a reflex of the benevolent spirit within. He was orderly, systematic and scrupulously neat. He did not lose the simple habits acquired in early life. His strict economy never overlooked trifling details. He would not cut the knot in a bit of cord, or waste the paper which it had bound; but untied one and folded the other for future use. He would not fail to pick up a pin or button from the floor or sidewalk. These and other kindred, careful habits, balanced a nature generous to a fault.

His heart was easily touched, and he listened to countless tales of woe. Many are the poor whom he aided—many the man he aided over difficult places—many the youths who owe their beginning in business to him. Nor was his generosity counted only in silver and gold. He had large charity of nature, that beautiful charity which “envieth not,” which “thinketh no evil,” which “rejoiceth in the truth.”

The quality of his truthfulness was rare. It never occurred to his children or to those who knew him, to doubt his slightest word or action. Perfectly straightforward and honest, he detested whatever was false in either. He lived in a crystal atmosphere of perfect frankness and sincerity. His fondness for children was remarkable, and even the youngest yielded to him ready and unquestioned obedience.

In his busy life he never neglected his domestic and social relations. In his home he was the ideal father, affectionate to his own family, and hospitable to all who came under his roof. His mind was stored not only with practical knowledge, available in business, but with the culture that comes of early advantages carefully improved. Art and literature were a delight to him, and he surrounded himself and family with such treasures of both as wealth and refinement enabled him to procure. The flavor of his humor was of the finest, and he enjoyed the bright things of life with keen relish.

His life had been so temperate, abstemious and correct, that no taint of disease could be found, when, on March 3, 1885, at the age of more than fourscore years, in the midst of two generations of descendants, he entered into rest.

On his coffin were laid plain palm leaves. Of him, as truly as of any crusader of old, it may be said that these were emblems of a noble and heroic life, a life of lofty ideas, a life fittingly crowned by the Lord he had served lovingly and long, with the last great victory over the sting of death.

DANIEL DUDLEY AVERY was born April 10, 1810, at Baton Rouge. Bereft of a father's care at the early age of seven years, the foundation of his life was laid by his devoted mother, who devoted herself and her scanty means to the training of her son and infant daughter. She was well qualified for this labor of love by a thorough English education. She developed the fine qualities of his mind, and laid for him the foundation on which was built with years and experience, a character of rare excellence, pronounced for its dignity, its equity and simplicity. The mantle of responsibility seems to have fallen early on these young shoulders, and to have rested there throughout a long life of usefulness and fidelity to the interests of others. He acquired the habit of study at a very early age, and was a close student throughout his life.

At 14 years of age, young Avery was sent to Berlin, Ct., under the care of Rev. Mr. Chase, western missionary, and afterwards Episcopal bishop of Ohio, to prepare for Yale College. Under the Rev. Chas. A. Goodrich (Peter Parley), he entered the class of 1826, and graduated in due course in 1830. A difficulty arose between students and faculty during 1828, which threatened at one time the expulsion of the whole college. The troubles were happily adjusted, and the class of 1830 numbered among its graduates Daniel Dudley Avery. He wrote to his devoted mother, who had anxiously and eagerly looked forward to this day, that he "had passed the examination beyond his utmost expectations." During his college life he passed his vacations in the family of his uncle, Latham Avery, at Groton, Ct., where he matured under the shadow of the great monument raised to commemorate the heroism and devotion to country of nine Averys and their comrades in arms. He here learned to love and revere the name that was, for generations, to give both moral and active support to build up the welfare of this great country. Returning to his native city, he studied law under Thomas Gibbs Morgan, and was admitted to the bar in 1832.

He was eminently successful in his profession, and by close attention to his practice and diligent discharge of his duties, he soon acquired a handsome fortune. He was twice elected to the Legislature from Baton Rouge, and held the office of Prosecuting Attorney for the district. He was also elected and served as District Judge in the same district, which office he resigned in 1862.

To escape the excitement of military circles, in 1862, Judge Avery removed his family from Baton Rouge to his extensive and beautiful sugar estate on Petite Anse, now Avery's Island, where they were not long permitted to remain unmolested, and removed to Texas. Dudley, the eldest son, had enlisted in the army. John, then about sixteen years of age, to occupy and keep him at home, was given an old salt works to develop, which was used by his grandfather during the war with Great Britain, in 1812-'15, which had not been used since. The demand for salt grew daily, and in deepening an old salt well a few feet, John M. Avery discovered a solid mass of rock salt only thirteen feet below the surface. They are now the famous salt mines of Louisiana. As all of the seaports were blockaded, this providential discovery attracted the attention of the whole country. An especial expedition was fitted out by the Federals, in 1863, to capture and destroy these mines, which were of an untold value to the Confederate States. In this connection, it is only right to say that, while Judge Avery exercised absolute control over the sale of the salt, he established a rule that only Confederate currency should be received in payment for it, deeming it the part of patriotism to sustain the public credit, and by his example give others confidence in it! What this meant of self-sacrifice and devotion only those who have lived through that period can understand. Opportunities for extensive speculation were not wanting in the Confederacy, yet here was a man who counted gain as nothing when measured by the weal or welfare of the land he loved so well.

Judge Avery returned from Texas with his family in June, 1865, at the close of the war, to find his home in Baton Rouge despoiled of everything, and his beautiful sugar estate and mining property devastated by an invading army. Yet he was never heard to repine, but accepted with a high courage the inevitable and set himself vigorously to the task of saving the remnant of his fortune. But very soon the strain upon his powerful constitution was manifested and his health steadily declined. During twelve years of such suffering as rarely is the portion of man, he never murmured against the decree of that good Providence that had led and blessed him from a little child at his mother's knee. In 186-, he was confirmed in the Episcopal Church. He died June 10, 1879, on Avery's Island, surrounded by all of his children, who he blessed with his last breath, as his devoted and dutiful children.

During all the years of his early efforts, the years of affluence and influence, the declining years of struggle and disappointment, Judge Avery was sustained, encouraged and most ably assisted by his devoted wife.

She was a rare character, possessed of most gracious manners; her home radiated a hospitality rarely equaled, never excelled. She was his only attendant and most faithful nurse through all the long years of his declining health, and was stricken down in the fulness of health and vigor, March 29, 1879. Judge and Mrs. Avery lie in the same tomb beneath the spreading oaks of Avery's Island, the home so dear to them and their descendants, because so graced by their lives of unselfish devotion to family, friends, and dependents.

DANIEL DUDLEY AVERY.

Lucy Ann, born April 1, 1818, died 1819. Peter, born Aug. 27, 1820, died 1821. John A., born Feb. 21, 1822. Lucy Ann, 2d, born Aug., 1825. Colby C. was a missionary in Koor-distan, Asia, died 1841. Hannah M. married Charles W. Eldridge, Oct. 1, 1848, lives in Hartford, Ct.

HONORABLE JOHN HENRY BROWN was born in Pike county, Missouri, October 29, 1820, ten months before the territory became a state of the Union.

He emigrated to Texas in early youth, and soon entered into the public service, civil and military, and has seen much service, though not seeking official positions. He has been private, sergeant, captain, major, lieutenant-colonel, and colonel. He has represented four different districts in the councils of the state, and served in two constitutional conventions; two terms as mayor of Galveston; as Indian peace commissioner; state commissioner to sell the university lands, and filled various local offices. He has edited papers in Victoria, Indianola, Galveston, Belton, and Dallas, in a period of thirty-eight years. In the years 1865-'66, he was commissioned by the Mexican Government to explore the peninsula of Yucatan and the Huorteca country, interior and under the mountains from Tampico, and to report upon their adaptation to American and European populations. This duty was most fully performed.

Returning to Texas early in 1871, he was again elected to the Legislature of 1872-'73, and in 1875, to the last constitutional convention. In 1882 he was selected as commissioner to select and survey nearly two millions of acres of land for public school purposes, and in 1885, was elected mayor of Dallas for two years.

REVEREND JARED R. AVERY was installed as the seventh pastor of the Congregational church of Groton, Ct., October 9, 1839. It seems highly befitting that a lineal descendant of Captain James Avery, one of the founders of this town, and of this church, should have been chosen to this office. He was born in this place, September 17, 1804; graduated at Williams College in 1830; ordained October 17, 1833, at Auburn, N. Y., where he graduated in Theology. He immediately entered upon an agency for the American Tract Society. In this service he spent two years in the southern states and three in New England. He was married, July 23, 1835, to Mrs. Agnew, formerly Miss Skidmore, of Louisville, Ky. Their children are seven, three of whom have passed away from the earthly living. The beginning of Mr. Avery's ministry here was the opening of a new era, or rather the renewal of the old one. This ministry lasted for twelve years. The dismissal of Mr. Avery was at his own request, and occurred April 15, 1851.—From "A Review of the Congregational Church of Groton, Ct., With Sketches of its Ministers," by Rev. J. A. Woodhull.

Jared Reid, (Rev.) youngest son of 288a-108-25-11-2 and married, July 25, 1835, Mrs. Sarah A. [Mary Eldridge; Agnew, born June 15, 1810, died April 10, 1880, daughter of children : [Paul and Sarah Skidmore;

Mark [gan Fish ; Preston, born Oct. 12, 1797, died July 20, 1849, Burlington, Pa ; children : Lucy Amanda, born Aug. 7, 1827. Eunice Emilie, born Dec., 1828, died Sept. 9, 1869. Isaac, born July 10, 1831, died Aug. 31, 1832. Mary Elizabeth, born Feb. 3, 1833. Harriet Phebe D., born May 25, 1836. Susanna, born Jan. 27, 1838. Henry M., born June 22, 1839. Albert, born April 3, 1841. Wallace, born Aug. 5, 1842. Susan Rebecca, born May 24, 1844. William Fletcher, born Sept. 27, 1845.

REV. MARK PRESTON, who was one of the leaders of pioneer Methodism in Bradford, Sullivan, and other counties of Pennsylvania, married Amanda Avery, in Salem, Pa., Aug. 2d, 1825. Soon after, they moved to West Burlington, Bradford County, Pa., where they lived for many years, and where all their children were born. "The purpose makes the hero," and surely Mark Preston was one. Some of the oldest people of Bradford and adjoining counties love, to-day, to tell of the time when Mark Preston "rode the circuit," of his many acts of kindness, of his wonderful mental powers and executive abilities; his powerful and convincing sermons; and above all, of his grand christian character and influence. In those days the "circuit rider" rode on horse-back, with his saddle bags, through the forest, his path being marked by blazed trees. The voice of the panther was frequently heard, and Mr. Preston, a number of times, escaped the fangs of these ravenous beasts, in so miraculous a manner that people came to look upon him as bearing almost a charmed life. Mr. Preston's abilities were such, that, in another calling he might have amassed wealth, but with him, duty was law. So he toiled on until the age of fifty-two, when he was stricken down with fever, and in a few short days, on July 20, 1849, his labors ended. There is in West Burlington, a quaint old church, more than a century old. Its pulpit and gallery remain just as of yore, and it is still used on special occasions. In this church Mr. Preston preached, and here the whole country, as it were, came to pay to him a last tribute of respect and love; and by its side he was placed to rest, near two of his little ones. Can any of the Avery girls now living understand what Amanda A. Preston and her children had to face, when they found themselves thus bereft? Mr. Preston's possessions had been "a head full of knowledge," an indomitable will, unswerving integrity, and a heart full of goodness, kindness and love to all humanity. So you know, while he bequeathed to his family the influence of all his good, there came with it "keen-edged poverty." The mother was a brave woman. She and her children set about the work before them without a murmur. The oldest child was twenty-two, the youngest two. The four older were girls. The eldest boy was but ten.

AMANDA AVERY in her girlhood had learned the tailor's trade. The three elder girls taught school. So, year after year passed. The little ones, one by one, gaining age and strength to become helpers. The youngest girl, who was and still is, called "Little Sue" by her sisters, because she is much younger than any of them, commenced teaching when she was but thirteen years of age. The path of duty and necessity, though often a very rugged one, is never entirely bereft of sunshine and peace; and so, this family found, after many years of earnest endeavor, that their efforts were crowned with some degree of success. On the 7th of June, 1887, when nearly eighty-five years of age, Amanda A. Preston, the brave, patient, loving mother (at the home of her eldest son, Henry M. Preston, in Sundance, Wyoming Ter.) passed to her rest. As we remember her we can but think, surely, "The sweetest lives are those to duty wed." At the present time there are seven of Amanda A. Preston's children, six grandchildren and one great grandchild living; four children and four grand children having died.

Lucy A., (Mrs. D. P. Richards,) of Wyoming, Delaware, was educated at Wyoming Seminary, Kingston, Pa., and Genesee College, Lima, N. Y. She was well known as a successful teacher in Scranton, Pa., and other places. Married Aug. 6, 1869, D. P. Richards, a representative of one of the oldest families of Wilkes Barre, Pa.

MRS. AMANDA AVERY PRESTON.

Emilie E. was graduated from Miss B. Thurston's Seminary, in Elmira, N. Y., a school which closed in 1864, but was well known for many years throughout Northern Pennsylvania and Southern New York. Emilie was also graduated from Dr. Dio Lewis' school of Physical Culture, in Boston, about 1865. She taught with Miss Thurston for quite a number of years, and was not only a faithful and efficient teacher, but a valued friend of the principal. "Little Sue" was given, while at the seminary, an exercise in rhetoric, under the head of "The Beautiful." She asked for a subject. Miss Thurston promptly replied, "Take you sister Emilie's character. Hers is the most beautiful character I ever knew." Emilie taught in several prominent institutions in New York and Pennsylvania. Her last teaching was done in the Central College for Freedman, in Nashville, Tennessee, where she labored with a truly missionary spirit. She was at one time associated with Miss Nivison in her work at Clifton Springs, New York. Emilie died in Rochester, Minnesota, September 9, 1869. To her younger brothers and sisters, she was a loving inspiration. Her life was full of self-sacrifice and good deeds for others.

Mary E. was graduated, in classical course, from Genesee College (Syracuse University) in 1864 or 1865. Taught in New Albany, Indiana; Elmira, New York, and various other places. She, too, answered the call for teachers at Freedman, and taught for some time in Central College, at Nashville, Tennessee. At one time she went some distance into the country. Her school-house was burned, when, with characteristic enthusiasm and perseverance she taught under a tree, until another house was erected, and through her efforts a church was organized.

Dr. Harriet E. Preston, after a term, put aside her pedagogic honors for the study of medicine. She pursued her studies in New York, Boston and Philadelphia. Was graduated from the Woman's Medical College of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, March, 1868. Most of the time from October, 1868, to July, 1885, she practiced her profession in St. Paul, Minnesota. For the past two years she has been in St. Augustine, Florida. The Doctor occasionally writes for the press.

Henry M. Preston became of age just in time to cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln, in the fall of 1860. In Earlville,

Illinois, August 28, 1861, he enlisted in Company I, 4th Illinois Regiment, Volunteer Cavalry. George J. Sheperdson was captain, and T. Lyle Dickey, colonel. Henry says of himself, "My army life was so tame and common-place, compared with others, that it is hardly worth mentioning." We do not agree with him, however, for his army life was a very active one. He participated in the capture of Fort Henry and Fort Donaldson; also the siege of Corinth and of Coffeyville, and a large number of other engagements. While Grant's army was at Iron Landing, on the Tennessee river, and about to go down, Henry was sick with the measles. The army went on board the boats. The rain was pouring down. The tent was taken down from over him, and he was placed on a baggage wagon and taken to the landing, not able to help himself in the least. One of the hospital boats had no room for him, and the captain of the other would not take him. He was carried to a stateroom on the boat with his company, and so went to the front instead of the rear. Went down the river as far as Savannah, and entered a hospital about a half mile back from the river, and was there during the battle of Pittsburg Landing, which lasted two days. Though very ill, he left his bed to aid in caring for the wounded and dying as they were brought in. Though never wounded, he had many narrow escapes. During an engagement near Coffeyville, which took place just before dark, when his regiment had dismounted and were formed by a rail fence on the upper side of a field, Henry's place being near the corner of the fence, and by the road, he says: "I heard an officer (Colonel, afterward General, Hatch, of the Second Iowa, whose horse had been shot in the action) say, in a quiet tone of voice, "Some of you men fire down the road; there is a squad of them coming up the road." Another man and myself stepped out and fired at them. They took to the fence. I returned to the fence. Soon I became aware that I was pretty much alone; could see but one of our men, and knew it was time to get out of that, feeling impressed that I should be shot; and what I most dreaded was a shot in the back. I was resting on one heel, with my other foot flat on the ground; had shoved a cartridge in my Sharp's carbine, and was reaching for a cap, when a bullet struck the ground under me, cutting the earth between my feet." In Springfield, Ill., November 3, 1864, he was mustered out, his term of service having expired. He hastened home, and on the morning after arriving, cast his second vote for Abraham Lincoln. Although his health had been greatly impaired during his army life, he again enlisted, August 12, 1867, and served as First Sergeant in a company of Militia, which was stationed on the Little Blue river, about two miles south of Alexander, Nebraska, to prevent Indian hostilities. The company was mustered out of service November 14, 1867. While in the Militia he enjoyed his first buffalo hunt, and he flatters himself that he did even better than General Custer on his first buffalo chase. He chased and killed a buffalo on horseback and alone, it taking many a good shot to bring the animal down, while General Custer shot his own horse instead of the buffalo, and walked back to camp with his saddle on his back.

Albert Preston, having just reached the age of twenty-one, in August, 1862, responded to the call for volunteers for nine months, enlisting in Company D., 132d Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. He was made corporal. Chase was captain. This regiment, through a blunder of the officers, was ordered into battle at Antietam, September 16 and 17, where the men were mown down without mercy, before they had even had an opportunity to drill. When Burnside's army was crossing the river to attack the Confederate fortifications at Fredericksburg, Albert was wounded by a fragment of shell in the lower calf of the leg. It was said that the shell that wounded him, killed and wounded five. It is also understood that this regiment charged a rebel battery three times; the last time the Colonel came off with sixteen men, and Albert was one of the sixteen. He was sent to the hospital in Georgetown, and the wounds, of which he had scarcely thought, during that long day's terrible battle, was such that the surgeon wished to amputate the limb, but Albert, promptly and with good reason, too, remarked, "That leg is mine, and when it goes I expect to go with it." The angered surgeon, in opening the wound, cut it across the muscles, and doubtless, for this reason the leg was never after strong. He was transferred to Chestnut Hill Hospital, where he remained until May, 1863. His term of service having expired, he was discharged. Again, in the fall of 1864, he enlisted, this time in the Third Iowa Battery Light Artillery for one year, and was most of the time stationed at Little Rock, Arkansas. He was mustered out in the fall of 1865. Albert was never after well, and died June 20, 1878, of consumption, brought on by the hardships and exposures of war. His only child died a few months before he passed away, and he said, "Select for my little boy a bright, sunny spot; I shall lie with him soon."

Wallace Preston is a machinist of unusual skill. Some five years ago his health failing, he sold out his business in Monticello, Iowa, where he had lived for nearly twenty years, and retired to his farm in Early, Iowa. When just settled in his new home, a tornado swept the building all away, injuring more or less four of the family. Within the last three years Wallace has buried his wife and three children, leaving his youngest only, a boy of sixteen.

"Little Sue" (Mrs. Seamands), now a widow with one child, Lowell Preston Seamands, born October 9, 1878, makes her home with her oldest sister, in Wyoming, Del. She was graduated from the Mansfield State Normal School, of Mansfield, Pa., June 27, 1876, and taught in the same school during the six years following. For two years she was principal of the training department, then for four years had charge of the department of elocution, and was assistant in mathematics. In the fall of 1874 she accepted the position of lady principal and teacher of rhetoric, literature and elocution in Johnson (now Chadwick) College, in the city of Quincy, Ill., which position she filled for two years. She studied elocution under some of the best professors in New York and Philadelphia, and is known as a public reader and elocutionist in several states. She is said to be "an artist of rare gifts and attainments."

We are wondering if any other Avery girl and her family has had a history at all like this. We are thinking, too, what a grand, what a wonderful, re-union there will be, by and by, when the Averys have crossed the "Peaceful River," and passed through the "Beautiful Gates Ajar." Surely they will know each other then, for the mists will all have cleared away.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF REV. HENRY THOMAS AVERY.

I was born 1819, and had such schooling as was to be had at the common schools of that day. I learned the blacksmith's trade, which I have never relinquished entirely. I was converted in the village of Salem, Wayne County, Pa., November 17th, 1837, and soon united with the Methodist church, and was elected superintendent of the sabbath school. I was soon appointed class leader, and on August 11th, 1839, I was licensed to preach, by the quarterly conference of Columbia circuit of Genesee conference. At the next session of the Oneida conference, I was sent by the presiding elder to Owasco circuit, as junior preacher, with the Rev. L. K. Reddington, and from the close of that conference year until 1852, I worked at my trade of blacksmithing, in different places—Spafford Hill, in Onondaga County; Scott, Cortland County, and Newfield, Tioga County, N. Y. In 1852 I was recommended by the quarterly conference of Newfield circuit, Ithaca district, to Oneida conference.

I was sent to Barton circuit to fill out Henry Elwell's year, on account of failing health, and at the close of that year I was admitted on trial in the Wyoming conference, at Carbondale, Pa., and was appointed junior preacher to Broome circuit, with the Rev. Raymond Ingalls; Zadock Paddock, presiding elder. We had good revivals at different appointments and camp meetings. At the next conference I was sent to Vestal, with Seymour E. Walworth. We had two blessed revivals and that year one meeting was protracted to five weeks, beginning March 9th, and about forty souls professed conviction. I well remember a few incidents of this last revival. At the first call for seekers of salvation, a young man came forward, but immediately went back, and I watched the move with solicitude, but the truth was soon manifest. He went after a comrade and with him returned to the altar, where he was converted. One peculiarity of the meetings was that numbers of converts sought their comrades to bring them to the altar. As I was passing through the congregation one night I spoke to a Dr. P—— about his salvation. "Oh!" he replied, "I have religion." I responded, "We have work for you at the altar," and although he was a Baptist, confessed to his backslidings and that he had nearly given up his religion, but took hold anew and no one could have told him from a Methodist. I used to say at the close of the evening service, "If there are any backsliders that want to make any confessions and start anew, they now have an opportunity to do so." An old Presbyterian brother said one evening, "Brother Avery, who do you mean by these old backsliders?" I replied, "My dear sir, I mean you, if you are one of them." He then arose and said, "Brother Avery has been calling on me for a number of evenings to confess. I am a member of the Presbyterian church across the river, but have not been there for some time. I had lost my religious enjoyment and felt unfit for their society. I could not join with the world, and last night I went home and inquired about my family altar, and found it all torn down, and looking around for something to build another, I found nothing but the old stones; of them I built an altar and offered sacrifices, and God blessed me." I trust he has reached his home in heaven. The next year I was sent to Flemingville mission, where I had a precious work of grace. My next appointment was to Colby mission; had a poor, hard year, and at the next conference I was transferred to the East Genesee conference, and was sent to Loyalsock mission, in Sullivan County, Pa. At the next conference held in Canandigua I was ordained an Elder, by Bishop Beverly Waugh, August, 1857. I was returned to Loyalsock the next year. There were good revivals, at different places, and in 1858 I was sent to Scranton, Bradford County, Pa., where I had some success; and was returned to it the second year, but was changed to Ulster, N. Y., circuit by the presiding elder, to gratify Athens, then a part of that charge. This year I had but little success, there being a contention in the church, and at the close of the year my health failed, and the conference granted me a vacation, at my own request, with the privilege to exercise my ministerial office. In the autumn of 1863; I moved to Iowa, and stopped at Monticello, Jones County, and there I worked at my trade, and preached nearly every sabbath and held quarterly meetings for the presiding elder, and did circuit work. I dedicated the first Methodist Church, in Monticello, in the winter of 1863-4. and in 1866 went into Delaware County, Iowa. In 1869 I went into Taylor County, where I did circuit work under the presiding elder, U. P. Golady, on Corning district, De Moines conference. In 1870 I was called to take charge of Creston circuit, which was set off from Creston station by the quarterly conference, and at its first meeting, U. P. G. remaining on the Creston station. During the next three months, dissatisfaction arose between him and the station, and I was put on the station and U. P. G. was put on the circuit. In 1876 I went into Nebraska, where I continued to preach and hold quarterly meetings, and in 1881 I went to Arkansas. Here I have calls in every direction to preach, and more than I have strength to do. At almost seventy years of age, I am still following the gospel plow and sowing the seeds of the kingdom, waiting in joyful hopes of coming reward. Sometimes I wish I was twenty or thirty years younger, to work in my master's vineyard, but my work is nearly done and I want to be able to say, "I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith," and to realize that there is a crown of righteousness laid up for me, which the Lord will give me at that day.

The banks of the Thames have recorded the names
Of the boldest of heroes and the basest of Neros :
In letters of glory, we read the proud story
Of the deeds of the former, embalmed with our tears,
While those of the latter, concerned in that matter,
Shall be doomed to perdition through myraids of years.

BENAJAH AUSTIN AVERY came to Syracuse in 1838 and for several years was in the salt business, but after marriage purchased a small farm a short distance from the city, on the first plank road. This he increased to two hundred and fifteen acres. His chief attention, as far as the farm was concerned, was the production of milk. He purchased and bred the best cows, investigated the best methods of feeding, and reduced the production of milk almost to a science. He, with James Noxon, organized and built the first street railroad, and was the general manager for several years. His crowning work was the founding of the Onondaga County Milk Association, which has not only been of great benefit to its members, and farmers in general, but has proved of inestimable advantage to the city of Syracuse.

Mary, eldest daughter of 353-141-43-14-2 and Eunice Latham ; married, Nov. 25, 1807, in Groton, Richard children: Jeremiah George, born October 23, 1809. Erastus Richard, born Nov. 29, 1812, died May 17, 1838.

Harris, born unknown, died September 21, 1816;

JEREMIAH GEORGE HARRIS was born at Poquonoc Bridge, Groton, Connecticut, October 23d, A. D., 1809. His father died when he was less than seven years old. He was early in life thrown on his own resources and began to be self-supporting. When nineteen years old he became associate editor of the Political Observer, at New London; later he became editor of the Daily Gazette, at New Bedford, Mass. In 1838 he established the Nashville Union, at Nashville, Tenn., which represented the political opinions of Gen. Jackson, and aided the rising fortunes of James K. Polk.

In 1842 Mr. Harris married Lucie McGavock, daughter of James McGavock, of Nashville, by whom he had two children, Joseph Ewing and Lucie. In 1845 he was appointed a paymaster in the U. S. Navy, which position he held until retired by age.

In Hamersley's "Records of living Naval Officers," it is stated that Pay Director J. George Harris was attached to the Gulf squadron in 1846-7, and during the Mexican war he was a member of Commodore M. C. Perry's staff, on all his shore expeditions; that he was at the capture of Tuxpan, Tabasco, and Vera Cruz; that from 1850 to 1854, inclusive, he was attached to the Asiatic fleet, and again with Commodore Perry, when the Empire of Japan was opened to the commerce of the world. He spent two years on the coast of Africa in the fleet appointed to suppress the slave trade. For two years he was attached to the Mediterranean squadron. During the Civil war he held responsible positions in the navy, disbursing several millions of public money without the slightest deficit or loss to the government.

When retired by age he returned to Groton to live and devote himself especially to his aged mother, for whom he had always provided every comfort. In 1879, at the organization of the Groton Heights Centennial Committee, for the purpose of celebrating in a befitting manner the 100th anniversary of the battle and massacre of Fort Griswold, Mr. Harris was unanimously chosen its president. He spent the two following years in promoting the success of the committee's labors, which his wide acquaintance with public men enabled him to do. The committee's labors were crowned with one of the most successful of all the revolutionary centennial celebrations. After this fitting culmination of his life's work, he retired to Nashville, where he spent the remainder of his days.

J. J. COPP.

Groton, Conn., May 12th, 1893.

I have old letters in my possession which convince me that Mr. Harris was probably the pioneer in gathering data for a genealogy of the Groton Averys. Just how many families he collected I am not prepared to say, but the children numbered several hundred. His investigations relating to Christopher and James were begun before Savage, Willard or Caulkins had published, and I am inclined to believe that he furnished Miss Caulkins with considerable of her material. His only error that I have detected was in relation to Susanna Palmes, which he naturally was led into from the circumstances. He first promulgated the idea that Susanna was the daughter of Edward Palmes, who married Lucy Winthrop, whereas, further investigation in the Massachusetts Colonial Records prove her to have been the daughter of William Palmes and Ann Humphrey. He made the same error that myself and all others have made in trying to build a house before we had the material in hand, and where there are so many of the same name, it was impossible to make all connections perfect. The assistance he gave Mr. Clift and later, myself, was of vast importance to this work, and although the same information might have been obtained of others, it is not altogether certain. His knowledge of the traits of the Averys, untangled many knotty problems. The tenacity with which they hang to family names, and the naming some one of the children from the parents of the mother of a family, is illustrated in scores of instances. This work would be sadly deficient were all that he gathered omitted. The Averys should be very thankful for the labors of Jeremiah George Harris.

LATHAM YOUNGS AVERY was born in Groton, Conn., and in his younger days taught school and farmed it until 1836, when he came to Salina, and was the pioneer of the family in what is now the First ward of the city of Syracuse. He was extensively engaged in the salt business, forwarding and speculative interests, and accumulated an extensive property. He was accounted one of the leading men in town. He attempted to create a water power on the Oneida river, at Caughdenoy, which was a failure, and this, coupled with the decline of the salt industry, almost completely ruined him. He owned an extensive farm near Caughdenoy, which he cleared of its timber, and rendered one of the neatest farms in the county. His life was one of the busiest, and closed with the respect of all who knew him.

EDWIN MINER AVERY'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

My father was a Major of Militia in the war of 1812, and was with his regiment for months just below Groton, and this was while the harbor of New London was blockaded by three British 74's, and it has been handed down to me by tradition that the Yankees had red hot shot for days and weeks, at all times ready to let drive at the British fleet, if they had made any attempt to land. My father had a great fondness for and gloried much in military affairs, and was very ambitious and quite popular with the men, and when he was elected Major, it was over a strong and worthy competitor and at the expense of a grand dinner and trimmings for the whole regiment. After the war was over my father, in company with Noyse Barbour, Doctor John O. Miner, and perhaps others, engaged in the manufacture of woolen cloth, satinets, etc., and their mill was located about four miles from the ferry, which my father took charge of, and became chief manager and agent, and a comfortable house was erected for his use, to which he moved his family, and where I was born, September 10, 1815. The family lived there for about seven years, when my father moved over to New London and engaged in trade, and where he died in August, 1823. By most excellent forethought and good judgment, a year or two before his death, he bought for his wife and children, a most attractive home and farm in the beautiful village of Colchester, where was located one of the best schools of that day, any where in the country, known the country over as "Bacon Academy", where have been educated some of the most distinguished citizens of our day, and among them the late Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, Morrison R. Waite; Hon. John T. Waite, of Norwich, and many more. In the month of April, 1824, the family took possession of their new home, and there we were all educated, and lived in comfort and happiness until the time came for each member to fill the place that providence indicated they should start out upon ; and finally we became scattered, as all other families do. There are three out of six surviving to this day ; one boy died of croup at two years of age, the others all lived to mature age. I fitted for Yale College, in Bacon Academy, and could have entered in 1833, but decided upon a commercial career and entered a store in Norwich, and remained there until the spring of 1835, when I emigrated to the city of Buffalo, in western New York. and upon my arrival there went into the dry goods store of M. H. Birge, No. 234 Main street, who still lives and is now at this late day in active and heavy business. The failure and criminality of Rathbun involved the whole city in temporary ruin, and I saw at once that prosperity could not return to that stricken city in years and years, and a good offer about this time was made me to go down to Mississippi and accept a position in a bank, in the town of Clinton, in Hinds County, and but ten miles from Jackson, the capital of the State. Jackson at that time was rising rapidly. The State capitol, a massive and costly building, was being erected, also the governor's mansion, the State penitentiary, the insane asylum, and other improvements were to be constructed, so I concluded that Jackson was the place for me and I took up my abode there. This was in the fall of 1837. I lived in Jackson nineteen years, and have been a citizen of Memphis thirty-one years, which just completes the half century. I embarked in business on my own account in the fall of 1840, and during all the succeeding years, up to 1857, I was moderately successful, enjoying first-class credit in New York and New Orleans, and paid all my obligations, and in the month of January, 1857, entered into private banking in the city in company with Churchill J. Selden, Augustus M. Foute, and F. M. White. During my residence in Jackson I was for three years a member of the board of aldermen, for two years of the time chairman of the building committee, and had in special charge the erection of a fine city hall, which stands to this day, a most useful building, and a credit to the builders and superintendent. On the first of May, 1839, I assisted in the formation of a fire engine company, of which I remained a member for seventeen years, or as long as I was a citizen. From that day to this the first of May has been observed by the company as their anniversary, and should I live to the first of May next year, the half century will have been completed, and out of forty or fifty young men who were members at the beginning, but two survive: C. H. Manship, of Jackson, and E. M. Avery, of Memphis. In the banking business our firm was eminently successful from the start; we made money rapidly, and our gains were entirely satisfactory to all interested. When the war came on, we had large interests in our hands belonging to our friends and depositors, and my sense of duty to them would not permit me to run away or follow the fortunes of the confederacy, besides I had a dependent family consisting of my wife and six daughters, so I staid by the stuff, and was at my post every day, and when, on the 6th of June, 1862, we were by the fortunes of war brought back under the Stars and Stripes, I was on hand and soon learned to accommodate myself to the new order of things, and within a reasonable time had the wheels gliding along smoothly once more. For nearly three years the fighting went on, and when the surrender finally came it was after every resource of our section was exhausted, and our young fighting men were killed off. Those who survived to reach their dilapidated homes were utterly broken up, root and branch, and with nothing to begin life again but their empty hands. It was well known that our institution had done well during the war and the calls upon us for aid and accommodations were most importunate and touching. At such a time a man who has any of the milk of human kindness in his composition has no business in a banking house; you must learn to say no, and stick to it, or you are gone up. Unfortunately for us, we listened to these importunate calls, and in too many instances extended relief, and trusted too much to honor in the absence of collateral. The years 1866 and '67 were very disastrous commercially, owing to the rapid decline in cotton and the shrinkage in all values compared with war times. As a specimen of how fortunes tumbled I will relate one item of our experience. A house, doing business with us, having always been responsible and honorable, shipped a large quantity of cotton to their branch house in New Orleans, and drew drafts against these shipments at very short date, say five, ten, and fifteen days' sight; the bills soon ran to maturity and were uniformly paid, but the day came when we had $60,000 of this short paper, and every dollar of it went to protest for non-payment, and it proved a total loss, as our money had been consumed in the payment of other bills, that matured before ours did; it was a deliberate swindle, of course, but where confidence is once established such swindles are easy of accomplishment. The rumor of such a loss was more fatal than the loss itself, as depositors became alarmed and gradually called for their money. We held a large amount of southern money, and good securities, but not then available, all of which have long since been brought to par and paid; for instance we held $100,000 of the notes of the Bank of Tennessee, which had cost us not over $50,000, all have since been paid, but no market for them when we wanted the money; so after paying out on a moderate run over $400,000 in greenbacks, we were obliged to suspend, and our great and glorious business went into the Chaucery Court, and after making three moderate dividends to creditors, the remainder was absorbed in court costs and receiver's costs, and that was the end of the Gayoso Savings Institution. This all occurred in February, 1868, or just twenty years ago. Since that time I have been in the real estate business in a moderate way, and am a Notary Public, and manage to make a decent living, but the days of accumulation are over with me, and I have no courage or means to embark in anything new and untried. My only living sister, Mrs. Mary A. Taintor, of Colchester, had a son who was born in Natchez, Miss., and the first twelve or fifteen years of his life were spent there; then his mother, after the death of her husband, moved back to Colchester, and her son, Morton, was educated there, and as years rolled by he took his stand in the great conflict on the side of the Union, and enlisted for three years, and most of that time he was attached to an artillery company and was stationed at the lower bay of Charleston harbor, and for months was engaged in bombarding that rebel stronghold. He was a lieutenant, and commanded a battery, which was known all over both sections as the swamp angel battery. He served his three years out without a scratch, then went home and was received with all the honors, as he had earned a good record for gallantry and attention to duty. After a few weeks the quiet of a New England village palled upon his appetite, and he longed for the excitement of the camp and the roar of artillery, so he re-enlisted for the war; after going back to the army, he was stationed in front of Richmond, and near the close of the war, I think in the early part of 1865, there had been what they called an artillery duel between the contending forces, which did not amount to anything serious to either side, and was soon abandoned by both sides. While young Taintor was standing upon top of the parapet, he was fired at by a sharpshooter, up in a tree, and so far off that it was said at the time, the distance was so great that no report of a rifle shot was heard; but a bullet fired by a concealed enemy struck Morton in the shoulder and ranged down into his body, and proved fatal in about twelve hours. An intimate friend and companion was detailed to accompany the body home to the boy's stricken mother. Such a demonstration of grief and respect was never seen in that lovely old town, and the name of Morton A Taintor appears conspicuously on the soldiers' monument erected on the village green in honor of those who fell in the defence of the Union. This death of young Taintor illustrates in a striking and vivid manner the nature of the contest in which we were engaged. It was a war between brothers. Morton had an elder brother who was born in Connecticut, but educated in Mississippi, while Morton was born in Natchez, and educated in Connecticut. John, the elder brother, did not take up arms for the south, but his heart and sympathies were wholly with the south, and for two years he was in the south in the interest of some northern friends, who sent him out with a bag full of money, and authority to draw for $70,000 more, with which to buy cotton and ship north.

FREDERICK AVERY, Jr., was born at Pocquatanoc, Conn., April 29, 1819, and died in New York city, September 9, 1866. His father gave him a first-class education, and when through school he entered the employ of ex-Governor E. D. Morgan, of New York (then of Hartford, Conn). After removing to New York city, he soon became a partner of E. D. Morgan in the whole-sale grocery business. He afterwards left Morgan and set up for himself in the same business, which he conducted for a long time successfully. During the late rebellion, he at one time was an officer on McLellan's staff. He was an extensive traveler and gifted linguist. He was prominent in founding the old "City Guards," of New York, at that time a swell military company of that city. September 28, 1859, he was appointed Master's Mate, Pioneer and Guide of sloop "Preble," United States Navy, while conducting an expedition in search of a water route across the Isthmus of Panama. He was prominent as a member of Lieutenant Strain's expedition across the Isthmus of Darien. His endurance, perseverance and foresight were instrumental in saving the remnant of that brave little company, although a great many died of disease and starvation in the wilderness. Upon his return, and up to the time of his death, he was connected with his cousin, Elisha A. Packer, of New York, in the coal business, and died unmarried.

ELISHA AVERY, born at Lebanon, Conn., May 8, 1822, and died at Hampton, Conn., February 3, 1842. Although he died at the early age of twenty, he displayed great genius as a poet. Many of his compositions are still preserved in the family. He was a quiet, sensitive boy who would patiently bear the impositions of his schoolmates until aroused, then he would burst forth in a spirit of raillery on them in rhyme, until they would beg of him to desist. After a lingering spell of lung fever he died breathing the words, "Father, receive my spirit."

NATHAN COBB was born in Stonington, Ct., Sept. 17, 1805. He came to Syracuse, N. Y., in 1845, where he became engaged in the wholesale grocery business, afterwards in the coal trade, in which he was a leading operator for a number of years. He brought the first boatload of Anthracite coal into Syracuse. On the death of his brothers, Henry and Alfred, it became necessary to assume the care of the Phoenix Foundry, and operated by them, which he did for several years, and in 1864 organized the firm of Cobb, Herrick & Co., for general machinery work, foundry work and boiler making, which he continued until 1881, when he retired. In 1865 he was elected as one of the trustees of the Syracuse Savings Bank, which office he continued to fill till his death, in December, 1889. He was several times a successful candidate for political offices. He was elder and clerk to the First Presbyterian Church for nearly forty years and his death was greatly lamented.

COLONEL MATHEW HENRY AVERY was born in Middletown Springs, Vt. At the time he was six years old his father removed to Syracuse, N. Y., where his education was begun in the public schools, and finished at a noted classical school of that city. The only business in which he was engaged, on his own account, was that of books and stationery, in connection with a news emporium. He was a very popular young man, and enjoyed a large circle of acquaintances, his warm heart, genial manners, and happy temperament winning all hearts. Immediately following the battle of Bull Run, animated by a lofty sense of patriotism, young Avery cast about for the best manner by which he might serve his country. On learning that authority had been granted for the recruiting of a cavalry regiment in the State, he made application for admission with a company, and opened a recruiting office in Syracuse early in August. The company was mustered into service September 27, 1861, and reached Elmira the next day--the first company of the new regiment in rendezvous. Captain Avery's efficiency and natural military endowments early attracted the attention of General Van Valkenburgh, who appointed him to the command of the barracks, and a few days later he was chosen, by the line officers of the regiment, as senior major. He was the only field officer who served with the regiment from its muster-in to its muster-out of service. He was promoted to colonel, December 28, 1864, and was brevetted a brigadier-general, with rank, from the 13th of March, 1865, "for gallantry in action at Sailor's Creek, Va., April 6, 1865, and for faithful and meritorious service." On the consolidation of the Tenth and Twenty-fourth New York Cavalry Regiments, forming the First New York Provisional Cavalry, he was made colonel of the new organization, and was mustered out with it at Syracuse, N. Y., August 4, 1865. The names of the following engagements were ordered inscribed on the colors or guidons of the Tenth New York Cavalry, in accordance with General Order No. 10, Headquarters Army of the Potomac, March 7, 1865: Leesburgh, Brandy Station, Middleburgh, Gettysburg, Shepherdstown, Sulphur Springs. Auburn, Mine Run, Todd's Tavern, Fortifications of Richmond, Hawe's Ship, Cold Harbor, Trevillian Station, St. Mary's Church, Malvern Hill, Charles City Crossroads, Ream's Station, Vaughan Road, Boynton Road, Bellfield. This does not include all the actions in which the regiment took part, but it is the official recognition of its participation in these more important engagements up to the time that the order was issued. Soon after the close of the war Colonel Avery went to the oil country, where the remainder of his life was spent, and where his activity and ability brought him into prominence. No man in the oil country was more extensively known, or enjoyed a wider circle of friends. Some eight or ten years before his death he lost his voice and was able to converse in a tone but little above a whisper. He was one of the pioneers in piping oil, which has grown to such wonderful proportions, owning and operating, in connection with Mr. E. M. Holden, and later with Mr. D. H. Cady, both of them of Titusville, a pipe line from Shamburgh to Miller Farm, on Oil Creek, Pa., in 1862-68. He was afterward connected with every oil exchange in the country, being at the time of his death a member of the Bradford Oil Exchange. His death occurred at Geneva, N. Y., whither he had gone for treatment, on the 1st of September, 1881.—Copied, by permission, from the History of the Tenth New York Cavalry, by Noble D. Preston.

ELISHA AVERY, M. D., was born in Griswold, New London County, Conn., January 4, 1783, of poor parents. He received a very limited education, but being fond of books and study, he managed to obtain the necessary means, and studied medicine according to the Allopathic school. He also became a fifer in a military training band, while quiet a young lad, and was a teacher of singing school. Having graduated in his medical studies, and received his diploma, he practiced for a time, but being dissatisfied with the results, he gave up his practice and went to Pompey, Onondaga County, New York, where he formed the acquaintance of Dr. Hezekiah Weston, a botanic physician. Being pleased with his success, he studied under him, and practiced with him. Their practice was built up under the bitterest prejudice and ridicule of the Allopathic doctor. An instance is recorded, where an Allopathic doctor, who had been very bitter in his denunciation of Weston & Avery's practice, lost two of his children by an epidemic malady which afflicted children, and had a third child taken sick with the same complaint. After having done all in his power to effect a cure, without any apparent benefit, he mounted a horse and went away, having told his wife (as soon as he was gone) to send for Weston & Avery, for the child surely would die unless they could save it, and that they had been treating such cases without losing a patient. Weston & Avery doctored the child, who soon recovered. It was while he was in company with Dr. Weston that he formed the acquaintance of and married Miss Melinda Barnum. She was a niece of Dr. Weston. He afterwards moved to Cato, Cayuga County, New York, where he lived for a time; he then purchased and ran a distillery at Jordan, Onondaga County, New York. Being very lenient in the collection of his dues, he became financially embarrassed and sold the business in 1824 and emigrated to York Township, Sandusky County, Ohio. Here he lived on a farm, in a rude log cabin, and endured many of the hardships of pioneer life, subsisting much of the time chiefly on the game which the forest afforded, and corn bread. The latter was prepared by mixing the meal with water and then baking it. The corn had to be carried many miles, usually on horseback, to get it to a mill where it could be ground. It is said that on a certain occasion he went away from home on horseback to purchase some cattle, for which he paid seven dollars per head, and while driving them home through the wood he lost his way, and as it was getting dark he tied his horse to a tree and, despite the wood being known to be infested with wild animals, he lay down upon the leaves near by the horse and slept. He was awakened in the night by the snorting and prancing of his horse, when he beheld in the darkness the dim outline and bright eyes of a huge animal (supposed to be a bear) standing over him and looking down into his face. He shouted and commenced moving, whereupon the beast hastily made his retreat, leaving him unharmed. Elisha was born of Christian parents, and in his younger days was a devout Presbyterian, and spent much of his time reading the Bible. While living in New York he began to doubt the trustworthiness of the teachings of the Bible, but he still adhered to the church until after he moved to Ohio. He then discarded it entirely and became a materialist in belief. While living here he endured a long and severe illness which nearly cost him his life. He also became a prey to asthma. Under these misfortunes he again met financial difficulty, and in 1836 he moved to Williams County, Ohio, where he again endured the hardships incident to pioneer life. Here he became well known and esteemed by all. He was chosen assessor, and afterwards as township trustee, and at another time justice of the peace, which office he resigned, refusing to hold office because it was distasteful to him. In 1850 he moved to Otsego Township, Steuben County, Ind., where he purchased 160 acres of land, on which he lived until he died. His son, James Avery, and children (1889) still occupy the same farm.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ROBERT STANTON AVERY, SECOND.

I was born May 1, 1808, in Preston, New London County, Conn., and named after my father, and lived at home and worked on my father's farm until I was twenty-one, except while teaching district schools, the last three winters. My father subscribed for the American Edition of Dr. Brewster's New Edinburgh Encyclopedia, when I was very small, which was published in thirty-six half-volume numbers, two or three of which were generally sent to him each year at four dollars a number, and when I got able to read well, I took to reading them and studying such scientific articles as I could understand. In this way I had become well acquainted with all the articles that related to the mathematical and physical sciences, astronomy, optics, etc. When about sixteen I joined a society of young men, several of whom were college students, and others trying to improve themselves; and their meetings, discussions, exhibitions, and library gave me considerable knowledge of current literature and cultured manners. When I became twenty-one I went to Plainfield Academy a year, studying higher algebra, analytical geometry, and the calculus the first four months, so as to become prepared for engineering, if I should conclude to enter upon it; but my intercourse there with a large of number young men fitting for entering the colleges, and the advance of the teachers, three of whom had graduated from Yale College, led me to decide on trying to fit for entering college, so I gave the rest of my time there to Latin. I had suffered so much from dyspepsia for several years, that I then thought it would be better for me to go to a manual labor school at Whitesboro, near Utica, N. Y., which was highly recommended to me by one of the teachers at Plainfield, who had been there. So in the spring of 1830 I went there, but was not admitted, not being a Christian according to the ideas of the teachers. I then went to the teacher in the village academy, an accomplished graduate from Amherst College, Mass., who took me into his class in Latin and Greek, and gave me a class of boys in arithmetic to teach a while every day, which relieved him and helped pay my way. I stayed there until fall, and then went to Troy, where I spent a few weeks in private study of Latin; and then, going home late in the fall, I remained there studying Latin and Greek, principally, until the spring of 1833, when I started a private school in Fall River, Mass. Among my scholars there were some in Latin, and I heard the lectures of Sylvester Graham on anatomy, physiology, and to hygiene, and began to understand the nature of my disease and take effective measures for its cure. The place was new and I did not get scholars enough to make it pay well, so in the fall I gave up the school and took a public school in the town of Dedham, for the winter, and when I left there I went to Boston, whence, in the spring of 1834, I went out for a publishing company, getting subscribers for the Penny Magazine, an English periodical, and visited many of the neighboring towns. But I did not like the business much, and while at Worcester I met a young mechanic who invited me to stop and work with him in a joiner's shop and study and teach him, and as I was hoping to find some retired place to study in, I concluded to do so, or at least to try it. I remained there three years, with the exception of the first winter, during which I was engaged in teaching a public school in the town of Lancaster. I generally worked in the shop from three to five hours a day, and had the rest of the time for study, and I think I never advanced more rapidly or felt more contented. I kept up my course in Latin and studied French, reading the whole Bible in that language, and some other books, as I thought it would be very useful to me in studying science and medicine. The carpenters with whom I was associated had books on architecture, and sometimes wanted me to help them in making drawings and calculations relating to their work. So I studied their books, my mathematics making them easy to me, and I was always able to help them out, especially on curved work, for which I got some pay. At one time I thought some of becoming a lecturer on astronomy, and read books on that science, and studied a star atlas and the sky until I was quite familiar with the constellations, and knew the name, place and size of nearly every star of the first five magnitudes. I had calculated eclipses when only sixteen years old, with the help of the encyclopedia and Bowditch's Navigator. But as I did not like to expose myself winters in such ways as I would have to, I finally decided to give it up. In a library, which I got the use of, I found books on hygiene, anatomy, and medicine, which interested me, and I made a long course of experiments on the effects of various kinds of food on myself to determine their relative nutritive and hygienic value, and in this way greatly improved my health, so that I have since then only occasionally been troubled with dyspepsia, when I could not well control my circumstances. I also heard another course of lectures by Graham, while in Worcester, and this probably influenced me some in favor of studying medicine. So I had finally concluded to study at some medical college, if I could raise money enough to do so, and accordingly, early in the spring of 1837, I went to Philadelphia, that being then the best place to attend lectures on medicine. It was necessary for me to pursue some employment a part of the time and I tried to find something suitable, that would give me the money and time I would need, but it was during the period following the removal of the government deposits by President Jackson, when all business seemed to be paralyzed and capitalists knew not what to do, and the bank notes of one State would not pass in another, and I had to get my money changed and pay a premium when I passed State bonds. Finding nothing I could do in the city, I went into the neighboring country and tried to find a school, but did not succeed. The newspapers reported that business had not stopped in Pittsburg, so I sent my baggage there as freight and walked through on the turnpike, at the rate of forty miles a day, which I was then quite able to do. But before I got there I learned that the financial panic had reached there also, and finding nothing I could do there, I went to Wheeling, but finding nothing better, I sold my tools and engaged for the summer of 1837 in a district school in Ohio, opposite Wheeling. When that closed I went to Cincinnati, but finding no chance to work at my trade, or teach, there or near there, I went on to Louisville, Ky., near which I engaged in a school among the wealthy planters, teaching in log cabins in the woods, which they built for me, and remained with them about three years, finding it easy and much time for study. I then took charge of the academy at Lagrange, during the summer of 1840 and the following winter, and the next spring went to a wealthy farmer's near there, where I read the whole Bible in Greek, giving daily lessons in Latin and Greek, and remaining till the summer of 1843, when I went to Harvard University, at Cambridge, Mass., and commenced my three years' course in theology. While in Kentucky, I boarded a part of the time in Methodist families and became acquainted with their circuit preachers, read the works of Wesley and Fletcher, and lived in tents with them at their camp meetings in the woods. Afterwards I lived with the Baptists and associated with their preachers. I also became acquainted with a young Unitarian preacher in Louisville, who gave me valuable information about the facilities for study at Cambridge. In Louisville I also met well-educated German teachers, and others who had studied in Germany and France; and when I left Kentucky I had nearly made up my mind to visit my friends in Connecticut and then spend three or four years in study at some German University. But I wanted to visit Cambridge before deciding, and when I did so I was so well-suited with what I found that I concluded to stop there. A large part of my time at Cambridge was spent in studying the Scriptures critically, in Greek and Hebrew, with Dr. Noyes, noted poet, Hebrew scholar, and author of a new translation of the whole Bible. While there I also read some German and a great deal of theological Latin, and attended most of the university lectures on languages, literature, history and sciences. I graduated in July, 1846, and as my father died before this, and he had requested me to return when he died so as to be to the settlement of his estate, I did so, but made such arrangements with the family that I could be away if I liked. So I went back to Cambridge and spent the following winter there in trying my fortune as a candidate and reviewing some of my studies, but finding the profession crowded with my sort and a poor prospect of obtaining employment, my health not very good and my eyes so bad that I could not study nights, and my voice so weak that my elocution did not commend me when called to speak in large assemblies, and being inclined to greater freedom of thought and speech than was then popular, even among the class of Christians I had to associate with, and becoming deeply interested in the study of the physical sciences, I went back to Preston in the spring, not thinking then of giving up the profession, but hoping to regain sufficient health to become able to pursue it more successfully, and in the meantime make some scientific investigations. My health soon improved and my eyes slowly became strong and remained so, and I found abundant and healthful exercise in raising vegetables and young trees, chopping wood, and mechanical work, and grinding lenses and making telescopes. I made one pretty good reflecting telescope over five feet long, and was dreaming of better work in that line. I also kept select schools a few weeks each time, during three falls, for advanced pupils and young searchers, most of whom were reviewing their studies and preparing for their examinations for teachers in the common district schools. For seven years, after graduating from the Divinity School at Cambridge, my time was mostly given to the study of the higher mathematics and their application to the physical sciences particularly to light, and I read the best English and French works on the subject. I kept up my study of languages some to retain my ability to use them and improved considerably in Pitman's Phonography, which I had learned to use at Cambridge in taking notes of lectures. I belonged to two or three circles of writers who corresponded in this system of shorthand. Finally, not seeing a very bright prospect before me in the theological profession, which I had studied so many years and so earnestly, I accepted a position on the United States Coast Survey, where a man of good mathematical attainments was at that time very much wanted for special calculations relating to the laws of the tides, the discussion of long series of tidal observations, and testing results by prediction of tides. I joined it in October, 1853, and was employed about ten years, mostly in this capacity, by Professor Bache, then superintendent of the Coast Survey, testing by trial all sorts of plans for discussing the series of tidal observation that had then been made by the Coast Survey, and trying the results by predicting. Some of these calculations were very long and tedious. One of them involved 707 conditional equations to start with, each of them having twenty-three unknown quantities; and I was over nine months forming them, solving them and testing the results. I sometimes had to make ordinary reductions and other computations, and was occasionally, for short periods, in charge of the tidal division, during the absence of its chief on other duties or on furlough. Then I was transferred to the computing division for nearly two years, and at first set to computing a whole period of observations of occultations of the Pleiades, embracing all reliable observations of the kind made in the observatories of Europe and America, and treated according to Professor Pierce's formulæ, the principal object being the correction of tables of the moon's motions, and the improvement of work on longitudes of places on the earth. Then I worked some months forming and solving large groups of equations involving many unknown quantities, in one case twenty-six unknown quantities in the statement of the normal equations, relating to the final work on the primary triangulations. I was then put in charge of the work of the survey on tides, being made chief of the tidal division of the United States Coast and Geodetic survey, and had the supervision of the tidal observers at permanent stations and their instruments for observing, of the tidal computers and the reductions and discussions of the observations when received, and the predictions as published regularly a year in advance in the Tide Tables. I prepared these tables for twenty years with the aid of computers. My inventions relating to the tide gauges led to great improvement in the quality of the observations, and thus simplified the work of discussion. I resigned at the end of September, 1885, after thirty-two years' service on the survey, at the age of seventy-seven. Since then I have been mostly engaged in writing mathematical and phonetic books, which I hope to be able soon to get published.

JOHN AVERY, son of Robert Stanton Avery and Sally Crary, born at Preston, Conn., August 19, 1819, graduated at Yale College in 1843 ; Yale Divinity School in 1847 ; ordained to the gospel ministry in 1848 ; pastor of Exeter Church, Lebanon, Conn., 1848 to 1873 ; Central Village, 1873 to 1878 ; West Woodstock, 1878 to 1881 ; Ledyard, 1881 to 1892 ; representative from Lebanon in the Connecticut Legislature in 1879. Resided in Norwich, Conn., 1892. Mr. Avery commenced many years ago to collect data for a history of the "Avery Family in America." As occasion offered he copied records, town, county, church and tombstones, besides all the family Bibles that he could obtain. He listened to traditions, and was in correspondence with a cousin, Moses Park, in England, who sent him a copy of the coat of arms which has caused so much comment in the family for several years. The pedigree connected with this family was brought down to a date later than the time Christopher was born, and thus cut off our connection with William Fillongly, to whom the arms were granted in 1579. A few years ago he gave all he had collected to Mr. Clift, and everything he had is incorporated in this. How much he had it is impossible to state, but it must have been considerable. I have the remains of some of his investigations, which include something of the "Dedham Branch" of the family, and, in fact, any fact he could obtain about any Avery whose name had ever appeared in print he made fast, and where he could use it at any time.

AMOS GEER AVERY, M. D., read medicine and surgery in the office of his uncle, Christopher S. Avery, and took lectures in both medical colleges of Connecticut and New Hampshire, but took his diploma at the Medical Institute, in Louisville, Ky., in a class of three hundred and forty-five students, in the class of 1844-5. Soon after graduating, went to Iowa, then to California, and stayed till 1857, returned to Connecticut, and on the fitting out of the Burnside Expedition to North Carolina, was on the staff of William O. Howard, as Marine Agent, and had the charge of eleven boats. He returned broken in health and crippled by injuries internal, contracted in the line of duty, and was pensioned at seventeen dollars per month. He returned to the army and held an appointment from Surgeon General S. Oakly Vanderpoel to the 44th New York regiment (Éllsworth's Avengers), General Rice then in command. On the same day he had given a pledge to assist in raising a regiment of cavalry in the city of New York, to be commanded by Henry E. Davies, a retired Major-General, but Davies being promoted to the Colonelcy of the Harris Light Cavalry, this plan failed. He was then chosen for the service in New York and vicinity, in examining men and supervising army camps and hospitals, and this continued to near the close of the war, when he was not required for other duty, as State recruiting was discontinued. He claims that he was the first man to prepare and use in a capital operation, chloroform, soon after Iowa became a State, 1846. The patient was in the office of a Dr. Wyman Bonaparte, Van Buren County, on the Des Moines river, and still lives to verify it.

WILLIAM R. AVERY was born in Norwich, Conn., and educated in Central New York, where he held an important United States government position during the war. In 1867 he came to Cincinnati, and was for five years connected with the Merchants' National Bank, then for nineteen years with the Ætna Insurance Company, and is now special agent of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company. As a Mason, Mr. Avery is renowned as a "worker." He was made a Master Mason Dec. 23, 1874, in Kilwinning Lodge, No. 356, and has served the order in official positions in every body in Masonry. He is a Past Master of Walnut Hills Lodge, No. 483; Past Eminent Commander of Trinity Commandery, No. 44, Knights Templar, and an Inspecting Officer of Grand Commandery of Ohio. He was created a 32d degree Mason Feb. 1, 1877, in Ohio Consistory S. P. R. S. 32d degree. He at once began work in the various bodies of the Scottish Rite, and has continued in official positions ever since. In Gibulum Lodge, 14th degree, and Cincinnati Chapter Rose Croix, 18th degree, he has held various offices. He was appointed as "King Cyrus" in Dalcho Council, P. of J., 16th deg., in February, 1877, and served until Dec. 23, 1880, when he assumed the role "King Darius," a position which he still holds and in which he excels.

In Ohio Consistory S. P. R. S. 32d degree, Mr. Avery was elected Gr. Chancellor Feb. 13, 1879, for one year; Minister of State and G. O. March 4, 1880, for three years, and June 7, 1883, to the office of First Lieutenant-Commander, which he has filled since that time by re-elections, his present term expiring in 1892.

September 20th, 1890, he was elected an Honorary Member of the Supreme Council, 33d degree. Mr. Avery is a painstaking and conscientious ritualist, always anxious to make a profound impression upon the candidates and ambitious to keep up the reputation of the Cincinnati Scottish Rite bodies for that magnificent rendition of the grades which has made them pre-eminent.

EDWARD WOODBRIDGE AVERY, M. D., was born in Clinton Oneida County, N. Y., and received his education in Clinton, and graduated at Hamilton College in the class of 1863. He entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, in the same autumn, and supported himself by teaching. In April, 1864, was appointed acting assistant surgeon in the United States Navy, and assigned to the Atlantic and Gulf squadron on the U. S. S. "Banshee," and the U. S. barque "Midnight." He was honorably discharged in the fall of 1865, and soon after resumed his course in the College of Physicians and Surgeons and graduated therefrom in the spring of 1866. In April of the same year he entered the army as acting assistant surgeon and accompanied the 18th U. S. Infantry on horseback from Fort Leavenworth, in Kansas, to Fort Wallace, in the Rocky Mountains. He had charge of the medical department of the forts in Wyoming Territory, and was superintendent of the building of the hospitals at that fort. Resigned in the summer of 1867 and returned to the New York Homeopathic Medical College and graduated therefrom in the spring of 1868, having been chosen valedictorian of his class. He practiced medicine in Poughkeepsie for two years, and had charge of the Homeopathic Dispensary during that time. In the fall of 1870 he accepted an appointment as assistant surgeon in the German army, during the Franco-German war. He received an honorable discharge at the close of that war, with a letter of thanks and a medal from the German government. Owing to ill health he was obliged to cease practice for several years, but has been practicing in Brooklyn since 1881. He organized the Central Homeopathic Dispensary in that city, and is a member of the Homeopathic Medical Society of the county of Kings, and is in the staff of the Brooklyn University. In Hamilton College he took the second prize in chemistry.

AVERY'S ISLAND. SALT MINE.

The locality of the mine is Petite Anse Island, one of a series of islands (so called) or small hills in Southwestern Louisiana, five in number, and six miles apart, running in a direction nearly northwest to southeast, and in so direct a line that a ruler laid on the map will cut the centers of all of them. Beginning at the west, they are named Jefferson's, Petite Anse, Grand Coteau, Cote Blanche, and Belle Isle; no minerals have been found on any of them except Petite Anse. Although called islands, the only one really entitled to the name is Belle Isle; all the others being merely hills rising out of the sea marsh that skirts the southern portion of Louisiana. Petite Anse is in extent about 2,500 acres; the soil is quite sandy but fertile, and the highest point is 180 feet above tide water.

The discovery of the mine or salt proper was made by John M. Avery, May 6, 1862, and was brought about by the strictness of the Federal blockade and consequent stoppage of the supply of salt from abroad. At least as early as the beginning of this century salt springs or licks were known to exist on the island, and during the War of 1812 parties utilized the water of these springs in the manufacture of salt for local consumption. The return of peace brought salt into the country again, and as the rudely improvised plant of the Louisiana manufacturers could not compete with the better furnished mines, the work was abandoned, and soon became little more than a tradition. The late war again deprived this portion of the country of salt, and, driven by necessity, the old wells were hunted up and cleared out, and the manufacture of salt from the brine was again resumed with such appliances as could be found on the sugar plantations. The demand

DUDLEY AVERY.

DUDLEY AVERY, eldest son of Daniel D. Avery and Sarah Craig Marsh, was born in the ancestral home of his father and grandfather Avery, Baton Rouge, La. He entered Princeton College, 1858, to have his course interrupted just at its close by the civil war. Fresh from his books he was enrolled in the "Delta Rifles," the first company to volunteer in his city; he was ordered directly to the front, and rendered gallant and distinguished service in defense of his country in the battles of "Pittsburgh Landing," "Shiloh," "Riland," "Mansfield" and "Pleasant Hill;" he was severely wounded at Shiloh; was presented with a sword on the battle field and was complimented for gallant conduct, at Mansfield. The battle of Shiloh is sometimes called that of Pittsburgh Landing. After the evacuation of Nashville, the confederate forces in the west were concentrated near Corinth, Miss., while Grant was preparing to move so as to cut off their communications in western Tennessee. On April 1, with about 32,000 men, he reached Pittsburgh Landing, where he was joined by Gen. Buell. Johnson, who had about 45,000 men, moved from Corinth and attacked Grant on the morning of the 6th. The attack fell first upon the divisions of W. T. Sherman and Prentiss, both of which were driven back, three regiments of the latter being captured and the whole army forced back almost to the landing. In the afternoon Buell's advance appeared on the opposite bank, and a single division crossed while the battle was going on. Gen. Johnson was mortally wounded, and the command devolved upon Beauregard, who assailed the Union center and left, on which most of the artillery had been concentrated, and which were also covered by two gun boats. The attack was repelled, and at night a bombardment was opened, which compelled the confederates to retire a little. The remainder of Buell's command crossed during the night, raising the Union forces to about 45,000 men. Grant opened the action early in the morning of the 7th, by an artillery fire before which the confederates fell back. This was followed by a general assault, which was obstinately resisted. The action continued until 4 P. M., when the confederates retreated. The years of devoted service Dudley Avery gave his country bore fruit in the vital intent which has actuated him in lending his best efforts toward the restoration of peace and order at home, respect and recognition abroad.

Prominent among his people he is a recognized leader in all that concerns their welfare. He was President of the Police Jury of Iberia Parish for nine consecutive years. He was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention at St. Louis in 1884.

He is general commanding the militia of his district, and was elected to the State Senate to succeed his brother (deceased), session of 1891. At the close of the war Mr. Avery married Miss Mary Louise Richardson, of Bayside Plantation, Bayou Teche; she died in 1875 leaving four children, who, with their father, his sisters and their families, constitute the home at Avery's Island.

JOHN MARSH AVERY, second son of Daniel D. Avery and Sarah Craig Marsh, deserves more than a passing notice in the record of his family. Born with the sunshine in his nature, it may be truly said that it radiated through a life of 47 years shedding brightness and comfort on all who had the good fortune to come under his influence. Christian, soldier, patriot, gentleman, is written in stone to remind future generations of a life that was complete in their text words. A lad at school when the civil war began, he soon after found on his father's plantation the famous salt mine of Louisiana. In 1863, on the evacuation of the Teche country by Gen. Dick Taylor, young Avery, then but 17 years of age, became a member of Gen. Taylor's staff, and his faithful and devoted follower through the fortunes of war. He had barely attained his majority when peace was restored, disappointment and discouragement contradicting the early promise of his life. The days of reconstruction were long and dark, but doubt and indecision once over, he was among the first to bring order out of chaos and hasten the new era that was dawning upon his beloved Louisiana. Repeatedly chosen to represent his parish and State in council assembly, in 1888 he was returned as a member of the State Senate, where he did distinguished service in leading the "opposition" to the re-charter of the Louisiana Lottery company. He did not live to enjoy the realization of this work, but left his family a record that adds lustre to the honored name he bore and so jealously guarded.

In that High Court from which there is no appeal, will be written against the name of John Marsh Avery: Christian, soldier, patriot, gentleman.

soon became too great for the supply furnished by the wells, and in cleaning one of them out and in deepening it for the purpose of getting a better supply, the unexpected discovery was made of rock salt only sixteen feet below the surface. Immediate examination was made and the fact was soon established that the rock salt was found in considerable quantity. A report was at once made to the Confederate Government at Richmond and a more extended survey was had under their auspices, resulting in their taking charge of and working it for some time. After the close of the war a more thorough survey was made, with a view to the development of the mine and placing it correctly before investors. This survey showed that the deposit underlies about 150 acres of surface area, and that wherever struck it was identical in quality and structure. The depth of the deposit is unknown, but is believed to be considerable, as the workings show the stratification to be nearly perpendicular, which would indicate an upheaval, and that the present width of the mass was its original depth. The floor of the present workings is 140 feet from the surface, the shaft penetrating twenty-five feet of surface soil and 115 feet of salt, of which fifty feet is left for roof and sixty-five feet excavated. As this level will yield, exclusive, etc., 15,000,000 tons of salt, it will be seen that there was no need of any deeper exploration, and, as there is a possibility of striking water at a lower level, it has never been deemed advisable to bore further as a mere matter of curiosity.

Shortly after the late war, a company was formed to work the mine. A shaft was sunk and some work done, but the enterprise was abandoned in a short time and lay idle until 1878, when another company was formed to carry on the work, but, finding that a much larger capital was required to put it on a successful footing than they had anticipated, they in turn, after a very short trial, retired in favor of a company of New York capitalists, who are now mining the salt and pushing the work vigorously. They have put in a large quantity of the most modern machinery, dug canals, built and chartered steamships and vessels, and lately have completed a railroad to the mine, which places them in direct communication with the entire railroad system of the United States and permits shipment from the mine to any point without breaking bulk. The salt from this mine is marketed principally in Galveston, New Orleans, and Mobile, for the Southern States, but large quantities are also shipped to the western meat packers in Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago, etc., and its sale is being pushed wherever a market can be found. The manner of mining is by driving galleries, or rather tunnels, into the solid rock, and these galleries are crossed at right angles by others. The width of the workings averages about thirty-five feet, and the height sixty-five to seventy feet. The roof consists of fifty feet of solid salt left for that purpose, and is supported by pillars thirty-five to forty feet square. The salt is blasted out with dynamite, and the bore or blast holes are made by hand power with a drilling machine, somewhat on the principle of a carpenter's auger; two men working one machine can easily average sixty feet of boring per day. After the salt is mined, it is hoisted to a platform, some sixty feet above the ground, to the crushing machine, where it is reduced to a suitable size for the mills on a still lower level. The mills are the ordinary under-running French burrstone mills, in common use throughout the country for grinding grain. They are thirty-six inches in diameter and run at the rate of three hundred to three hundred and fifty revolutions; will manufacture ninety sacks of 200 pounds per hour, of a grade corresponding to Liverpool coarse salt. From the mills the salt is run into the sacks or barrels ready for market and loaded directly on the railroad cars. The whole thing is more quickly done than described. It is perfectly possible that a piece of salt may be lying in the solid mass in the position it has occupied for ages, be blasted out, hoisted, crushed, sacked, and be loaded in the cars en route for market in ten minutes. The salt is manufactured into any size or grade the market demands, from table salt as fine as flour, up to lumps of solid rock as large as can be conveniently handled for farmers' use. It will be seen that the manufacture is mechanical, no chemicals being used; the only precaution necessary to produce a beautiful white article being care and cleanliness in handling. The works are now producing 200 to 210 tons per day, and machinery is being erected to double this capacity. The cars are loaded either in bulk or in packages (sacks or barrels) direct from the mills, and the shipment thus reaches the consumer without rehandling or breaking bulk in transit.

No thorough or systematic geological examination of Southwestern Louisiana has ever been made, and no very satisfactory explanation of the presence of this mass of salt, apparently adventitious, has been given. The most plausible theory seems to be that it was formed in a pond or basin by salt springs from a great depth, and that the stratification or bands previously referred to, resembling the rings in the trunk of a tree, and averaging three to four inches in width, are to be accounted for by the periods of greater or less activity of the springs, or the greater or less evaporation, according to the season. The same appearances might favor an annual overflow of a similar basin by the sea. But the absence of the other salts, etc., found in sea water favors the first theory. At a comparatively recent (geological) date this salt must have been uncovered, as the surface of the rock is everywhere as smooth as a pavement, evidently polished by the action of water, and the direction of the stream is plainly indicated by the ridges and hollows on its surface. The present surface soil and sand seem due to an overwhelming inundation from the northeast. The direction of the Mississippi River, which is shown by the general direction of the valleys on the island, being from northeast to southwest, and from the additional fact that in dredging a canal about four miles south of the salt mine, through the sea marsh, a buried forest of cypress was struck at a depth of eight to ten feet, of which there was not the slightest indication on the surface. The trees were in a fair state of preservation, and all lay with their tops to the southwest. The bones of the mastodon and other extinct animals are found in a layer of sand and gravel directly on the surface, and are almost unchanged in structure. In sinking an air shaft within the past few weeks the salt was struck at a depth of nineteen to twenty feet. At about ten feet below the surface a layer of rich black soil five feet thick was found in which were imbedded large quantities of fragments of earthenware, and below that, touching the salt, well preserved bones of a large animal, one section of the vertebra having an opening for the spinal cord of at least two inches in diameter. —Extract from a Report to the Commissioner of Agriculture, 1884.

CURTIS LORD AVERY was born at Groton, Conn., August 2, 1810, and is one of the earliest inhabitants of Mansfield, Ohio. He was a successful merchant and aided much in the prosperity of that growing city. He was one of the first to espouse the anti-slavery cause. He refused to follow the teachings of many of the clergymen of that day on that subject, and, with his neighbors who agreed with him, founded the First Congregational Church of Mansfield, which recently passed its semi centennial anniversary. Mr. Avery retired from business soon after the war of the Rebellion and now lives at Wayne, near Philadelphia, Penn.

DESCRIPTION OF THE AVERY BIBLE.

Size,  $6\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$  inches, bound in heavy black leather covers. The body of the work is printed in old English text (or black letter), with side notes and references on margin of every page in plain old style type such as is now in common use. Headings of chapters and books in plain old style and italic. It is what is known as a "breeches" Bible, the 7th verse of the third chapter of Genesis reading as follows:

"Then the eyes of them both were opened and they knew that they were naked, and they sewed figge tree leaves together and made themselves breeches."

All through the book the old-fashioned long s [ſſ] is used; also u for v, v for u and i for j. Many words that now end with y, viz.: seventy, necessary, etc., are spelled with a final "ie" in this Bible, and numerous words end in a final "e" that have since been dropped, as: eate, fielde redeeme, againe, solde, etc. The title page in the front of the book is gone; it commences abruptly with the first chapter of Genesis. At the commencement of each book of the Bible is what is termed "The Argument," being a brief synopsis of the contents of that book and explanation of its meaning. Psalms is spelled "Psalmes," the singular being spelled "Psal."

Between the Old and New Testament appears the title page, containing printer's name, date, etc. [see picture], backed by the page of names. This is followed by "The summe of the whole Scripture of the bookes of the Olde and New Testament," being an explanation of Christian doctrine. After this comes "Certain questions and answers touching the doctrine of predestination, the use of God's worde and sacraments." This is an argument in favor of the doctrine of predestination. Then comes "The holy Gospel of Jesus Christ, according to Mattheuwe," and the other books of the New Testament. Following Revelations is the concordances (see picture). "Two right profitable and fruitful concordances, or large and ample tables alphabeticall. The first contayning the interpretation of the Hebrue, Caldean, Greeke and Latine wordes and names scatteringly dispersed throughout the whole Bible, with their common places following euery of them; and the second comprehending at such other principall wordes and matters, as concern the sense and meaning of the Scriptures, or direct unto any necessarie and good instruction. The further contents and use of both the which tables (for brevitie sake) is expressed more at large in the preface to the reader." Then follows: "The whole booke of Psalmes, collected into English meter by T. Stenhold, J. Hopkins, and others, conferred with the Hebrue, with apt notes to sing them withall. Set forth and allowed to be song in all churches, by all peöple together before and after morning and evening prayer and before and after sermons and moreover in private houses for Godly solace and comfort, laying apart all ungodly songes, and the which tend onely to the nourishing of vice, and corrupting of the soul."

"To the reader: Thou shalt understand, gentle reader, that I have [for the help of those that are desirous to learne to sing] caused a new print of note to be made with letters to be joined to every note; whereby thou mayest know how to call every note by his right name, so that with very little diligence [as thou art taught in the introduction printed heretofore to the Psalmes] thou mayest the more easily by the vewing of the letters, come to the knowledge of perfect soleyayng; whereby thou mayest sing the Psalmes the more spedily and easily. The letters be there v for vt, r for re, m for my, f for fa, s for sol, l for la. Thus where you see any letter joyned by the note, you may easily call him by the right name."

P. S.—Photograph gives name of printer, place and time of publication.

IRVING MONTGOMERY AVERY was born in Scipio, N. Y. When a young man he removed to New York and engaged in business. At the outbreak of the Civil war he was living in Brooklyn, and was one of the first to volunteer. He and a friend raised and formed the body of men which was afterwards mustered into the service and became the Forty-eighth Regiment, New York State Volunteers. He rented a hall and advertised for recruits, and soon had more than enough to form the company originally contemplated and kept on and succeeded in raising a full regiment. (Hist. 48th Reg't, N. Y. S. Vols, Palmer, 1885.) To Col. William B. Barton and Quartermaster Irving M. Avery belongs the credit of originating this organization, and preserving it for a considerable period under circumstances most perplexing and embarrassing. The number of recruits overpassed the limit of their early ambition, and they soon found themselves with several hundred men on their hands, and the problem as to how to secure them and at the same time provide with food and shelter, taxed to the utmost their energies as well as the pecuniary resources of themselves and their friends. When we take into consideration the circumstances of these two young men, and the nature and extent of the difficulties they encountered, at one time feeding and housing several hun-

IRVING M. AVERY.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that this is crucial for ensuring the integrity of the financial statements and for providing a clear audit trail. The text notes that any discrepancies or errors in the records can lead to significant complications during an audit and may result in the disallowance of certain expenses.

2. The second part of the document outlines the specific procedures that must be followed when recording transactions. It details the requirements for proper documentation, including the need for original receipts and invoices, and the importance of ensuring that all entries are supported by appropriate evidence. The text also discusses the need for regular reconciliations and the timely review of the records to identify and correct any errors as soon as possible.

3. The third part of the document addresses the issue of the classification of expenses. It explains that it is essential to correctly categorize each transaction according to the applicable accounting principles and the organization's chart of accounts. This ensures that the financial statements accurately reflect the nature and purpose of the expenditures. The text provides guidance on how to handle complex or multi-purpose transactions and stresses the importance of consistency in the classification process.

4. The fourth part of the document discusses the role of the accounting department in the overall financial management of the organization. It highlights the department's responsibility for providing accurate and timely financial information to management and other stakeholders. The text also emphasizes the importance of maintaining a strong working relationship with the audit firm and ensuring that all audit findings are promptly addressed and corrected.

5. The fifth and final part of the document provides a summary of the key points discussed and offers some concluding remarks. It reiterates the importance of adherence to the established procedures and the need for a high level of attention to detail in all financial reporting activities. The text concludes by expressing confidence in the organization's ability to maintain accurate and reliable financial records and to provide a high quality of financial information.

dred men out of their scanty resources, for a considerable period entirely alone and unaided in their work, we feel that they may well take to themselves a full share in the achievements of the regiment whose birth and early life were so largely the result of their personal exertions and sacrifice. (Perry's Saints: Nicholes, Boston, 1886.) With the regiment thus raised, Mr. Avery went out as regimental quartermaster. He was soon afterwards promoted to the rank of Brigade Quartermaster, Second Brigade, Tenth Army Corps. He went with the expedition under Admiral Dupont, in 1861, at the bombardment of Port Royal, S. C., and afterwards joined the Army of the Potomac at City Point, and was the same under General Grant before Petersburg and Richmond, having again been promoted, with the rank of Colonel, as Quartermaster of the Tenth Army Corps of the Army of the Potomac. Receiving his honorable discharge at the end of his three year term of service he returned home to Brooklyn, where he has since been engaged in mercantile pursuits.

Heron Foster and Julia Manuel; children: Miriam Foster, born Jan 10, 1887 (adopted). Rose Foster, born May 31, 1890. Julia Foster, born Jan. 5, 1892. Residence Springville, Pa.

Rachel G. Foster was born in Pittsburg, Pa. Her father was the late J. Heron Foster, of the Pittsburgh Dispatch. Her mother was born in Johnstown, N. Y., where Elizabeth Cady Stanton was born, and was Mrs. Stanton's Sunday-school pupil and afterwards her personal friend. When Rachel was a half-grown girl, Mrs. Stanton lectured in Pittsburg, and shortly afterwards a suffrage meeting was held in Mrs. Foster's house and an organization formed, with Mrs. Foster as vice-president.

Thus the girl grew up in an atmosphere of radicalism, and a suffragist from birth-right as well as from conviction. She was educated in the private schools, first in Pittsburg and afterwards in Philadelphia, whither the family removed in 1871, and took part of the Harvard examination, traveled extensively in Europe, was presented at the English court, studied political economy in the University at Zurich, Switzerland.—[From the Business Woman's Journal, 1889.

The scope of our work prevents giving a much more extended notice of this very remarkable woman, but it ought to be known to the family of Averys that one of the leading women in the great suffrage movement is a member of the great family.

1854

COLONEL ISAAC WHEELER AVERY was born in St. Augustine, Florida, May 2, 1837. His father, for whom he was named, could trace an unbroken line of honorable ancestry to England as far back as 1359. His mother, Mary Moore King, was born in Palmer, Mass., formerly Kingston, settled by her ancestor, John King, of Edwardstone, England, in 1713, and named after him, whose grandson, Daniel King, was a Revolutionary soldier. She moved to Savannah, Ga., in 1845.

Col. Avery was taught by two noted teachers, Rev. George White, author of "Statistics" and "Collections," of Georgia, and William T. Feay, and graduated at Oglethorpe University, near Milledgeville, Ga., in 1854, taking first Sophomore prize for eloquence in a large class at fourteen years of age. He taught a large school, at eighteen, at Warthen's Store, in Washington county, for a year, to review his college course, and in 1855-6 was, at nineteen (that he might get acquainted with public men and measures), the legislative correspondent at Milledgeville (the capital of Georgia then), of the two leading dailies of the State, the Augusta Constitutionalist, edited by James Gardner, candidate for governor in 1857, and the Savannah Republican. He read law with Hon. Junius Wingfield, of Eatonton, and Lloyd & Owens, of Savannah, and was admitted to the bar in 1860, and began practice with the latter firm.

He took part in the capture of Fort Pulaski, January, 1861, and enlisted as a private in the first company accepted for the war, the Oglethorpe Light Infantry, part of the Eighth Georgia Infantry, the company being tendered on his motion, and he served through the war to the close. After the first battle of Manassas, in which he fought, he became Captain, Major, Lieutenant-Colonel and Colonel of Cavalry in the west, commanding a brigade the last year. The Richmond Press announced his promotion as Brigadier the last part of the war, but in the chaos of the close he did not receive his commission or assume the title.

After the war Col. Avery, penniless, took, in 1865, a successful cross-tie contract at Sandersville, Ga., on the Central railroad, making his first money; and moving to Dalton, Ga., in 1866, he began a good law practice. He wrote a Digest of the Supreme Court Reports in 1866, subscribed to by the legislature, to be combined with Bacon's Digest. He was delegate to the first State Democratic convention after the war, December 5, 1867, on the Business committee, and mainly wrote the platform. He moved to Atlanta in May, 1869, becoming chief editor of the foremost Southern paper, the Atlanta Constitution, for years, still practicing the law; was Delegate at large in the Baltimore Presidential convention in 1872, and on the Platform committee, opposing Greeley's nomination; was appointed the same year member and Secretary of the State Democratic Executive committee of Georgia; bought in 1875 an interest with Henry W. Grady in and edited the Atlanta Herald, selling from ill health after one year; was Secretary of the Georgia Executive department, tendered unsolicited by Governor Alfred H. Colquitt, serving from 1877 to 1883, under Governors Colquitt, James S. Boynton and Alexander H. Stephens; published in 1881 a "History of Georgia," covering the period from 1850 to 1880, of secession, the civil war and reconstruction, and having a large sale North, West and South; started and edited the Atlanta Evening Capitol in 1885, carrying prohibition in Atlanta the only time, and selling out in one year, in 1886, on account of ill health, leaving the paper with a circulation of 6,500 daily subscribers, and having earned thirty-five per cent. on the stock, a phenomenal experience for a new Southern daily its first year.

In 1886, on the election of Grover Cleveland as President, Col.

Avery was recommended by his own State and many of the Southern Senators for United States Minister to Austria; was appointed Chief of the Public Debt division in the United States Treasury department in 1887, serving three years, and concurrently attending to official matters of weight for United States Senator Joseph E. Brown, his cherished friend; was in 1890 warmly pressed by a large number of United States Senators and Georgia officials of all views for United States Appraiser under the Customs Administrative law, but was deemed by the Republican executive too pronounced a Democrat; and that same year became and is now associate editor for Georgia, of the "National Cyclopædia of American Biography." He has declined the use of his name for the Legislature, Congress, and the Constitutional convention of 1865.

Col. Avery was an ardent and brave officer in the war, and noted for coolness and daring in trying crises, and had a peculiarly eventful military career, taking active part, from the seizure of Fort Pulaski to the end, being both a prisoner and almost mortally wounded. He declined the Colonelcy of a twelve-months Tennessee regiment to retain command of his Georgia Cavalry Squadron, enlisted for the war.

He raised and led the Fourth Georgia Regiment of Cavalry, with fifteen hundred men, surrendering fifty-eight, under Gen. Joe Johnston, in North Carolina, all that were left from over one hundred battles and skirmishes. He was captured by Sheridan in 1862, and specially exchanged under request by flag-of-truce from Gen. Beauregard to Gen. Halleck, at Corinth, Miss., and was shot through the stomach and spine at the battle of New Hope Church, and the wound was declared mortal at the time; from which he is on crutches now, having been taken down in 1888 with it and bed-ridden for twelve months, and his recovery declared a miracle by the doctors.

Gen. Joe Johnston, in his "Narrative," notes his retaining command a while, thus wounded. Gen. Beauregard complimented him by special order for valuable scouting at Corinth, Miss., he penetrating the Federal lines and obtaining necessary information at the General's request. Major-General John A. Wharton wrote of him that there was "no better officer" in his division. Lieutenant-General Joseph Wheeler officially reported him a "gallant and discreet officer."

As a journalist and literateur, Col. Avery wields a strong and scholarly pen, and carries with his ability and fearlessness a conspicuous justice and conservatism. In the reconstruction days he started the phenomenal career of the Constitution of Atlanta, Ga., and it was a co-incidence that he inducted into journalism Henry W. Grady, who continued the good work.

Just after the war society was lawless and demoralized; men were used to the license of camps, and a certain violence marked the discussion of public issues. Col. Avery, not then, as now, a devout Methodist, resolved to correct this wide and grave evil as far as the example of the leading paper of the State could, while avoiding offense, by holding others responsible for personal abuse. He had four affairs of honor, forcing men to undo aspersion. Raised in Savannah, then a home of the code, he resorted to means which, as a churchman, he now condemns. Gentle, sunny, home-loving and courteous, it was incongruous that so amiable a person should have been so ardent a soldier and a user of the duel, even for the right.

In his editorial service on that powerful paper, the Atlanta Constitution, which he directed in the days in which the broad and solid foundation was laid for its remarkable success and influence, Col. Avery did what he regards as the best work of his life. The State was wrecked from the war, and that was the time of its rehabilitation.

Col. Avery had some notable controversies with the ablest men of the State, among them Alexander H. Stephens as editor of the Atlanta Sun, in which Mr. Stephens urged the O'Connor Democratic bolt, and the State went overwhelmingly against O'Connor; and Col. Avery defeated Linton Stephens for delegate to the Baltimore convention; and a sharp correspondence with Governor James M. Smith about the twice-paid bonds, which Col. Avery exposed, the press endorsed, and the legislature investigated and corrected.

His "History of Georgia" had the highest encomiums from the press and critics.

Col. Avery and his brilliant history had this signal test of its truth and fairness, that dealing with living men and present events written by an actor in them, deep in their contests, subject to their passions, and with bias to his own side and views, and under unsparing scrutiny to expose errors, the accuracy and justice of the work has never been assailed, though universally read in the State.

Besides this work, that will last, Col. Avery has been a constant contributor to the magazines and papers of the country, and the author of a host of important pamphlets and industrial publications.

He is an earnest church worker and is now chairman of a church committee to raise funds to build a large Methodist church in North Atlanta, and has carried the matter where a magnificent lot has been bought and the first men of the city are pushing the Christian project.—From the History of the City of Atlanta.

NINTH GENERATION.

2128

RUFUS LORD AVERY was born in Mansfield, Ohio, April 16, 1838. He was educated at Kenyon College, after which he entered the mercantile business with his father. In 1860 he formed a mercantile partnership with F. E. Tracy. This firm has had a prosperous existence of thirty-three years and is still carried on as first founded, retaining Captain Rufus Avery's name and interest. At the opening of the Rebellion, he was one of the first to sign the roll of Company C, Fifteenth Ohio Infantry, April 17, 1861. He was made Sergeant and promoted in the field to Second Lieutenant.

He was with his regiment at Phillipi, and a few days later at Rich Mountain, and took part in the operations in the Cheat River Valley, which resulted in driving the enemy from that part of West Virginia. He was in the long pursuit of one hundred and thirty miles to Buchanan. The term of the regiment having expired, it returned to Ohio for reorganization, in August, 1861. The necessities of Captain Avery's business demanded his personal efforts and he did not return to the field till May, 1864. During this entire interval he assisted in organizing and drilling troops for the field. In May, 1864, he marched, as Captain of Co. A, in the One Hundred and Sixty-third Ohio Infantry. The regiment spent a month in the intrenchments at Washington, and reached Deep Bottom Bridge June 14, 1864 and took position at Fort Waltham in the intrenchments fronting Petersburg. On June 16, he commanded the skirmish line in a raid made under the command of Colonel Francis B. Pond to cut the railroad between Richmond and Petersburg. They had destroyed six miles of the road, when they were attacked by Gen. Malone's division, and after a stubborn fight were forced to withdraw. Captain Avery contracted "Chickahominy" fever on an expedition, under General Gilman Marston, for the relief of a foraging expedition, operating in the peninsula, in July; and from that disease died in the hospital, on the receiving ship "Matilda," off Bermuda Hundred, Virginia, August 2, 1864. He gave his life freely for his country. He was a true and affectionate comrade, a brave and devoted soldier, a patriotic citizen and a tender husband and father.

DAVID M. AVERY enlisted in the 17th Regiment, Co. H, Connecticut Volunteers, in August, 1862. He was wounded in the left thigh, at Chancellorsville, May 3, 1863; was in the hospital at Brooks' Station, then at McClellan's Hospital, near Philadelphia. Soon after this he was taken sick with a fever. He recovered from the fever and his wound began to heal, and was then taken with malarial chills and was not able to leave the hospital till the next spring. He was absent from his regiment 13 months, and it was then stationed in Florida. He joined his regiment, and when marching near Jacksonville, was sun-struck at two different times, which disabled him from very active duty, but he remained until his term of enlistment had expired, when he returned to his former home, New Canaan, Conn. He has never recovered his former health.

NAMES OF THE AVERY'S WHO FELL AT FORT GRISWOLD, SEPTEMBER 6, 1781.

Captain Elijah Avery,	Captain Elisha Avery,
Lieutenant Ebenezer Avery,	Ensign Daniel Avery,
Sergeant Christopher Avery,	Sergeant Jasper Avery,
Sergeant Solomon Avery,	David Avery,
	Thomas Avery.

NAMES OF THE WOUNDED, PAROLED AND LEFT AT HOME.

Lieutenant Parke Avery, jr., lost one eye.
 Ensign Ebenezer Avery, in the head.
 Amos Avery, in the hand.

PRISONERS CARRIED OFF.

Sergeant Rufus Avery,	Caleb Avery,
Peter Avery,	Nathan Avery, who escaped.

The large proportion of officers among the killed and wounded is accounted for by the fact that after six years of war, many men had been in the army or militia and earned their titles. When the alarm was sounded, the same spirit which had raised them to command, at once brought them to the fort as volunteers. They were there prompt for duty.

In the battle of Fort Griswold there were, according to Charles Allyn, one hundred and sixty-seven men and boys, of whom eighty-eight were killed, thirty-five were wounded and paroled, fourteen others not taken prisoners, and twenty-seven taken prisoners and sent to New York.

INDEX.

AVERY FAMILY—DESCENDANTS OF JAMES, JR.

If your name is a common name, like James or John, it will be easier to find your mother's or wife's maiden name, in the next index. These will give you both page and number, from which you can trace your line of descent back to Christopher or by reversing the order of numbers, from James, junior, down to yourself, and forward to the end. The name that follows the number is the maiden name of the wife, used to distinguish individuals of the same name.

THE HOUSE OF THOMAS AVERY.

CHAPTER THREE.

THOMAS AVERY.

THOMAS AVERY seems to have been a very successful Indian agent and interpreter, and, during the latter part of his life, lived in Montville, Conn, on land near the Mohegan Indian reservation, where, about the year 1700, he built the house which is now owned by Mr. Kinney H. Barnes, on the Norwich road, near the school-house, which is now (1893) standing, and of which we give an illustration. In the year 1693, he was approved as captain of the train band, on the east side of the river, now Groton, and the following year was chosen a deputy for New London, Groton then being a part of New London.

On the 22d day of June, 1720, Capt. Thomas Avery and Capt. James Avery, his brother, were appointed interpreters, in a matter in which the Indians of Mohegan were interested, before the Governor and Council at New London.

About the year 1721, Ceazer, the Sachem of Mohegan, conveyed to Thomas Avery 160 acres of land, in consideration of kindness shown to the Sachem by Avery and his family. This land answers the description given in the deed. About ten years previous to his death, Mr. Thomas Avery conveyed his farm to his son, Abraham, for love and good will, in consequence of the infirmities of old age.

Capt. Avery and his wife, Hannah, were among those who were first to organize the Church in North Parish, in 1772—their names appearing first on the records, giving the original covenanters. Thomas had previously joined the First Church of Christ in New London in 1682. He died and was buried in Montville.

ABRAHAM AVERY, jr., sixth son of Captain Thomas Avery, was admitted a member of the church, at Montville, Ct., at the same time with his wife and father, in 1722, being among the first organizers. He was chosen an elder in the church in 1750.

On the 5th day of May, 1714, he was a witness for the Mohegan Indians, before the General Court, in a matter where the Indians had made complaint to the Governor, that one Peter Mann had set up a frame of a house on their land, contrary to the laws of the Colony, and against their protests. In October, 1733, Mr. Avery and Adonijah Fitch were, by the General Court, appointed Grand Jurors for the County of New London.

They were authorized and directed, "specially to make diligent search after, and due presentment of, all breaches of the laws made to prevent the selling of strong drink to Indians." Ben Uncas, then Sachem of the Mohegans, had complained to the Governor, "that, notwithstanding the laws then in force to prevent selling strong drink to the Indians, there was continually much sold to the Mohegans, by means whereof their estates were impoverished, their manners debauched, and themselves rendered more untractable to receive the Christian faith." "To prevent this destruction of property and indecent manners among them, Abraham Avery and Adonijah Fitch, both of whom were then living in the immediate vicinity of the tribe, were appointed Grand Jurors to complain of and arrest all persons found selling liquor to Indians, and to seize any liquor found in the possession of any Indian and confiscate the same."

The records of the Second Society in the North Parish show that Abraham Avery was a prominent man and held important offices in the society. In the year 1724 he was chosen one of a committee of three "to survey and lay out the minister's land in the parish, and to sell a portion of the same" In 1737 he was chosen one of the society's committee, and also in 1741, he was on the School committee. In 1746, he was chosen one of a committee to arrange with the Indians, relative to their attending public worship at the Parish church. He was last chosen as one of the society's committee in 1770.

CAPTAIN OLIVER AVERY was born near New London, and removed to Charlemont about 1750, or fifteen years before the town was organized. On the breaking out of the Revolution, he raised a company of minute men, on the Lexington alarm, and marched to Cambridge, Mass., but on the reorganization of the Continental army he, with some others, returned, and those who remained participated in the battle of Bunker Hill. He retained his title until his death. His frame was large, dignified and commanding in appearance; his spirit was courageous, with great decision of character. He purchased land on the beautiful Deerfield river, about a mile in length, including an area now divided into seven farms. His eldest son was drowned in crossing the river, and the second, Walter, was taken captive by the Indians and carried to Canada, where he remained several years, but finally escaped. He suffered, as all the Deerfield captives suffered, as is related in histories, but the full particulars we have been unable to ascertain. Four of his children died in August, 1777, probably from some epidemic.

He commenced to clear his farm before marriage, and built a log cabin, which he occupied till 1786. The wild animals were of great annoyance, and sometimes made destructive havoc in his flocks and herds. With his trusty gun he in one year killed thirty wolves, nineteen bears, sixty deer and two moose. There was an Indian trail along the bank of the river, but not any road for several years. There was a fort about a mile away, but whether he was compelled to flee to it for safety is not known. When his first wife sickened, her youngest child was a babe, and there was no physician nearer than Deerfield, fifteen miles distant. He started, with nothing but blazed trees to guide his footsteps, reached the physician, obtained the medicine, and retraced his steps with a heavy heart and weary limbs, only to find that his partner had been called home during his absence. Previous to this a young lady had removed into the settlement, from New Hampshire. She came on horse-back and soon was taking care of the motherless children, and in a few months was married to the father.

In 1780 he built the historic house that is still standing in good repair. It was thirty by forty feet square, and the timber was all hewn, from sills to ridge-pole, and nearly all oak. The base to the chimney was twelve feet square; there were two fire-places and a brick oven in the basement, three fire-places and one brick oven on the main floor, and the chimney, where it emerged from the roof, was about three feet square. The house fronts the south, and the two front rooms remain almost exactly as they were built and finished, more than a century ago. The pioneers of the town enjoyed but very few holidays, and this family was no exception to the rule. Industry was the motto. During the spring months, the hum of the flax and tow wheels mingled with the noisy loom, and was heard from early morn till dewey eve. A large portion of the wearing apparel for the summer, the bed and table linen, and even pocket handkerchiefs and sewing thread were made from the flax that was raised on the farm. In the autumn the cards, spinning-wheel and loom were again brought into service, for woolen clothing and bedding for winter use must be made for the entire family. At the approach of cold weather the shoemaker's hammer was heard from the chimney corner. The shoes were made by the father, or an itinerant shoemaker. With the advent of woolen and cotton mills, and the shoe factory, these labors have passed away, but the wheels and loom remain, silent reminders of the industry of those long passed away.

The west front room may well be called the historical room. It was finished in a superior manner, for that period. Sorrow and joy have intermingled in its history. As the aged became infirm, this was their room, and six, between the ages of seventy-nine and ninety-two, have passed from it. One middle aged mother and four children have died in; it there have been twenty-three births, all Averys, and some marriages.

The old house was re-covered in 1860, and the great chimney removed and two smaller ones erected, and if it is well cared for, it will last another century.

JONATHAN AVERY entered the Army of the Revolution at the age of nineteen. He was an orderly sergeant in his company, and was with Washington when the army left New York for Long Island. His order book is still in existence, in the possession of Miss Julia M. Avery, La Moille, Ill. He was a man of true courage and irresistible humor. When retreating from New York he lost all of his clothing excepting what he had on his person, which was poor and soon wore out. He was a favorite with the officers, and they replenished his wardrobe from their own, and his captain gave him a pair of trousers. The captain was a very devout man and it was well known that he prayed only for the cause and the soldiers. One night Jonathan was sent out with five men on a difficult and dangerous scout. Some of the men were quite fearful, which his quick eye soon noticed, and calling to them cheerfully, he said, "Men, you need not be afraid; just think of the prayers that have been offered up for you in these old breeches." Anecdotes of his wit still float through the family, and his rhymes and jests are still quoted. He was buried at Charlemont, Mass., and his grave-stone bears the noble inscription, "A Soldier of the Revolution."

Anna, eldest daughter of 56-18-4 and Rebecca Stevens ; married, Nov. 13, 1800, Isaac

Berin, of East Hampton, Ct., b. 1773, d. May 8, 1870 ; children : Pamela, born Oct. 9, 1801. William, born June 17th, 1804. Chauncey, born July 7, 1806. Isaac A., born April 29, 1808. Abner Griswold, born July 10, 1810. Philo, born Aug. 12, 1813. Alice S., born July 3, 1815. Adaline, born Aug. 8, 1817. Belinda, born Jan. 17, 1820.

The business history of this family is a very unique and interesting one. In 1830, William Berin, the eldest son of Anna Avery and Isaac Berin, commenced the manufacture of sleigh-bells, in East Hampton, Conn., the little town in which his parents lived. One by one the other sons, as they became of age, engaged in the same business, all the labor of their little foundry being done by hand and horse power. In 1837, they purchased a valuable water privilege in the town, which enabled them to increase their business very rapidly. Later on, the well-known firm of Berin Brothers' Manufacturing Company was organized composed entirely of members of the family, and by new inventions, continually increasing facilities, energy and forethought, their business has so increased that now they probably manufacture more than half the bells that are made and sold in the United States and Canada.

All of the sons, as well as the sons-in-law and many of the grandchildren, are or have been employed in this business ; and many have filled important and honorable private offices and trusts in their county and State. Philo Berin was a Lieutenant-Colonel of the State militia, and three of the grandsons were officers in the war of the Rebellion.

ABRAHAM AVERY, 3d, was born in Montville, Ct., June 22, 1782. His mother, who was a granddaughter of Rev. Timothy Stevens, first minister of Glastonbury, Ct., dying when he was quite young, he was placed in the family of a Mr. Hyde, of Norwich, to learn the tanner's and saddler's trade. Soon after he became of age he settled in business in Wilbraham, Mass., where he was married Oct. 20, 1808, to Elizabeth Bliss, youngest daughter of the Hon. Abel Bliss, whose grandfather was one of the first settlers of Wilbraham and a large land owner there. Here he soon became one of the prominent business and public men of the town, as well as of the western part of the State, particularly in Hampden County, where his counsel was often sought in new and important enterprises, as his quick and sound judgment, his clear perception of the right, made him a safe counselor.

He soon became a strong friend of the educational interests of the day, as he felt the want of those advantages which many of his associates possessed; he was determined to do all that he could to furnish educational facilities to those in moderate circumstances, and this induced him to become one of the founders of the Wesleyan Academy at Wilbraham, as well as one of its most watchful and earnest workers during all of its early struggles and successes, contributing time and money without stint, until it became one of the most prominent and flourishing schools of that class in the country. He was also one of the founders and for many years a trustee of the Wesleyan University, at Middletown, Ct., to which he contributed liberally and ever took a deep interest in its welfare.

In town and county affairs he was quite active, having from time to time filled nearly every office in the gift of his neighbors, and he was usually called upon to preside at public meetings. Many times he represented his town in the State legislature at Boston. He was a stern man, yet fond of story and anecdote, and enjoyed exceedingly, in a quiet way, the comic side of life, as the many anecdotes told of him amply attest. He was quick to decide, firm as a rock, just to a fault, powerful in debate, and it is said that few cared to antagonize him in public assemblies, as he could always carry his audience with him, and he would never be defeated in any measure in which he was interested. He retired from active business in 1842, having secured a competency for his remaining years, and died at Wilbraham, of apoplexy, Oct. 8, 1853.

The following amusing anecdote of Mr. Avery, which will illustrate one phase of his character is copied from the Rev. Dr. Stebbins' Memorial History of Wilbraham; premising that Mr. Avery had always stoutly maintained that it was unjust to compel citizens to support preaching of the standing order when they did not believe in the doctrines preached, and was determined that the law should be repealed, took this measure among others of making it obnoxious and unpopular :

“The collectors found it very difficult at times to get the taxes of the heretics in town, and no little cunning, as well as spunk, was sometimes displayed in escaping payment. Abraham Avery was a prominent man in the town, a tanner, saddler and harness-maker ; a man of great energy, indomitable persistency, pious and plucky to admiration ; from hair to heel a Methodist. He was cunning withal, and liked a practical joke, so be it was worthy of his religious profession. He owed a tax. He wouldn't pay it. The collector of the parish determined to have it. ‘Get it, then,’ said Avery. Now, Avery could make a good saddle—one that the Queen's horse-guards would be proud of in finish, and whose strength would have carried any one of the six hundred through the immortal charge of Inkermann. So, in his meditations, Avery determined to make a saddle to pay his tax withal. He selected the pieces of leather which best pleased the eye, and fitted them together as he well knew how, being a skilful worker in leather, and mounted it with shining metal, so that it was very tempting to look upon, like the forbidden fruit of Eden. Avery knew that the strength was not equal to the beauty thereof ; but as it was not for sound doctrine he made it, so he delighted in correspondency. The collector came ; the shop had been cleared of most of the finished work besides, and when he cast his eye upon the saddle he did covet it much for his taxes, and was much delighted when Avery declined to pay them. ‘I must take this nice saddle, then,’ said the publican. ‘Take it, then,’ quoth Avery, gruffly. It was taken. Avery's face was sparkling all over with delight as the constable put the prize in his wagon and drove off. It was sold at auction and brought a great price, far above the amount of the tax ; for it was known that Avery's saddles were of the best. The constable offered the excess of the sale over the tax to Avery, but he would not take it. The constable tendered to him the balance in gold ; Avery said he would have nothing to do with it. The saddle was purchased by a man from Belchertown. He was tempted to try it early. It looked magnificently on his horse's back. He sprang upon it, Out came one stirrup, down broke the seat, out came the bridge, off dropped the sides, and he spake words of Avery and the saddle which were not lawful to be spoken, and should not be written. He came to Avery in great wrath, and asked him if he did not warrant his saddles. 'Certainly,' said Avery. 'Well, then,' he replied, 'look at this saddle.' 'Ah,' said Avery, 'that is the Presbyterian saddle, I have nothing to do with that.' And, with a relish of satisfaction, he again drew his strong waxed-end through the leather upon which he was at work, for he enjoyed hugely what had come to pass."

The obnoxious law was repealed the following season, and heretics were not again the victims of unjust taxation.

HENRY AVERY'S NARRATIVE.

My grandfather, Ephraim, was born in New London, or Groton, about 1727, and removed about 1760 to a mountain in Montgomery, Mass., with his family, and is believed to have been the first settler. Perhaps my mother's father was with him. They cut their way up the mountain and settled on a large tract of land and went to work, with his boys, to clear it up.

In 1765 he built a story-and-a-half house, the first frame house in the town, and it was standing in 1889. All the children of my parents were born in it, and all in one room. In 1811 or 1812, my father built a two-story house, which also stands, the family having outgrown the old one. My life has been rather an eventful one, as my father died and left me at 11 years old, with mother and three or four sisters on the farm. My two brothers were married and removed. As I grew a little older I had to do a man's work on the farm and take care of the stock, and in fact was my mother's main help. Sometimes we would let the farm on shares, so that I could get a little chance at school, but in 1834 I tore myself away and went to work for a house in New York, and in September of that year they wanted me to go to the State of Mississippi, with a stock of goods. I was pleased to, did go, not knowing, of course, what my experience would be. I shipped on a brig with my goods, and when off Cape Hatteras we were struck by the equinoctial gale in the morning, which lasted two days and one night, and we all expected to go down. On the first morning of the gale, our captain began to drink heavily and was drunk through all the gale of thirty-six hours and several days after, or until his brandy gave out. He got up in the night, with the water slushing about the cabin, stuck his head out of the hatch-way and asked the mate what they had better do, "if they had not better throw out a spar, to keep the vessel out of the trough of the sea?" The mate replied that he did not know what to do. The captain turned around and remarked, "We shall all go to hell before morning." He then took another drink and went to sleep. You had better believe I did not sleep any that night. We sailed about four weeks before we landed at Mobile, Alabama, and from there I worked my way up to Mississippi, and to the Choctaw Nation. The next year I went out by land, and drove a pair of horses and a "carry-all." We hauled our fine light goods over the mountains of Virginia and Tennessee, a distance of over 1,200 miles, and taking from five to six weeks to make the journey. I traveled it six times, making a distance of about 7,500 miles. We could haul our light goods that distance and have them on sale before any one by Mobile and the sea route could do so.

You may want to know what profits we had to charge to make it pay. We added ten per cent. on the cost for buying and freight, then marked them 100 per cent profit. It cost a great deal to get goods to Columbus, Miss.—that was our place of business, on the Tombigbee river. "What do you think of that for high?" In the spring of 1835 I had a desire to go to the Chickasaw Nation, more for curiosity and adventure than for trade and profit. I found me an interpreter, David Walker, a nephew of Gen. Winfield Scott, who told me there was neither roads nor bridges, but I would see the Indian in his wild state. So we got ready and started, one beautiful afternoon in March, from Cotton Gin Port, on the banks of the Tombigbee river. Our first drive was ten miles, to Mrs. Colbert's, a squaw, and the next drive we had to make was to the next house, thirty miles distant. After eating our wild turkey and corn bread, coffee without sugar or milk, we started; in a short time it began to rain hard, and in a few miles we came to one of those sluggish streams, with mud about knee deep to the horse, and when he got to about the middle of the stream he fell down, the water running into the front end of the "carry-all." He lay there and could not get up. I pulled off my coat and boots, rolled up my trousers, and went in and unhooked the traces, gave the old horse a kick, and with a great effort he got up and out of the stream. I waded through the stream with the boxes of goods, pulled out the "carry-all" and loaded up the goods, and traveled all the afternoon, and got to Talabaneda Swamp, two or three miles long, where there was a sort of an old road which the merchants of Nashville had used to transport their goods to the white people. There was no fresh track after we got through, and about four o'clock we found ourselves on the bank of the Tabalay creek. The water in the channel was over the horse's back, and it was a branch of the Tombigbee river. There was the river staring us in the face, no bridge, and three miles to the nearest Indian house. What could we do? We must get over or camp on the bank with our goods, and it began to look serious with us. But after consulting awhile we concluded that if we could find a tree with plenty of limbs, we could carry our boxes of goods across through it to the opposite bank. So then we went up the stream a few rods and found the very thing we wanted, a large oak tree full of limbs that had fallen entirely across the stream. So we toted our goods over, but the next thing was to get the carry-all over. I divested myself of all clothing but shirt and drawers, tied the driving lines to the singletree, and pulled the carry-all into the stream until it almost floated, then I mounted the horse, with the line in my hand, and told Walker when I got to the end of my tether, to give the carry all a push and let her go. The channel was near the bank and I had not gone far before the horse was over his back in water, his nose sticking out, and I up to my waist; he made a few plunges and finally touched bottom, about knee deep. I jumped off and looked for the carry-all and Walker had pushed it into the channel, where it had turned over, and it was going down stream with the wheels sticking out of the water. By holding tight on the line when I struck bottom, I told Walker that I could hold it until he could cross on the tree, and come to my assistance. I stood shivering in the cold water, with not a dry thread on me, but he finally got there, and we soon pulled it ashore, turned it over, loaded up our goods, and then drove three miles to an Indian cabin: I told Walker he must drive, as I was wetter than he, and I took the only old blanket we possessed, and wrapped it around my shoulders.

We went at a brisk trot, and in a short time we reached the cabin, on a hill, and asked the people if we could stay all night, and were answered, "Yaw, we brothers and friends." They had a good stable for the horse, with plenty of corn and fodder. The family consisted of three, father, mother, and a daughter of fourteen or fifteen and quite pretty. They had a big fire in the mud and stick fire-place; they got us some supper, such as it was; it consisted of smoked fish, pork, corn-bread, the corn ground in a hand-mill and not sifted. This was mixed up with a little water, and when it got cold it was hard enough to knock you down. This, with a little coffee without milk or sugar, was all we had, but we could have eaten raw-hide, as we had had nothing since morning. The house consisted of a single room and the bed-room was merely a frame of poles fastened to the logs, and poles laid across, then a few boards and then blankets. When they got ready for bed, they simply crawled in under their blanket, and said nothing to us where we should sleep. In fact they had no bed for us, and we used the one poor blanket we had, and lay down on the floor, where we slept soundly till morning. When we awoke we were chilled to the bones, the fire was out, and there was no lining to the floor, and the cold came up through the cracks terribly. We soon had some kind of breakfast and started for the next house, a drive of fifteen miles. Our bill for the night was three dollars.

We got there about noon, had some kind of fare, and started for the next one, fifteen miles, to an Indian chief's by the name of Colbert. He had a plantation and slaves, and raised cotton. He had a daughter named Lydia; she had on black silk, with plenty of silver jewelry. They wore no gold ornaments—all silver. Our next drive was twelve miles, to Pontatoc, our destination, where the government had established a land office. It was in the woods; there land speculators were, and most of the buck Indians. I saw the Chickasaw King. He had a large silver ring in his nose. We stayed about three weeks, and returned in another way from what we went. I was in the South in the same business about a dozen years.

JULIA C. CHURCH graduated at the Albany Normal School in 1856, and proved herself to be a very successful and accomplished teacher. In 1857 she married Dr. George Abbott, of Hamburgh, N. Y. He first went out as surgeon of the 67th Regiment, N. G., S. N. Y., of which he had been surgeon many years, in June, 1863, at the same time that the Hon. Amos Avery volunteered. While they were out the Legislature of New York ordered the raising of a regiment of National Guards in every assembly district. The whole of the 67th Regiment was in the Fourth Assembly district, excepting that of his own town, which was in the Third. On their return Major-General Randell immediately selected him to take the appointment to raise a regiment in his assembly district, in which there was no military organization. He finally consented, raised the requisite 320 men in seven different companies, and was organized as the 98th Regiment in about 60 days. The State department complimented him highly, and said he raised a regiment the quickest of any man in the State. The next summer the regiment went out as one-hundred-days men, were gone one hundred and thirty-three days, and came back home full of "honor and glory" for having simply tried to do their duty.

HON. AMOS AVERY was born in East Charlemont, Mass., January 19, 1807, and was the fourteenth child of Amos and Eunice Avery. His mother was a daughter of Oliver Avery, but though of the same name, she is not aware that any relationship existed previous to marriage. At the burning of old Salem his maternal grandmother Avery took her three-year-old little girl and fled. Being closely pursued by the Indians, they took refuge in a hollow log. The dogs sniffed the log, barking, but the people had begun to rally and the Indians did not dare to delay their flight. Thus was providentially saved the little girl who afterwards became the mother of Amos.

His education was acquired in the common school, save one term's attendance, when 16 years old, at Ashfield Academy, then taught by the afterwards celebrated Mary Lyon, who founded the Mt. Holyoke Seminary. While attending this school he boarded at the same place with Miss Lyon.

Following this he served an apprenticeship of eighteen months in Ashfield, to learn the blacksmith's trade. He then went into Western New York and worked at his trade with his brother Abel, at Evans Center. About this time he bought an entire block of land on the Terrace in Buffalo for two hundred and fifty dollars, but this appeared so unpromising that when twenty-one he sold it and bought out his brother at Evans Center, where he has continuously resided since.

At Fort Salem, Mass., his maternal grandfather, Oliver Avery, was one of a scouting party who were fired into by Indians lying in ambush. Oliver fell with a fractured thigh. The Indian who shot him, leaving his ambush to scalp him, Oliver raised his gun and shot the Indian dead.

Oliver's comrades, seeing him fall and thinking him dead, fled leaving him to work his way back to the Fort, a distance of several miles, as best he could. His sufferings in the Indian wars were so great that he was imbued with the most intense hatred of the race, and used to enjoin upon his boys to "never leave an Indian alive, but kill him on the spot."

Oliver Avery, in his old age lived with his daughter, Eunice, and Amos, as a child of six years, remembers of an Indian coming to his father's house and sitting in the door. Amos' mother was trying to get rid of him, when the old grandfather, with hair as white as snow, came through the old kitchen, which was forty or fifty feet long, more as though he was flying than walking, bearing aloft a solid ivory-headed cane, which he brought down with such force as to break every slat from top to bottom in the back of the chair from which the Indian had barely sprung and made his escape, clearing the stone door-steps at one bound. This was the only Indian Amos had ever seen until he reached Erie County, a lad of eighteen. He was out gunning one day, when he discovered a moccasin footprint. He followed and soon saw an Indian and raised his gun to shoot, but thought he would wait a little. He took aim again, when he thought, "Perhaps those Indians never hurt my grandfather." The thought of its being a crime to shoot an Indian never occurred to him, and he would then have shot one as innocently as he would have shot a woodchuck.

He was very active in politics and commenced voting at nineteen. It came about thus wise: In 1826, while actively electing for Gurnsey as against Tracy for Member of Congress, Eli Bascom wanted him to vote. Amos replied, "I'm not twenty-one." "Come with me," says Bascom, "and I'll take care of you." On proffering his ballot the inspector asked "Are you twenty-one?" The Esquire promptly answered, "He knows how to vote as well as a man that weighs six hundred." That settled it and he voted.

In 1834 he commenced to practice law as a country pettifogger and was very successful, but he, however, acquired a better reputation as a peace-maker. In 1838 he was elected Justice of the Peace and since that time has filled that office more than forty years. He is now an active officiating magistrate, though over eighty-five, and is the oldest one in the State.

Being a splendid singer and full of enthusiasm, in the political campaign of 1840 he, with five others, built of basswood poles, a log cabin on wheels, that would easily seat a dozen persons. They ornamented the porch of the entrance on the one side with a sap yoke, the other an ox yoke, decorated it with pioneer emblems and the inevitable keg of hard cider, which he says was well patronized. A live coon chained to a pole on top, and with stars and stripes, a regulation streamer, and drawn by four horses, they attended every Whig meeting held within forty miles, between Buffalo and Fredonia making it their grand business to sign campaign songs and annoy "Loco Focos," and he says "they did it, too." Here is a sample of one of their songs:

Old Tip's the boy to swing the flail,
It makes the Loco Foco look so pale,
Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah! etc.

Another was:

What's the cause of this commotion, motion, motion,
All the country through?

It's the ball a rolling on for Tippecanoe and Tyler too,

And with them we will beat little Van, Van, Van. He's a used up man,

With them we will beat Little Van, etc.

Though thus active in politics he never sought political preferment, yet in 1857 he was forced to accept of the Whig nomination for Member of Assembly, and being elected became a member of the State Legislature of 1858. Having quite a taste for the military he early became identified with the militia; was made captain of a rifle company and afterwards promoted to the colonelcy of the regiment, which position he held for two years and then resigned. At the breaking out of the "Patriot War" in Canada, the "Junta" in Buffalo appointed him commander-in-chief of the patriot forces which they were raising on this side with which to invade and take Canada. Their numbers were so small and their munitions of war so inadequate that he refused to do more than to aid in preserving the peace on the lines, while some of the more zealous and excitable subordinates, with a few volunteers, pushed into the Queen's dominions, were quickly gobbled up by the red-coats and served a long imprisonment in Van Diemen's land as the reward of their temerity. In 1863, when Gen. Lee made his celebrated raid into Maryland, the militia of Western New York were called south. He, though in his 57th year, promptly volunteered as a private and went with the Sixty-seventh Regiment N. G., S. N. Y., to Harrisburg, etc., to aid in the staying of Lee's advance.

ABRAHAM AVERY, 4th, youngest child of Abraham, 3d, and Elizabeth Bliss Avery, was born in Wilbraham, Mass., Nov. 15, 1824. At an early age, he attended the academy in that town, and upon leaving for college he was the one chosen from the three hundred and fifty students to deliver the valedictory addresses. In 1844 he entered the Wesleyan University, at Middletown, Conn., of which his father was one of the founders. Here he spent three years, leaving in 1847, with the intention of taking his last college year at Harvard, and then entering the Law School, as his father intended he should do.

He soon changed these plans, however, as his desire had always been for a business life, and not a professional one. So, giving up his college life and the study of law, a little later he joined his brother-in-law, Mr. Geo. C. Rand, in the printing and publishing business, at No. 3 Cornhill, Boston. Here, commencing with a few small presses, in one or two little rooms, and a pay-roll of a hundred dollars a week, they worked and prospered till 1872, when they occupied the six large buildings Nos. 1, 3, 5, 7, 9 and 11 Cornhill, and Nos. 15, 17, 19 and 21 Washington street, six stories in height, all of which were filled with every kind of machinery for the manufacturing of books, a hundred tons of type, more than a hundred presses, giving employment to hundreds of workmen and a weekly pay-roll of many thousand dollars.

In that year, fire destroyed a part of these buildings, causing a loss of more than two hundred thousand dollars; and as the city voted to extend Washington street through their block to Hay-market Square, they were obliged to seek new quarters. They immediately made a contract for building the large block at the corner of Franklin and Federal streets, known as the "Franklin Buildings." In these buildings was soon fitted up probably the largest and most complete printing office in the United States, if not in the world. Here they continued business till 1878, when, owing to the continued poor health of Mr. Rand, and being reasonably well satisfied with the results of their past labors, they retired, leaving this large and prosperous plant, which had become well known in almost all parts of the country, to younger men.

During all of Mr. Avery's business life, he invariably refused to hold any public office. Since retiring, he has accepted a few public trusts. For many years a trustee of the Franklin Savings Bank, a director in the Shawmut Fire Insurance Company, a director in the Newton and Watertown Gas Light Company, the Foster Wharf Company, the Ashton Valve Company, the Eames Vacuum Brake Company, Boston director of the Provident Savings Life Assurance Company of New York, president of the European Globe Nail Company (with factories in Sweden), president of the Rand Avery Supply Company, director of the New England Railroad Publishing Company and of the Saint Andrews Land Company. He is also a life member of the New England Historical and Genealogical Society, of the Bostonian Society of the Young Men's Christian Union, of the New England Methodist Historical Society, and for many years one of the standing committee of Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale's Church. The degree of Master of Arts was conferred by the Wesleyan University.

Mr. Avery has been quite an extensive traveler, having, during his frequent trips abroad, visited nearly all the cities of Europe, from the North Cape to the Mediterranean; also most of the cities in the United States and Mexico. He died in Los Angeles, Cal., April 3, 1893.

A few short extracts from a very long article in the Paper World, giving the history and a description of the immense printing establishment of Rand & Avery, as it was when those gentlemen retired from business, may be of interest.

"The keen search for business of this new firm soon secured for them the printing of Mrs. Stowe's 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.' The publication of this book, first in a newspaper, and soon followed by an issue of two duodecimo volumes, brought much fame to the author and some notoriety and profit to the printers. Four hundred thousand copies, or eight hundred thousand volumes were soon issued in this country, every copy of which bore the imprint of this firm. The demands for this immense edition seemed to sharpen the cravings of the public appetite for other publications, even though of an entirely different nature. The printing of the 'Lampighter' (now almost forgotten) then followed, having a sale of one hundred thousand copies.

"In the printing of these and other large editions of books, Messrs. Rand & Avery, with their accustomed pluck and energy, had provided themselves with extraordinary facilities for the rapid and economical issue of books in large editions, and they were thus enabled to take and execute satisfactorily any order, however large or pressing. No establishment in this country could outrank them.

"Among prominent books which followed each other in rapid succession were Peter Parley's works, the Rollo books, Macauley's England, Hume and Prescott's works, Waverly Novels, Dickens' works, the British Poets, etc. But to attempt to cite all the books whose issue bore the imprint of Rand & Avery, would be to cite hundreds of pages of catalogues. They were also among the earliest to develop the art of wood-cut printing in this country.

"In the early history of this firm, they were for several years the Boston city printers. Later in their history they were for five years printers for the State of Massachusetts.

"Year in and year out their imprint was to be found upon the publications of such houses as Crocker & Brewster, Phillips, Sampson & Company, Gould & Lincoln, John P. Jewell & Company, Lee & Shepard, Fuller, Osgood & Company, American Tract Society, Congregational Publishing Society, and hundreds of others; in addition to which, millions of copies of school and other books, for publishers in New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Chicago, New Orleans, San Francisco, and many other cities and towns, were constantly going through their press.

"Within the space of thirty years, this house had printed more than twelve million copies of Littell's 'Living Age,' forty million copies of the 'Well Spring,' ten million copies of the 'Child at Home,' and almost numberless copies of the 'Sunday School Gazette,' 'Boys and Girls Magazine,' 'Nursery,' 'Every Saturday,' 'Baptist Magazine,' 'Macedonian,' 'Life and Light,' and so on through a list almost without limit. As large a number as seven or eight million copies of pamphlets and almanacs have been turned out yearly, while many thousands of octavo pages of books have been going through the different processes of type-setting, proof-reading, printing and binding at the same time.

"They also had large contracts with patent medicine proprietors, such as Brown's Troches, Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, Perry Davis' Pain Killer, Kennedy's Medical Discovery, and many others. Some of their printing bills would astonish the reader, were the exact figures given, and the fabulous amounts which some of these popular patent medicine men spend yearly for printer's ink.

"During their long and successful business career, this firm has been fortunate in making the acquaintance of many celebrated people, whose offspring they have more or less assisted in the world and introduced to the public by means of their type and presses. Among them, they will remember such names as these, many of them having been frequent visitors to their office: Ralph Waldo Emerson, Longfellow, Holmes, Whittier, Howells, Dudley Warner, Aldrich, Mark Twain, Bret Harte, Walt Whitman, Charles Sumner, William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, Theodore Parker, Dr. Gannet, Star King, Edward Everett Hale, Bishop Haven, Dr. Cummings, Professor George Ticknor, Edward Everett, Rufus Choate, Robert C. Winthrop, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Julia Ward Howe, Mrs. Livermore, Hon. Henry Wilson, James G. Blaine, Gov. Andrew, Gov. Rice, Gov. Clafin, Gov. Long, Gov. Talbot, General Butler; not to mention hundreds of other authors and public men and women of less distinction, but many of them very interesting and intelligent people."

JONATHAN PETERSON was born in Truxton, Cortland county, N. Y., 1812. He was about 74 years old at the time of his death. He went West in 1836, by way of Erie canal and Lake Erie to Detroit, and across the State of Michigan on foot to Chicago, where he stopped a short time and then pushed on to Ottawa, where he spent the winter of 1836-37, and then in the spring of 1837 he came to Lee County and settled near where he has always lived and where he died and was buried. The cemetery is on his first and only farm. Mr. Peterson held various offices of trust in Sublette, and we are glad to be able to say that he discharged the duties of them ably and well. So far as is known he has always been an honored Christian man and a member of the Baptist church. He was one with whom it was a pleasure to do business, and a man social and friendly with the lowly as well as those rich and up in life, and it is cheering to call the many pleasant chats and kindly greetings he was so ready to give to all who had to do with him.—From local paper.

RICHARD BENJAMIN AVERY was born in Allegany, N. Y., June 8, 1831. His father died very early, and his mother, having re-married, moved to Oregon during the forties. Richard learned the printing business and attended Georgetown College, Kentucky. He was employed as a writer on the Missouri Democrat, then the organ of Hon. Thomas H. Benton. Later he was steamboat clerk on the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, and in the political campaign of 1860 he was traveling correspondent of the Missouri Republican, and left that position to enter the editorial service of the Chicago Times. He entered the army at the beginning of the Civil war as a private in an independent battalion from Chicago, and served about Cairo and in Southwestern Missouri. After the battle of Lexington he was authorized to raise a company, to be known as Company L of Colonel James A. Mulligan's Irish Brigade, in conjunction with Captain George H. Kennedy, and was commissioned as acting lieutenant. The War Department refused to muster the four additional companies desired by Colonel Mulligan, when, by arrangement with the latter, Avery took his portion of Company "L" to Wisconsin, where it was to form the nucleus of one of the regiments which, with Mulligan's own regiment, was to form a real "Irish Brigade," to be commanded by him. Commencing enlistments at Kenosha, rendezvousing the men at Madison, a full regiment was secured in a remarkably short time, and John L. Doran, of Milwaukee, was commissioned its colonel. In the selection of subordinate officers, for political reasons, Bernard Schulte was commissioned lieutenant instead of Avery, and the latter insisted that that was to the best interests of the service. Instead of joining Mulligan on the Potomac, the regiment was sent to General Grant, at Shiloh. Avery served with the regiment until after the evacuation of Corinth by Beauregard, and was discharged for disability July 6, 1862. He was taken to the Tisomingo hotel to recover, and remained with the army until after the surrender of Vicksburg, taking part in the battle of Corinth, October 5th and 6th, 1862. He was sent North with dispatches the latter part of December, and was captured by Col. G. G. Dibrell, of Forrest's Cavalry, at Crockett, Tenn., the day before the emancipation proclamation went into effect. He spent that memorable Christmas eve a prisoner in Forrest's camp. Next morning he refused to accept the parole offered him, and was granted a brief interview with General Forrest, to explain to him that he was a "correspondent of the Chicago Times," which paper was alleged to be copperhead in its tendencies, and it was hoped this would gain the "alleged correspondent" special favors. If General Forrest felt kindly toward that paper, he expressed an earnest inclination to incontinently hang the "alleged correspondent," in common with "all other newspaper men and preachers." After being assured by General Forrest that a "compulsory parole was not binding any longer than the compulsory force existed," Avery agreed to accept the objectionable parole, and keep it just as "long as inside Forrest's lines," and make no objection to being hung if again caught. After obtaining a good dinner at a residence inside the lines, Avery left the Confederate camp on foot, and was halted by the Federal pickets at Columbus, Ky., about forty miles distant, before midnight of the day which really witnessed the ennobling of five millions of human beings. He was at once taken before General Davies, and made a report of the exact condition of the Mobile and Ohio railroad, which he had walked over from Jackson, Tenn., to Columbus, and which For-rest's men believed they had wrecked; but which Avery knew could be fully repaired with the timber and iron he saw loaded on the train in front of General Davies' door. He reported that the Confederates had then left the line of the road, and their next stopping place would be Dresden, Tenn., and that the enemy did not then have even an organized company on the route between Columbus and Jackson, and that Gen. I. N. Haynie then really had at the latter place a much larger force in hand than Forrest would care to meet; and finally that General Grant was in a perilous position, solely because of insufficient supplies, and the country he was in was incapable of supporting his army for one single twenty-four hours. Further, that one of the dispatches, which he had brought through at no little danger, was a dispatch in cypher, in which he was assured General Grant advised the President of the desperate peril which menaced his gallant army. He advised General Davies that one of the dispatches he had destroyed after his capture, to preserve the information from the enemy, instructed General Davies to place himself in immediate telegraphic communication with General Rosecrans, and co-operate with him earnestly to the end that General Forrest might be prevented from crossing back to the eastern side of the Tennessee river, and at the same time General Haynie would be assisting both.

At that, General Davies pretended to doubt Avery. He disliked General Rosecrans so thoroughly that it is doubtful if he would have rendered him any useful help even in obedience to the order which Avery had destroyed, but anyhow it was safe to repudiate an order that could not be verified until the lines were again open, and he did it. In reply to all the earnest statements made by Avery, he said: "It all depends upon your reliability. My scouts tell me that Forest has 17,000 men just beyond the State line (less than 20 miles out), and I believe them. Before jeopardizing my force I must be convinced of your reliability." "Reliability be d—d," said Avery. "The fact that I have been entrusted with these dispatches should be sufficient warrant for my reliability. However, here's a simple method of settling that. I see a locomotive fired up and hitched to the loaded train I spoke of. Chain me to that locomotive with a "reliable" guard over me. Start that train with a force to repair the road within an hour. If you find one hundred regular soldiers, much less 17,000, between here and Jackson, have me shot like a dog. Do this and before 48 hours trains of supplies will be on the way to relieve General Grant, and a terrible disaster will be avoided." In an hour Avery had the substance of the dispatches he had destroyed, as well as the cypher dispatch, on the way to Colonel Stager, the telegraphic censor at Washington. General Davies dilly-dallied for a week, and General Grant had to withdraw his army to avoid starvation, thus releasing Gen. Johnston, and permitting him to consolidate with Pemberton at Vicksburg, when they fell upon General Sherman at Chickasaw bayou, and routed him with a loss of not less than 5,000 men, and all because General Davies' di-like for General Rosecrans would not permit him to recognize the "reliability" of R. B. Avery.

Until after the surrender of Vicksburg Mr. Avery continued with General Grant's army. He possessed the confidence of Generals Grant, Logan, McPherson, Thomas, and a great many able officers of less rank. En route from Chicago to Chattanooga, during the early winter of 1863-4, Mr. Avery stopped off at La Fayette, Indiana, to attend a war meeting, and while urging the men to enlist, his speech was interrupted by a man named Dodd asking: "If war is so nice why don't you go yourself?" Calling for a mustering officer, he immediately challenged Mr. Dodd to come forward and be mustered into the service, not merely promise to go, which promise might be broken. Mr. Dodd accepted the challenge and made a superb soldier, as did a number of others who enlisted under the spur of an emotion. It was proposed to elect Mr. Avery to either of the company positions he would accept, but he declined all, and showed his comrades that he had been carrying in his pocket the offer of a commission from Governor Dick Yates almost since the beginning of hostilities, and whenever tired of his comrades or his position and duties of a private soldier, he would accept an appointment from Governor Yates. During the summer of 1864, while serving in Alabama, the position of Major of his regiment became vacant, and it was offered him and he was urged to accept it. Needless to say he declined the honor, and was finally promoted from private soldier to First Lieutenant and Adjutant of the Eleventh Indiana Cavalry without his solicitation and almost against his protest. On the organization of the Cavalry Corps of the Military Division of the Mississippi, he was assigned to duty as Adjutant-General of the First Brigade of the Fifth Division, and as such was engaged in the battles of Franklin and Nashville, in the latter of which he lost three horses, one of which was hit by twenty-seven bullets in one volley. Avery captured two Napoleon guns, seven horses, and four men during the first afternoon's fighting. He was in all the series of battles which occurred during Hood's retreat, and was then made Adjutant General of the Fifth Division, which position he held until the surrender. He then resigned and received notice of its acceptance on the 17th of June, 1865. In 1862 Avery had a correspondence with Governor Yates which resulted in the adoption by the War Department of the policy of mounting infantry regiments of Grant's army, in so far as it could be done, marching them mounted and fighting them on foot. The Seventh Illinois Infantry was the first regiment so treated, and the innovation was found to be of inestimable value. The idea originated while a prisoner in Forrest's camp, his renowned "cavalry" being chiefly "mounted infantry." At the close of the war, 1865, he married and settled on a plantation and commenced growing cotton on a moderate scale. He was elected State Senator under reconstruction by a larger majority than any man ever received in the same district before or since. His opponent was an ex-Confederate colonel, and three-fourths of the voters had served in the Confederate army. He ran for Congress as an Independent Democrat, but for the sole purpose of securing the election of George E. Harris, the Republican candidate, which he accomplished. He was special agent of the Southern Claims Commission for several years, going out of office with the expiration of the commission, and investigated claims aggregating millions of dollars, and extending from Texas to Virginia.

MRS ANNIE E. AVERY was appointed postmistress at Bay St. Louis, Miss., by Grant, and held the office ten years. For the last ten years she has manifested great love for literary pursuits. Her talent has developed rapidly and she is now correspondent for several New Orleans dailies, also the Mobile Register, and occasionally for the New York Sun. She will soon hold her own among the prominent Southern writers. Hattie had for several years been correspondent to several New Orleans dailies, and was well known in the literary world, and on the occasion of her marriage was made the theme of many pretty articles by the local and city press. Blanche is a musician and continues her studies at St. Joseph's Academy, becoming eminent as a vocalist, having an unusually fine mezzo-soprano voice.

MARY T. AVERY-SAWTELLE, M. D., was born in Allegany, N. Y. She studied medicine and graduated from the Women's Medical College in New York, in the class of 1872. She married C. M. Sawtelle and removed to San Francisco, Cal., where she commenced to publish The Medico and Literary Journal, probably the only one ever owned and conducted by a woman. She also went into practice and remained in that city for twelve years, and then removed to Los Angeles. She now enjoys a large practice, giving the best of satisfaction. I regret being unable to say more, but farther facts have not been furnished. I know of no other woman who has owned and published a medical journal.

WILLIAM THOMAS AVERY (M. C.) was born in Hardman County, Tenn., Nov. 11, 1819. His parents moved to Memphis when it was quite a village. He studied and practiced law when quite a young man, and the first public office he ever held was Clerk and Master to the Common Law Courts, to which he was elected by the people. He was elected two terms to the State Legislature, and was elected to the United States Congress, on the Democratic ticket, in the fall of 1857, and also in the fall of 1859. At the breaking out of the war he resigned his seat after Tennessee had seceded, and returned to his home. He helped to organize the first Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi regiment, and was finally promoted to be Lieutenant-Colonel. He, with most of the regiment were taken prisoners April 8, 1862, and were sent to Johnson's Island, in Lake Erie (a Government prison), where he was confined about six or eight months, and then was exchanged. He returned home and resumed his activity in the service of his country till the close of the war. After this he resumed the practice of his profession, till his accidental death by drowning, while fishing, May 22, 1880.

EIGHTH GENERATION.

560

EDWIN ALLYN AVERY was born in Michigan in 1845, and when a young man learned the car builder's trade on the Michigan Central road. He moved his family from Chicago to Grand Junction in 1881, where he resided until his death. He took the position of master car builder of the Des Moines and Fort Dodge shops, and proved himself to be a skillful workman, and soon won the confidence and admiration of the officers of the road for his upright business qualities. The same position was tendered him by the new management of the Rock Island road upon its assuming control of that line, which he accepted.

Mr. Avery was elected Mayor of Grand Junction in March, 1883, and re-elected in March, 1884, but owing to reasons not known to us, he resigned his office the following May. While presiding as Mayor he proved to be one of the best officers the city has ever had, and conducted the affairs of the city to the satisfaction of all. In the spring of 1886 he was elected as a member of the school board and was holding the office at the time of his death.

He was a man of more than average ability, and was ever ready to assist in any enterprise for the welfare of the town, or to assist his friends in any laudable undertaking. His death creates a void in his home circle that is indeed sad for his family, as he was a kind father and husband. By his death our community loses one of its best and most useful citizens, and his employers an able and diligent mechanic. All Greene County mourns his loss, and all deeply sympathize with his bereaved family.—[Grand Junction (Mich.) Headlight.

FAMILY RECORD.

CHAPTER FOUR.

JOHN.

JOHN AVERY, third son of James Avery, was born February 10, 1654. He married Abigail Cheseborough, November 29, 1675. The marriage is recorded both at Stonington and at New London. Abigail Cheseborough was born September 30, 1656, and was baptized at New London in 1672. She was the daughter of Samuel and Abigail Cheseborough, and granddaughter of William and Ann (Stevenson) Cheseborough. William Cheseborough came from Boston, Lincolnshire, England, and was the founder of Stonington, Connecticut.

July 7, 1691, John and Abigail Avery, of New London, sold land in Stonington to Daniel Shaw. (See Stonington Book of Deeds, Volume 1, page 161.)

In the General Court at Hartford, May 12, 1692, it was recorded: "This Court doe not see reason to confirm those nominated for officers on the east side of the riuer at New London at present, but doe appoynt Captain James Auery to be Capt<sup>n</sup> of sayd Company, and James Morgan L<sup>nt</sup>, and John Auery to be Ensign of sayd company untill the Honoured Major Generall and Mr. Witherell shall see cause to lead them to a new choys of officers" (See Colonial Records of Connecticut for that year, p. 74.)

The record of the General Court for May 11 of the following year, has this: "Thomas Auery is approued to be Capt<sup>n</sup> of the traine band of New London on the east side of the riuer, and John Morgan L<sup>nt</sup>, and John Auery, Ensigne, of sayd Company, and are to be commissionated accordingly."

From a similar record of the General Court, May 13, 1697, we learn that "John Auery [was] appointed Captain of the train band at New London on the east side of the river." His name appears with this title in the patent for New London, granted by the General Court, October 14, 1704. In 1700, he became one of the original proprietors of New Lebanon, and, on the tenth of May, 1705, the General Court confirmed him and his associates in the possession of lands in that town. He is known to have held lands in Preston, Connecticut, in 1706.

In 1708, Captain John Avery and John Avery, jr., were inhabitants of Groton. May 11, 1709, John Avery and Abigail, his wife, sold land in Stonington to John Renit. (Stonington Book of Deeds, vol. 1, page 436.) The land had formerly belonged to Samuel Cheseborough, father of Abigail. In 1710, Captain John Avery bought land of John Plume for twenty-eight pounds in Preston Farms, and also of John Morgan for eight pounds in hand and eleven pounds well secured. (See Preston Town Records.) In the list of "inhabitants of Groton in 1712," are found the names of Captain John Avery and John Avery, jr. In the list of the early members of the First Congregational Church of Groton, is found the name of Captain John Avery.

January 5, 1713-14, Abigail Cheseboro, relicit of Samuel Cheseboro, but now Abigail Avery, makes deposition that Samuel Cheseboro, deceased, did intend to give certain land "to my daughter, Abigail Cheseboro, now Abigail Avery." This is the last record we have been able to find concerning John and Abigail Avery.

15

WILLIAM AVERY, son of John and Abigail Avery, was probably born about 1687. The first record that we have concerning him is his marriage at Stonington. "William Avery and Anne Richardson were married March 27, 1715-16, by Nathaniel Chesborough, J. P." (Stonington Records, vol. 2:26.) From the records of the First Congregational Church of Stonington, edited by Richard Avery Wheeler, we learn that May 25, 1718, William Avery and his wife owned the covenant, and Richardson, their son, was baptized. April 5, 1724, William and Anne, children of William Avery, were baptized by the Rev. Ebenezer Rossiter. Anne, wife of William Avery, died July 5, 1729. (Stonington Records.)

"June ye 3rd, 1731, Lieutenant William Avery and Mrs. Sarah Walker were joynd in marriage at his house in Stonington, North Society, by me, J. Hempstead, Justice of Peace." (Stonington Records.) The title "Mrs.," used above, indicated good social position, and not widowhood. Sarah Walker was the daughter of William and Eleanor (Pendleton) Walker ; was left an orphan at an early age, and was brought up by her grandmother, Hannah (Goodenow) Pendleton. Dec. 28, 1731. William Avery and Sarah, his wife, quitclaimed to Caleb Pendleton, of Westerly, R. I., for a hundred and sixty pounds, current money, a certain tract of land, which was "Given to Our Honored Mother, Eleanor Pendleton, by her father, Mr. James Pendleton, Both Deceased." November 3, 1733, William Avery and Sarah, his wife, quitclaimed to Joseph Pendleton, of Westerly, R. I., for ten pounds, all right to the estate of their great-grandfather, Brian Pendleton, late of Saco, deceased, and their grandfather, James Pendleton, late of Westerly, deceased. (Rockingham County Records, vol. 20: 232.) By his second wife, Sarah Walker, William Avery had ten children, whose births are recorded at Stonington.

In the record of the meetings of the general assembly at Hartford, is found the following: "14th of May, 1730 This assembly do establish and confirm Mr. William Avery, of Stonington, to be Lieutenant of the South part of the Second Company in Stonington aforesaid, and order that he be commissioned accordingly." (Public Records of Connecticut, vol. 7: 276)

Lieutenant William Avery lived and died on his farm near the centre of North Stonington, Conn. His original will is on file in the probate office, New London, Connecticut.

May ye 25th, Anno Domino, 1754.

In the name of God, Amen, I, William Avery, of Stonington, in ye County of New London, in the Colony of Connecticut, in New England, being sick and weak in body but of Perfect Mind and memory, Thanks be given unto God, and knowing yt is appointed unto men once to Dye, Do make and Ordain this my last will and Testament, and first of all I recommend my soul to God who gave it and my Body to be Buried in a decent manner, at ye direction of my executors, and as touching such worldly estate as it has pleased God to Give me, I Give and dispose of ye same in the following manner: Imprimis, I give to Sarah, my beloved Wife, all my Land which I have bought, that is to say, all my land besides yt which came to me by my former wife, to be hers forever. I will that my just Debts and Funeral charges be paid and Discharged in convenient time after my Decease, and further, I give to my Wife, Sarah, all my movable estate which shall remain after my Funeral expenses and Legacies are Discharged and paid: I also give unto her, my said wife, one half of my Dwelling House, to wit: The east part of it, that is to say, the cellar, the Room above it, and the Chamber and Garret above them and the east part of the Kitchen, to be hers forever. Item, I give to my sons, Richardson and William, all my land which was their mother's (to wit: Anne, my former wife), and the same to be equally divided between them.

Item, I give to my son John, four hundred pounds in money.

Item, I give to my daughter Anne, one hundred and fifty pounds in money, she having had part of her portion before, in Goods, and Chattels, &c. And it is my will that my sons Richardson and William do pay unto my son John and my daughter Anne the portions that I have given them.

Item, I give to my son Richardson thirty pounds, and it is my will that my son William should pay it to him.

Item, to my sons, Amos, Christopher, Elias, David, Daniel, Benoni, James, Nathaniel, Abraham, and to my daughter Abigail, I give seven pounds apiece. And it is my will yt my sons yt are young and have not Trades, be timely put to Learn such trades as they shall Choose, at the Discretion of my executors.

And I do hereby Constitute and Ordain my beloved Wife and my sons William and Amos (if Amos come again from sea: if not, then in his room, my son Christopher) to be my executors. of this, my last will and Testament.

In witness whereof I have here unto set my hand and seal, ye day and date above said.

Signed and Sealed, Pronounced and Declared by ye said William Avery, to be his last will and Testament in ye presence of witnesses.

WALTER HOWIT.
EPHRAIM FELLOWS.
HANNAH FELLOWS.

His Mark.

WILLIAM AVERY.

The above fac-simile of his initials indicates that William Avery was too ill to write his name; the lines are very tremulous. If he had not known how to write he would have made an X.

The will shows that he was a just man. He leaves all the property that he received with his first wife to her grown-up children. The property that he made himself or received at his second marriage, is given to his widow, who is left with ten children, the youngest being five days old at the time the will was made. He desires that his boys become useful men and, to that end, makes provision that they be timely put to learn trades. He appoints as his executors a son by each marriage, to act in conjunction with his wife.

The inventory was taken "February ye 18, anno Dom: 1755." Accepted by the court, April 26th, 1755. The amount of the estate was 1,288 pounds and nine shillings, old tenor. Among the things inventoried were "1 old Bible and Psalmbook;" "1 hour glass;" ten acres of land, "it being a part of Mrs. Ann Richardson's thirds of Mr. Samuel Richardson's land, situated in ye right of Katharine Thompson's, and bought by William Avery." This possibly indicates the parentage of the first wife of William Avery.

March 13, 1759, William Avery and Abigail Avery, his wife, testify that they often heard "Their Honned Father, Lieutenant William Avery of Stonington, deceased, Say in the time of his Life & When he Lay upon his Death Bed, That he Gave his Son, Benoni Avery to his Uncle, Benoni Smith, Esquire, of Westerly, in Kings County, and Believed he Would Do for him as his Own child." Benoni Smith was a cousin by marriage, having married Ruth Pendleton. A deed is in existence in which Sarah Walker calls him "my Loving Brother, Benoni Smith."

55

ABRAHAM AVERY, ninth son of Lieutenant William Avery by his second wife, Sarah Walker, was born in Stonington, Connecticut, May 20, 1754. He was a blacksmith and armorer. July 1, 1775, he enlisted at Stonington, as corporal in the company commanded by Nathan Hale, Washington's martyr spy, a part of the seventh Connecticut regiment, Colonel Charles Webb. After a few weeks' service on the Sound, they marched to Boston, where they were assigned to General Sullivan's brigade, on Winter Hill. He was discharged December 18, at Cambridge. January 1, 1776, he enlisted at Stonington in the Continental line, Captain James Eldredge, Colonel S. H. Parsons. When he reached Boston, he was transferred to a company of artificers under Captain Bacon. After the British evacuated Boston, the artificers went to New London and took shipping to New York. Here the armorers were reorganized under Captain John Hilliard. Soon after, the lieutenants of this company were sent to the Northern army and, thereafter, Abraham Avery, being orderly sergeant, acted as lieutenant. They were at King's Yards till the Americans left Long Island, when they went to White Plains and afterwards to Peckskill, where Abraham Avery was discharged at the end of his term of service. He returned to Stonington and, December, 1778, went to Boston and enlisted as gunsmith on the brig "Eagle," a privateer, under Captain Elijah Luce. The brig sailed to Surinam, thence to the West Indies, where May 1, 1779, they captured a British sloop. The same day, they were in turn captured by the tender to a British 50-gun ship, commanded by Admiral Young, after a fight of an hour and a half. They were taken to Antigua, where Abraham Avery and ten of his companions were transferred to "The Renown," a war-ship of fifty guns, and obliged to aid in working the vessel. They convoyed a sugar fleet to the British channel and then sailed to New York, where Abraham Avery and his companions petitioned to be placed on a prison ship, preferring confinement to forced service against their country. After much suffering in the fever-stricken hulk as it floated at its moorings in the North River (the Hudson), they were finally paroled. Abraham Avery reached home in a starving state and without hat or shoes or clothing sufficient to cover his nakedness. This parole necessarily closed his military career. He married Mercy Packer in 1780, and soon moved to Guilford, Vermont. She was the daughter of Ichabod and Esther (Burrows) Packer and was baptized July 5, 1761. About 1784 they moved to Coleraine, Massachusetts, and thence to Rome, New York.

During the progress of the Revolutionary war, the territory now known as Vermont was claimed by the State of New York. In 1777, many of the settlers in that region were in favor of a new state. A convention adopted a declaration of the rights and independence of what had been called the New Hampshire Grants, and proclaimed the commonwealth of "New Connecticut, alias Vermont." Congress was petitioned that New Connecticut might be ranked "among the free and independent American States, and delegates therefrom admitted to seats in the grand Continental Congress." New York took measures to bring the disaffected back to their allegiance and to secure congressional interference in her behalf. Meantime, there were many in the "Grants" who were favorable to the government of New York. "In Brattleborough they were more numerous than the Vermont adherents, and were not afraid to act as their convictions dictated." Thus sprang up two factions, the "Vermonters" and the "Yorkers." By 1783 there was, especially in Windham County, a condition of mutual terror and distrust. "Houses were divided—the father upholding the jurisdiction of New York, the sons maintaining the supremacy of Vermont. Friendships the most intimate were disturbed. The word neighbor carried no meaning with it beyond the idea of contiguity. The physician could not visit his patient in safety unless protected with a pass. The minister of the gospel failed to enforce the doctrine of Christian charity on the hearts of men who knew none for one another." In Guilford, the Yorkers held the power and prevented the Vermonters from executing their laws and collecting taxes. The new government took active measures that tended only to unite the opposition in their determination to withstand the execution of laws originating in an authority that they did not acknowledge, and to follow such a course as seemed to them best fitted "to promote the interests of New York and of the United States."

In Hall's "History of Eastern Vermont" is told the story of the capture of a staunch Vermonter by the name of Benjamin Carpenter. He was carried away by the Yorkers, "to his great damage," but lived many years thereafter and left a quaint epitaph to declare to coming generations that his "Stature was about six feet. Weight 200. Death had no terror." "The more prominent actors in this seizure were Abraham Avery, Cyril Carpenter, Nathaniel Carpenter [and others], all of Guilford." (Page 505.) The seizure was made December 1, 1783. In the following February, twenty-five of the Yorkers were arraigned at the bar of the superior court. Abraham Avery was among those charged with the assault upon Benjamin Carpenter. He pleaded not guilty and the case against him seems to have been dismissed upon his payment of the costs.

There were many such indictments on account of the current hostilities, and many of the Yorkers in the southern part of Windham County endured countless inconveniences and losses. In 1786, the New York legislature took action on the subject of the sufferings of their friends, who, led partly by the resolutions of congress, especially those of December 5, 1782, and "by their attachment, zeal and activity in endeavoring to support the just and lawful authority of New York," had brought upon themselves confiscations and imprisonments, and had suffered "such exquisite tortures." It was shown that their losses amounted to £16,663, 13s, 8d, and it was deemed proper for the state to grant them "a quantity of vacant land equivalent to a township of eight miles square." The land was divided into one hundred lots of 640 acres each. Lot No. 50 was appropriated to the use of "Gospel and Schools," and lot No. 51 "For promoting Literature." Lot No. 87 was given to Abraham Avery and William Gault, the former receiving 430 acres. The grant was dated July 11, 1786. At the same time, 214 acres in lot No. 62 were granted to Ichabod Packer, and 132 acres in lot No. 42 to Nathan (Nathaniel?) Avery.

In 1800, Abraham Avery moved to Preston, Chenango County, New York, and settled on the land given to him by the State of New York; here he lived for many years, an influential and well-to-do farmer.

October 16, 1818, he was placed on the pension roll for military service, but was dropped, under the act of May 1, 1820, which debarred all having more than three hundred dollars' worth of property. Under the act of June 1, 1832, he was reinstated. The accompanying fac-simile of his autograph is copied from his application for a pension, now on file in the "Old War and Navy Office" of the Pension Bureau at Washington. He moved to Earlville, Madison County, New York, about 1840, and died there in February, 1843, six months after the death of his wife.

He was a tall man, with a large frame, grey eyes and hair, which he wore pompadour, and which was thick even in his old age. He was well read, a great student of the Bible and a devoted Baptist. His descendants honor and revere him.

REVEREND DAVID AVERY was born in Norwich, Ct., April 5, 1746. He entered Dr. Eleazer Wheelock's Indian Charity School, at Lebanon, now Hebron, Ct., and fitted for Yale College. He graduated in due course, and then went to Dr. Wheelock's Divinity School, in Hanover, N. H., where he remained till 1773. The Congregational Church of Windsor, Mass., was organized in 1772. In 1773 the Reverend David Avery, of Groton, was installed its pastor, where he remained till 1777, when he was dismissed to become a chaplain in the Revolutionary army, with the rank of captain. He was in several places after the war : Bennington, Vermont; Wrentham, Mass.; Mansfield, Ct. After this he was a missionary in Western New York and died at Middletown, Va., Feb. 16, 1818. (See Mass. Hist. Col., vol. v, page 49. See also Headley's Chaplains of the Revolution, also N. Y. Doc. Hist., vol. iv., page 246.)

She died Sept. 7, 1805 ; he died May 15, 1837. Sally, born Sept. 22, 1774, married David Cash, Towanda, Pa. ✓

JUDGE OBADIAH GORE removed from Norwich, Conn, with the early settlers of the Wyoming Valley, probably in 1769. Wyoming, at that time, was in the limits claimed by Connecticut, and was known as the County of Westmoreland. In the conflict between the Connecticut and Pennsylvania claimants Judge Gore was conspicuous. Frequently while Westmoreland sent representatives to Hartford, Mr. Gore was one of them. He was a man of fine appearance and much dignity in manner and character. He raised a company in August, 1776; was commissioned first lieutenant Jan. 1, 1777, by Congress, and served until January, 1781, in the Continental army. Three of his brothers, Ralph, Silas and George Gore, and two brothers-in-law, John Murphy and Timothy Pierce, were slain in the battle of Wyoming. Two other brothers, Samuel and Daniel, were in the same battle, but escaped.

On General Sullivan's staff he accompanied the expedition up the Susquehanna, and into the Indian country in New York, after the massacre at Wyoming, and kept an interesting journal of that entire campaign of devastation and punishment. In 1783, after the war, he removed to the Sheshequin Valley, about eighty miles north of Wyoming, on the Susquehanna, and lived there till his death. He was a large land-owner and lived surrounded by everything that taste could procure in so new a region. After removing to Sheshequin he was appointed associate judge of Luzerne County and served many years. The old homestead is still owned by his descendants, and his remains lie under an imposing monument in the family grave-yard, erected by his grandchildren and great-grandchildren, about thirty years ago.

AMOS WALKER AVERY, third son of Abraham and Mercy (Packer) Avery, was born at Coleraine, Massachusetts, May 24, 1787. On the 5th of July, 1808, at Preston, Chenango County, New York, he married Nancy, daughter of Hugh and Jane (Wallace) McCutcheon, of Stowe, Vermont. Amos W. Avery, with all his brothers and cousins, promptly enlisted from Preston when the war of 1812 broke out and spent most of the three years "out on the lines." He served under Harrison in 1812 and 1813, and, with his father-in-law, was present at the burning of Buffalo. On his return, at the expiration of his second term of service, he passed through Avon (now Rush), Monroe County, New York, and purchased a farm, to which he removed his family. Before his log cabin was finished he was again called "out on the lines," and his wife and little ones were left alone to pass a long and dangerous winter. The Indians prowled around the cabin, but Mrs Avery was skilled in the use of the gun, and stood ready to defend her children to the last extremity. In 1833, Amos W. Avery moved with most of his family to Michigan. They went by canal from Rochester to Buffalo and thence by steamer "Uncle Sam" to Detroit. On August 14 of that year, they took the steamer "Brady" for Monroe and on the 16th went to their farm at "Stony Ridge," in the townships of Erie and La Salle, in Monroe County. This farm had been noted by himself and his brother Ichabod, when they were soldiers in the war of 1812, and was then in a dense wilderness. Here, he and his wife lived quiet, useful lives, respected by the entire community. His word was as good as his bond and neither was ever discounted. He died June 1, 1863. The local newspaper account of his death says that he had "always been highly esteemed for his honesty of character and kindness of heart—for his upright and benevolent dealings with his fellow men."

NATHAN AVERY.--During the Revolutionary war he was residing in Lyme, New London County, Connecticut, and after the war he removed to Bridgewater, Windsor County, Vermont. Then, in 1817, he settled in Palmyra, Ontario County, New York, from which place he applied, April, 1818, for pension, aged sixty-four years [born 1754], where he also died, May 3, 1821.

He was married, April, 1776, to Aliff Pearson, of Lyme, Connecticut, and after her husband's decease, she resided in Palmyra with her son Abraham and probably other sons, residing there until May, 1836, when she moved to Bridgewater, Vermont, to be with some of her other children, among whom was Betsy Bissell, and from that place applied, in July, 1837, for pension, aged 81 years. Mercy Avery, widow of Elisha (the eldest brother), was living in 1819, in Ontario County, New York, and testified that her husband and Nathan enlisted together, both going to the siege of Boston. He (Elisha) died before law passed that would entitle him to a pension. Nathan enlisted May, 1775, for 8 months, under Captain Daniel F. Sill, in Colonel S. H. Parsons' Connecticut regiment, marched to and remained in New London until ordered, in June, to Roxbury, for the siege of Boston. In December, 1775, he enlisted for one year with Captain James Chapman, in the same regiment, of which Colonel Parsons was in command until promoted to general, in August, 1776, when Lieutenant-Colonel John Tyler succeeded him. He continued at the siege of Boston until it was evacuated (March 17, 1776), when he was ordered to the defense of New York City; crossed over to Long Island, and was in the battle there (Aug. 27, 1776), and in the night retreated to New York City, across East River. When the city was evacuated (Sept. 15, 1776), he accompanied the army in its retreat, which was followed by battles and skirmishing until he reached White Plains, in Westchester County, New York. On one of these occasions his captain, who had just before been promoted to major, was killed.—Furnished by Pension Office.

Nancy, only daughter of 77-24-13-5 and Anna Denison; married, June 5, 1813, in Old Lyme, Ct., William

Clift, born Aug. 28, 1763, died Jan. 30, 1831, son of Amos Clift, who married the widow Anna Avery, mother of William, who married the daughter; children: William, born Sept. 12, 1817, died 1890. Samuel, born June 4, 1820, lives in Jersey City.

REVEREND WILLIAM CLIFT was graduated from Amherst College, Massachusetts, in 1839, and from Union Theological Seminary, New York City, in 1843; was pastor of the Congregational Church, Stonington Boro', from 1844 to 1864, and pastor of Mystic Bridge Congregational Church from 1869 to 1878. For a time he was pastor at Hadlyme, Connecticut, and later at Mystic Bridge again. At the time of his death, in 1890, he was without a charge.

Any account of his connection with "The Avery's of Groton" can only be gathered from scraps of correspondence. From the best evidence, he commenced to gather material about 1860, and was immediately assisted by Jeremiah G. Harris and Rev. John Avery, of Ledyard, who donated all that they had gathered in some years. In 1868 I became acquainted with him, but there was not much done in gathering records until 1872, when I was situated so as to assist him materially. I copied all that I had,

that he had not, into his books, and also copied from his books into my own all that he had that I had not. Thus we possessed duplicate copies of all that we had any knowledge of outside of the family Bibles in the hands of the original owners. For about ten years we sent each other what we could gather, when illness compelled me to relinquish the undertaking. About 1867 he became acquainted with the Hon. John D. Baldwin, and they commenced to compile the "Denison Genealogy," and Clift in a measure relinquished the undertaking, until that volume was published, in 1881. Soon after this he placed the manuscript of the "Avery Genealogy" in Mr. Baldwin's hands, to be fitted for the press. In one sense this was beautifully done, and in another it was a failure, as Mr. Clift had intended it should be in four great families, and Mr. Baldwin paid no attention to such an arrangement. Before Mr. Baldwin had completed the arrangement of what he had, 301 families, he died, and the manuscripts were returned by his executors to Mr. Clift, and he sent them to me, just as he had received them. I tried my best to make a compilation, but it was impossible, for there were many breaks in the lines of descent, and it was years before I had them all complete, as they are now published, and many are still lacking. I made over 3,000 corrections and little additions, not counting the new families, and finally was compelled to give it up. Much that Mr. Clift had done was ignored by Mr. Baldwin, and sometimes both were wrong, but the collection was invaluable. When the present undertaking was begun, Mr. Clift thought he had 600 families, but actual count showed but 301, and the families of three women. The remainder has been gathered by myself. All the biographies and historical notes, which had been collected by Harris, Avery, Clift and myself, became lost, and it may be some families, as I am confident that I sent some which I have never found in the collection, but of which I had duplicates. The Avery family should be very grateful for the labors of the Rev. William Clift.

At a memorial service to the late Rev. William A. Clift, held in Mystic, Ct., in January, 1891, the following interesting and worthy tribute was read from one of his life-long friends and co-workers:

"It gives me great pleasure to give my testimony on the occasation of the memorial service to our late friend, the Rev. William A. Clift. I have known him since 1860. We have been quite intimately acquainted since 1870. We were drawn together by sympathy and co-operation in the cause of temperance. He was an ardent and uncompromising foe of the liquor traffic. He was by long odds the most bold and valiant minister I have ever met. If a thing was right, that was enough; he didn't stop to inquire if it was expedient for him. He preached in the pulpit and he labored in private against rum and tobacco and every form of vice. As a minister of the gospel he felt charged with responsibility for the youth about him, and whether men would hear or whether they would forbear, he proclaimed the truth which would save them.

"In 1874 Mr. Clift, with the late William H. Potter and others, invited me to Mystic to assist in re-organizing a temperance union on the basis of the one existing at Groton Bank, of which I was then president. The meeting was on the evening of January 15, 1874, in the room of the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Thomas E. Packer was chairman; Mr. Clift opened the exercises with prayer; I delivered an address. There were one hundred and fifty to two hundred persons present. After the address, Mr. Clift spoke. Two of his utterances I remember well; they are characteristic of the man. They show at once his humility and boldness. He said, 'I have no doubt Mr. Copp has given us the correct philosophy of our failure here. We have not sustained our temperance organization. I am largely in fault for this, I having been president of our society, but God helping me I will do better in the future.' He was as good as his word. It was through his zeal and persistence, largely, that your Mystic society entered upon that uninterrupted course of meetings, which have continued with such beneficent results to your village. Another remark, which struck me, was equally characteristic. He said, 'I have no charity toward the rumseller; I believe in taking him by the throat and compelling him to stop his traffic.'

"When the towns of Groton and Stonington adopted prohibition, under the provisions of the local option law, some of the leading citizens of Mystic requested me to procure counsel and come over and see to the prosecution of the suspected rumsellers in their midst. I secured S. S. Thresher, Esq., of Norwich, and we went to Mystic and a series of prosecutions was entered upon. At that time Mr. Clift, although a clergyman, settled over a church in the village, took no account of expediency, neither did he inquire how it might affect his salary or him. Some of the principal offenders were members of his society, but he came into court, stood by us from first to last and inspired the prosecution.

"I have seen him, time and again, in the superior court, when liquor cases came up from the town of Stonington, backing by all the force of his character and his presence the cause of justice and truth. Even as he said, 'taking the rumseller by the throat and compelling him to stop his traffic.'

"Some years ago, when he was preaching at Haddam, I think it was, on the Connecticut river, he came to consult me in another matter, which shows how thorough and genuine was his interest in the welfare of those committed to his charge. The Day, a newspaper published in New London, had a circulation in the villages on the river, he said. It was publishing the advertisements of the Louisiana Lottery company. The lottery was doing great harm among the people. He had written to the paper about it, but they took no notice of his appeals. He then wrote to a leading man in New London, a stockholder in the paper—a church member, too—but he disclaimed responsibility; and so he came to me to know if anything could be done about it. In the good providence of God, the testimony of the William Clifts has called the attention of the people of the United States to the infamy of the Louisiana Lottery company, and now, by act of Congress, all papers that publish its advertisements are excluded from the mails. You will no longer find them in the columns of the Day. But it is the virtue of William Clift, and not the stockholder, that has purified its columns.

"But the man, rugged and bold as a lion against injustice and oppression, was a very sunny and genial Christian. His face glowed with morning light. He was heart and mind and soul and strength in every good word and work. He was ready to receive new light from whatever quarter it came. He was not one of those who pride themselves on their consistency; the men who go to bed at night with exactly the same idea that they got up with in the morning. I will not speak of his fruitful life. There was no department of church work that he was not foremost in. Besides his pulpit services, in which he was a most acceptable preacher, he was active in Sunday school, in Y. M. C. A. work, in temperance.

"He voted at every election—all these late years with the Prohibition party, of whom he was proud to call himself one. He was active in every organization that sought the moral or material welfare of the people among whom he lived and preached. He was a prolific writer for the agricultural press. For more than a quarter of a century he was a regular contributor to the columns of The American Agriculturist, The Country Gentleman, and The New England Farmer.

"His 'Tim Bunker' papers, in the former, sparkle with wit and rural wisdom. He not only wrote, he practiced farming, working with his own hands. When settled over a large and wealthy church nothing was more common than to see him in his shirt sleeves working in his garden. Wherever he lived he had a bounty of fruit and vegetables around him.

"He introduced the Pekin duck to this country, and promoted in many ways the interests of agriculture, by introducing or developing improved breeds of sheep, cattle, poultry, fruits, etc.

"During the past year he was a frequent caller at our house, while out riding for his health, which had been greatly enfeebled these latter years. We always felt, as the good man crossed our threshold, that a benediction came with him. To be loved and esteemed by such a man was indeed an honor and a testimony to be cherished. Blessed is the memory of it. Only a few weeks before he died he came over to see us. His step was feeble and his hand unsteady. But his voice was animated, and his eye brightened as he spoke of the blessed vision that faith opened before him:

"Dearly as he loved life and all the opportunities of activity and growth here, the thought of the life hereafter and its companionship with the great and the good of all ages, in the immediate presence of the Master, was more attractive, more vivid to his imagination.

" His loyalty he kept, his love, his zeal ;
Nor number nor example with him wrought
To swerve from truth or change his constant mind."

These, briefly, are some of the thoughts that rise before me as I contemplate this brave Christain, this sterling man. May his life be to us all an inspiration and an example."

"JOHN J. COPP."

SIMEON AVERY was a soldier in the Northwestern army, under General Hull, in the war of 1812-15. After this he learned the carpenter's trade, added to that of millwright. About 1820 he started South and formed a companionship with a man named Nathan Chalfout, a Kentuckian, whose age was about the same as his own. This was near Cairo, and they strolled the country for some time, till they reached Liberty, county site of Amity County, Mississippi. They had but little money, which they had accumulated from their labor, and they began casting about for a mill site. This they found on Liberty, or Speculation creek, a little southwest of Liberty, whereupon they erected a saw-mill and a grist-mill, and also a cotton-gin. These, in a short time, brought them in a little fortune, and another, which they never collected. About 1850 Chalfout sold his interest to Mr. Avery, and removed to Louisiana. Avery continued to run his mills, in connection with a large plantation, bought, raised and sold negroes, and was doing a big business, till the war closed, leaving him with sixty slaves, freed, and plantation and stock on his hands, with nothing to bring the two together. The negroes were worthless without the plantation, and the plantation was worthless without the negroes.

JOHN FRANKLIN AVERY was a native of Plainfield, Ct. His parents were of the Calvinist puritan stock of New England, who, with many other families, settled in Oneida County, New York, soon after the Revolutionary war. His father was an intelligent and active man, by trade a clock and watch maker, to which trade he brought up his son John, at the same time giving him all the advantages of education that the then new place afforded. John was a good student; more fond of learning than clock-making, and for some time attended the grammar or high school in that vicinity, under the charge of Dr. Bacchus, afterward president of Hamilton College. He studied diligently, and when he left that school was well versed in the ordinary branches of English studies and the higher branches of ecclesiastical and civil history, etc. (of the former of which he was very fond), the English literature of the age, and metaphysics, and continued through life a deep thinker and fond of those studies.

He was fond of mechanics, so much so that he invented many things in relation to his trade, and for some received a patent from the United States government.

After leaving school he worked some at his trade and taught school; was a successful teacher. Mr. Avery first came to Cohecton, New York, about the year 1817, where he remained until 1841, when he removed to Damascus, Pa. During his residence at Cohecton he took a prominent place in society, an active and influential part in the religious, moral and intellectual improvement of the people and the schools. He was particularly fond of reading, kept well posted on the current events of the day, the literature, the religious and political affairs of the country. In religion, strongly and thoroughly of the school of Geneva and Calvin. He took an active part in politics; was of the school of Jefferson and Jackson. He was much trusted by his fellow-citizens, holding several offices of trust, such as justice of the peace, clerk of the board of supervisors, postmaster, etc. He was a safe and good counsellor in the affairs of his friends and neighbors—emphatically a man of peace, and opposed to litigation. He was well versed in the affairs of church and state; was strong in his principles, and ever ready to defend them; was kind in his manner, agreeable in conversation, temperate in his habits, honest in his dealings. Take him all in all, John F. Avery was a superior man.

JABEZ TRACY AVERY was born in Bridgewater, N. Y., August 11, 1797. His only training was in the district schools of the time, which he attended until he was 14 years old. At fifteen he removed to Lyons, N. Y., where he learned the mason's trade, which he followed for forty years. He married in 1823, and soon removed to Cattaraugus County, where he remained till 1835, and then went to Canada, thence to Niagara Falls, in 1841. In 1844 he removed to Kendall County, Ill., where he remained four years, then to Will County, where he turned his attention to farming, and became a successful business manager, a large land owner, and a highly esteemed citizen, being elected assessor for nine years in succession. His daughters were nearly all school-teachers, and two of his sons were in the late war. In 1876 he moved to Chester, Iowa, where he dealt in hardware and agricultural implements for several years. He was always strong and healthy and hardly knew what sickness was. As one daughter after another was married, his house was opened to neighbors and friends, where kind and generous hospitality made each occasion one long to be remembered. On his ninetieth birthday the children were all together, and four generations represented. He died December 14, 1892, leaving three sons and six daughters, forty-seven grandchildren, and thirty-four great-grandchildren. He was a man of few words, a close observer, regular in his habits, punctual in all his engagements, and one of the best of men.

OTIS AVERY (AUTOBIOGRAPHY).

Of myself personally, I can only say that though I have had a busy, it has not been a very eventful, life. I studied dentistry with the late Dr. D. C. Ambler, in New York city, and received my certificate of qualification on Dec. 6, 1833, and have ever since made that the main business of my life, though sometimes have dipped into other matters. Dentistry at that day had just received a new impulse, from the introduction of mineral teeth, but the making of them was in its infancy, and each dentist, to be proficient, had to make his own, as well as to make his small instruments, for at the above date there was no one who made dental instruments a special business, but the demand soon brought about the supply. In 1852 I received a patent for a sewing-machine, which I sold to a company, and afterwards went in their interest to Europe, and sold the English patent in London, and the French patent to the Emperor, Napoleon III. You will find my name mentioned in Ure's Dictionary, as among the first to receive patents for sewing machines.

In 1854 I was elected representative to the State legislature, and served only one term, as I declined to be nominated for a second term. In 1871 I was appointed associate judge of the county, by the governor of the State, to fill a vacancy. After serving one year I was twice elected, two consecutive terms, making eleven years on the bench, when I declined to continue any longer. Since that time I have followed my profession and expect to do so during my active life

OTIS AVERY.

LUCIUS AVERY ran away when a boy and joined the army under General Sprague. When his family learned where he was they immediately took steps to obtain his discharge. By the time this was accomplished he had become of age, and immediately re-enlisted for five years. In a year and a half he rose to quartermaster-sergeant. General Sprague took him from the ranks and made him his secretary. He was with him through the Florida war, of which Sprague wrote a history, Lucius furnishing the illustrations. He was artistic in his tastes and had much talent for drawing. After he left the army he settled in Charleston, South Carolina, married, had one daughter, and lost his wife in the brief space of one year. In the second year of the civil war, he went to Memphis, Tenn.; was in business two years, then came North, to New York, leaving his daughter with his brother, Thomas H., in Berlin, Chenango County. About the first of May, 1864, he sailed from New York City for Matamoros, Mexico, with a cargo of mercantile goods, where he opened a store. After residing there three years he was appointed United States Consul. (Andrew Johnson was President at that time). During the first term of Grant, the office was removed to Camargo, Mexico; he retained the office until his eyesight failed, which was in the year 1879.

About the first of June, 1881, he accepted a position of general manager of a lead and silver mine, called "Dolores Mines," at Vallecillo, Mexico, where he remained until his tragic death. The particulars concerning the murder, as far as known, are as follows: He slept in the office, alone. During the night of April 16, 1885, the office was entered, Mr. Avery murdered, and the safe robbed. The following morning, as he did not appear at breakfast, his room was visited, where his body was found lying in bed, stabbed through the neck, done while he slept. He was buried the following day, there in the hacienda. A sad ending of one of the best and most refined men that ever lived.

CASPAR HUGH AVERY, the oldest child of Amos Walker Avery and Nancy (McCutcheon) Avery, his wife, was born at Preston, Chenango County, New York, July 25, 1809. In early life, he settled on a farm at Avon (now Rush), Monroe County, New York. In 1833, he migrated westward by the land route, along the southern shore of Lake Erie—a long and tedious journey. He settled on a farm in Erie, Monroe County, Michigan, near the residence of his parents. His health failing, he left his farm and moved to the county seat, Monroe City, soon after the birth of his second child. He engaged in mercantile pursuits, held numerous minor offices, was universally trusted and respected, and died after a brief illness, March 5, 1873. His second wife was a woman of great energy, liberal education and had high ambition for the future of her children. The bodies of Caspar Hugh Avery, his two wives and his youngest child, lie in Woodland cemetery, Monroe, Michigan.

BILLIOUS AVERY, senior, was a professional mechanic, first as house builder, of which several of the oldest dwellings in the town of Salisbury, N. Y., attest, and one in the village, which had the date 1805 cut on a pane of glass by Mr. Avery, but, unfortunately, the glass has got broken. He next turned his attention to the making of cases for those old-fashioned high clocks, which he furnished at two dollars and fifty cents each.
He also had lathes for turning wood, with which he turned chair stuff, and hauled with a team to the Utica market. He held the office of town assessor for a number of years and was frequently called upon to point out the original landmarks of the various tracts and lots in this town, and made a very minute and accurate map of the tracts and their subdivisions, with the streams of water and the roads marked as they were at that time.

GEORGE WHITFIELD AVERY, (M. D.) was born in Hampton, Conn., Sept. 27, 1836. He was graduated from Yale Medical School in 1861, and was in charge of the hospital at New Haven when the war broke out. He joined the Ninth Connecticut Volunteers as assistant surgeon, upon the personal solicitation of Governor Buckingham. He distinguished himself at Ship Island in the reorganization of the hospital service, thereby attracting the attention of General Butler and winning the latter's confidence and personal esteem. Dr. Avery was prominently connected with the hospital service at New Orleans and, during reconstruction days, served as the sheriff of that city. He was taken prisoner and had the care of both the Union and the Confederate wounded. Indeed, his conduct at that time called forth many compliments from the Confederates, who appreciated his bravery as well as his efficiency in caring for the sick and wounded. After his release he remained as a surgeon at New Orleans until the end of the war and passed through two very serious epidemics of yellow fever while practicing in that city.

Shortly after the close of the war Dr. Avery came to Hartford, where he has since lived, and built up a large practice. He was surgeon of the First Regiment, C. N. G., for several years, on the staff of Colonel Lucius A. Barbour. About two years ago he was appointed a member of the United States pension examining board in this city.

As a surgeon he was able and experienced to a far greater degree than the larger public, perhaps, appreciated. He was, moreover, a student, keeping pace with the progress which has been so marked of late years. He carried on an extensive correspondence with some of the ablest of the English and continental physicians and gave his patients the benefit of it all. In his reading, Dr. Avery was a man of great culture. He was a member of the State and county societies, as well as of the Hartford Medical Society, and stood among the foremost of the profession.

Dr. Avery was, physically, a tall, bony, angular man, with many quaint mannerisms. He might have been called a peculiar man in some respects and was often abrupt, but he was tender and large hearted and possessed of warm sympathies. In his contact with his patients he showed many lovable qualities and many a family in Hartford and vicinity will mourn the loss of the friend as well as the physician.

While Dr. Avery had a complete Christian faith, his instincts and training as a physician led him to probe deeply into what he termed the "mysteries" of this life and the hereafter. This was characteristic of the man in every department. He was a searcher after truth, and his conversation often turned upon death and the eternal.—Hartford Times, February, 1893.

Hannah, eldest daughter of 212-89-43-15-5 and Hannah Avery; married, Nov., 1809, place not given, Benjamin Franklin Park; children, eight: Cornelia. Emeline. Rosetta. Boys as follows:

ALBERT F. PARK, (Rev.,) of Norwich, was a teacher from 1840 for several years; joined the Providence Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in May, 1844, as an itinerant minister, and located in 1856. He afterwards commenced the practice of law in Norwich, preaching occasionally and supplying different churches, and so continues to the present time.

EDWIN AVERY PARK, (M. D.,) in his early years was employed in teaching winters and working on a farm summers. Having finished a prescribed course in medical studies he entered upon the profession of doctor, in New Haven, about 1850, and continued to practice till his death.

JUDGE JOHN D. PARK was educated as a lawyer and practiced some years. He was elected Judge of the old County Court in 1854, and in the spring of 1855 was elected Judge of the Superior Court, and was re-elected in 1863. In the spring of 1864 he was elected a Judge of the Supreme Court of Errors; was re-elected an associate judge of that court in the spring of 1872, and in 1873 was elected Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Errors; and was re-elected in 1882. Hence, he was Judge of the County Court one year, of the Superior Court thirty-four years, and of the Supreme Court fifteen years. (This account was given several years since.)

RALPH H. PARK was engaged as a teacher of public schools in early life, and in New Haven for several years, at a salary of $2,000 per year, but has been engaged in the book publishing business since 1880, which he continues till the present time.

WEBSTER PARK began the practice of law in Norwich in 1862. He was assistant clerk of the Superior Court from 1864 till elected clerk, 1874, and held that office till near his death, 1881.

Oct. 3, 1826. Jane M., born Feb. 3, 1829. Charles Azariah, born April 1, 1831, died Aug. 18, 1848.

COLONEL AZARIAH THOMAS was born in New Salem, Mass., Dec. 15, 1782. While a young man, about the year 1804, he followed his older brothers, Amos and David, to New York State. He first settled in Madison County. Soon after, he removed to Perch River, Jefferson County, N. Y., where he purchased a large farm, and where he resided until the fall of 1821, when he moved to Watertown, in the same county, and engaged in building and manufacturing of wooden ware by machinery.

During the war of 1812, at the time of the invasion of the Northern frontier, he entered the service as a volunteer, and at the battle of Sackett's Harbor, May 29, 1813, he had command of a company. In evidence of his coolness in battle, it was related by an eye-witness to an elder brother of the writer, in 1853, that, during the engagement, and while the bullets were thickly flying, his men were ordered to protect themselves behind trees, fences, etc., which they proceeded to do; while he, apparently unconscious of danger, remained exposed to the fire of the enemy until reminded of his duty to protect himself.

After the war he was promoted to the colonelcy of his regiment, which position he retained until some years before his death. It was generally understood that had he not resigned he would have been made general of his brigade, he having been a very popular officer and in the direct line of promotion. A contemporary met by the writer in the summer of 1886 related that he never saw a finer looking officer on horseback than Colonel Thomas. That he was imbued with something of the military spirit would appear from the fact that on the night of his death, in his delirium, his mind apparently wandering back to the exciting scenes of battle, he suddenly exclaimed, with considerable force: "Stand by your post; let every man do his duty,"—forcibly reminding one of the last words of Lord Nelson at the battle of Trafalgar, "England expects every man to do his duty;" or of those of Napoleon, "Tête de l'armée."

Possessing some argumentive ability, in the early days of the country, when lawyers were few, Colonel Thomas was accustomed to plead before a justice in some simple suits among his neighbors. He was of a generous, whole-souled disposition, ever ready to assist those in need. This trait of character finally cost him dearly, as, by indorsing for a neighboring country store-keeper, he finally lost his farm.

Colonel Thomas died at Watertown, N. Y., Sept. 14, 1831, aged 49. His wife died in Sheridan, Chautauqua County, N. Y., April 21, 1846. They were both members of the Baptist church.

A. R. T.

AMOS RUSSELL THOMAS, (M. D.) author, physician, and Dean of the Hahnemann Medical College, of Philadelphia, was born in Watertown, New York, October 3, 1826. Dr. Thomas is descended from a solid ancestry of Welsh descent. The family came to New England over two hundred years ago, and were among the earliest settlers in Boston, Newton, Hardwick and New Salem. From this New England branch of the family sprang many who have been distinguished in the professions, in the army, and in various walks of life. Hardy, long-lived and prolific, the family has become exceedingly numerous, and widely scattered throughout the United States. Of the fifteen children of the great-grandfather of Dr. Thomas, thirteen lived to marry and rear large families. The average age of the thirteen was seventy-two years; the combined age was nine hundred and thirty-six years. Dr. Thomas is the son of Colonel Azariah Thomas, who served under General Jacob Brown, on the Northern frontier, in the war of 1812.

Thrown upon his own resources at an early age, the subject of this memoir acquired his education, both literary and professional, by his unaided individual efforts. His life was passed in the country until he was nearly twenty years of age, and by manual labor upon a farm he acquired a robust and vigorous physical constitution. Dr. Thomas's early evinced love for books led him to devote his evenings and other intervals of leisure to study, and in this manner he qualified himself and commenced teaching school in the western part of New York in 1846.

Four years after, in 1850, he engaged in mercantile pursuits in Ogdensburg, New York, but finding this employment an ungenial one, he turned again to his books and resolved to devote his future to a professional pursuit. By getting possession of an old Indian skull, which had been exhumed in making an excavation near his place of business; and borrowing a work on anatomy,

A. R. THOMAS, M.D.

Professor of Anatomy at the Hahnemann Medical College of Philadelphia, and Dean of the Faculty.

for the purpose of studying this skull, he became so much interested as to engage at once in the study of medicine. He entered the Syracuse Medical College in 1852, devoting himself assiduously to the study of his chosen profession, and was graduated in February, 1854. Upon receiving his degree, Dr. Thomas repaired to Philadelphia, and, after attending a course of lectures, he again graduated from the Pennsylvania Medical University. His abilities had long since met recognition and, upon his graduation at this institute, he was immediately offered the position of Demonstrator of Anatomy by this medical school, which he accepted, and made Philadelphia his home. In 1856 he was appointed to the chair of anatomy, which position he filled for ten years. In the same year also he was appointed professor of Artistic Anatomy in the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, where he delivered annual courses of lectures to artists and art students for fifteen years. These lectures were the first of the kind ever given to art students in America. In 1863 he was appointed lecturer on the same subject in the School of Design for Women, which position he held for ten years. After the second battle of Bull Run, during the war of the Rebellion, he volunteered his services as surgeon and was assigned a position in the Armory Square Hospital, at Washington, where he remained in charge of one of the wards until the wounded from that disastrous field were cared for. He then returned to Philadelphia and resumed his practice, which has always been both lucrative and select.

Becoming interested in an examination of the merits of Homœopathy soon after settling in Philadelphia, he was finally led to adopt that system of practice. In 1867 he was called to the chair of anatomy in the Hahnemann Medical College, of Philadelphia, and in 1874 was elected Dean, which position he still holds. As a lecturer on anatomy Dr. Thomas has acquired a reputation for clearness and accuracy; and for an impressive manner, which at once attracts and retains the close attention of the student. The institution at whose head he presides is one of the strongest and highest in rank among Homœopathic medical colleges of the country. During his administration as Dean, and largely from his personal influence, the college has advanced its curriculum of study, elevated its standard, secured its new building (which is in all respects equal to the best in the country), and entered upon a career of success never before attained.

In addition to attending a large professional business, Dr. Thomas has found time to contribute a number of important papers to medical journals, besides writing a work on Post-Mortem Examination and Morbid Anatomy, which has been highly commended by the medical press, and for five years to act as general editor of the American Journal of Homœopathic Materia Medica. He has had two children,—a son, Charles M. Thomas, M. D., of this city, and a daughter, who died in 1880, wife of Dr. J. N. Mitchell, leaving one child, a son.

Besides the county and State medical societies of which he has been president, Dr. Thomas is a member of the American Institute of Homœopathy, of the Academy of Natural Sciences, of the Fairmount Park Art Association, of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, and of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.—From the Hahnemannian Monthly, October, 1892.

In the summer of 1886 I received a letter from Elroy M. Avery, of Cleveland, Ohio, asking for some information about his ancestor, Abraham. This query I answered at once, and laid aside the remainder of the letter till some more convenient time. Business, for some months, and sickness for a year, prevented my recurrence to it, and it was forgotten. On January 1, 1888, I received a letter from Dr. Thomas, asking me if I required any assistance in publishing the "Avery Genealogy." In looking in my books to ascertain who Dr. Thomas was, I found the letter from Mr. Avery, and in perusing it I found he had made me the offer of assistance in publishing the "Avery Genealogy." I immediately answered both of the gentlemen, saying "I did not want assistance in publishing, but I would accept assistance in collecting the material." Here were two gentlemen, unknown to myself, and to each other, hundreds of miles apart, and so far as I knew, no relation, excepting very distant; and desirous of assisting me. I was getting old, was poor, and hardly able to walk, and thought it a rare opportunity to acquire an occupation. I had no thought of trying to publish the book myself, but I could arrange the material as well as any man. To be brief, these gentlemen furnished the money to get out the first circular, and to them the Avery family is indebted for the volume before them. To Mr. Avery must be given the credit of being the first man to give an impulse that has culminated so splendidly, and Dr. Thomas, who has seconded his efforts, an equal amount of praise.

AMOS READ AVERY, (M. D.,) was born in Brookfield, Madison County, N. Y., May 8, 1805. He graduated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Fairfield, Herkimer County, N. Y., in the class of 1833. He removed to Forestville, N. Y., the same year, and practiced his profession till near his death, which occurred April 14, 1881.

His was a life devoted to the welfare of others, faithful to every duty, of father, physician and friend, his greatest ambition to be useful to mankind, and his only regret that he could do no more to alleviate the sufferings of his fellow men. He filled the measure of his usefulness to the brim, and died regretted by all who ever knew him. He pursued the even tenor of his way, without noise or confusion, quiet in his efforts, and modest in his estimation of himself, but receiving the plaudits of his neighbors without ostentation, and willing to be measured by his works.

MAJOR GEORGE SMITH AVERY was born and raised on the farm and educated in the common schools and at the Seminary at Mt. Morris, Illinois. In the spring of 1861, at the first call for volunteers to put down what proved to be the great rebellion of the century, he left the sack from which he was sowing wheat in the field and enlisted in the first company that was organized in Jo Daviess County, Illinois, on the nineteenth day of April, 1861 (Company F., 12th Illinois Volunteer Infantry, ninety days' service). Was first sergeant of said company. In September, 1861, he enlisted in the three years' service in Company I. 3d Cavalry, Missouri Volunteers, U. S. A., and was soon elected first lieutenant of said company. On the fifth day of July, 1862, he was promoted to the rank of captain and assigned.

GEORGE S. AVERY.

to the command of Company "H" of the same regiment. On the second day of September, 1864, he was promoted to the rank of major of the same regiment. He was honorably discharged from the service, March 18, 1865. He served in the Western Army, in the 7th Corps, and participated in all the engagements of that command. He was slightly wounded at the battle of Hartsville, Missouri, January 10, 1863, and at a skirmish at Hurricane Creek, Saline County, Arkansas, October 23, 1864, at which latter place his horse was killed in the engagement. During the three years' service he had three horses wounded under him while in battle.

At the close of the war he engaged in farming at the old homestead in Jo Daviess County, Illinois, and continued therein until 1876. He was then elected to the office of Clerk of the Circuit Court of said Jo Daviess County, and served continuously in that capacity twelve years. Since the close of this public service in 1888 he has been engaged in the manufacture of lubricants at Galena, Ill., and is now (1893) secretary and business manager of the Galena Axle Grease Company.

He married Elizabeth Little, of Scotch parentage, at Big Rock, in Kane County, Illinois, June 7, 1863. During the winter of 1863-4, she shared with him the soldier's lot, both in camp and field. Elizabeth's father's name was John Little; he was a native of Greta Green Parish, Scotland, and on his maternal side was related to the great Edward Irving. Her mother's maiden name was Agnes Rae, a native of Dumfriesshire, Scotland, and her home was in Annan. Her father's library was large and well read. He was so democratic that when a tax was levied on a gentleman's riding horse he deemed it unjust and thereafter walked. A niece of his wife married James Carlyle, a brother of Thomas Carlyle.

ELROY MCKENDREE AVERY, Ph. D., elder son of Caspar Hugh and Dorothy (Putnam) Avery, was born at Erie, Monroe County, Michigan, July 14, 1844. While he was a small child, his father and mother moved to the city of Monroe, in the public schools of which community his early education was secured. His business education here began as carrier-boy for the two weekly newspapers, his first contact with commercial paper coming to him as the distributor and poster of advertising bills. But such employment was classed as an avocation, his real vocation, at that time, being "going to school." At this period, his first contribution to the press, a sort of argument for a ship-canal to connect the thriving city of Chicago with its older and more conservative sister city of Monroe, was surreptitiously introduced by night beneath the door of the editorial sanctum of the Commercial; disregarding the well-known rule, the newspaper printed the anonymous communication. At the outbreak of the war, in 1861, he was a member of the high-school, associating in the class-room and on the play-ground with boys who were several years older than himself. With his teacher and many of his school-mates, he enlisted in the first company that went from Monroe to the front and, on the memorable day of the first Bull Run battle, was with Company A, Fourth Michigan Infantry. Fortunately, this regiment did not get into the fight, being held in reserve, part of it at Fairfax Court House, and the rest at Fairfax Station. Subsequently, he became a member of Company E, Eleventh Michigan Cavalry, and was detailed as clerk at regimental headquarters. At the first battle of Saltville, Va., the colonel of the regiment commanded a brigade, and Private Avery served on the staff of the acting brigadier. That day the regiment lost a third of its men, and Private Avery became Sergeant-major Avery, being promoted on the battle-field for gallant and efficient service. The modus operandi of this transformation was laconic and characteristic of the two contracting parties. On Avery's return from a perilous mission across a field swept with bullets, shot and shell, Colonel Brown greeted his messenger with the words: "Well done, Sergeant-major," to which the newly-promoted answered: "Thank you, Colonel." During this military service, young Avery began regular journalistic work as war correspondent for the Detroit Daily Tribune, for which he received a remuneration considerably in excess of his credits on the rolls of the army paymasters.

After the war, he spent two years in studious "brushing up" for college and earning the money needed for the satisfying of his great ambition. In the fall of 1867, he matriculated at the University of Michigan, whence he was graduated as a Ph. B., in 1871. During his collegiate course, he served as local and university correspondent of the Detroit Tribune (daily), and as city editor of the Ann Arbor Courier (weekly), thus getting greatly needed funds for the continuance of his regular school work,—his heroic and self-sacrificing mother had died before the end of his freshman year and his father was a semi-invalid. In his senior year, he was offered and accepted a position on the regular editorial staff of the Detroit Tribune, doing, for the second semester of that college year, full work as journalist and student. In spite of his unusual burdens, he took high rank in class-room, and was prominent in social life and student organizations and enterprises. He was managing editor of the Oracle, a sophomore publication, and a member of the "Literary Adelphi," of the Zeta Psi fraternity, and of the "Owls," a secret society of fifteen, membership in which was the ambition of every senior. In the presidential campaign of 1868, Sophomore Avery was elected the commander of the University Battalion of Tanners, consisting of companies from each of the four classes, freshmen, sophomore, junior and senior—an unprecedented waiving of prerogative by the upper classes, and all the more remarkable by reason of the fact that in "rush" and other encounters, Avery had won the special antipathy of the freshmen. The "commencement day" of '71 was further marked by the inauguration of a new university president (Dr. J. B. Angell) and the laying of the cornerstone of the new University Hall. The throng of dignitaries and friends of the University of Michigan that day was the greatest in the history of the institution, and no little of the smoothness with which the elaborate program was carried out was due to the fact that the honor and responsibilities of chief marshal of the day had been awarded to Mr. Avery. He was graduated without having had a single "condition" in his college course.

At the age of sixteen and between enlistments in the army, he had taught a country school, "boarding around," and enjoying all the experiences that the term implies. After the war, he had taught a village school in his native county. When the beginning of his junior year at the university found him out of funds and unable even to board himself (doing his own cooking, as he had done during his sophomore year), he accepted the principalship of the Battle Creek (Mich.) high school. Succeeding in borrowing enough money to enable him to complete his college course with close economy, he resigned this position, after four months' successful and therefore enjoyable work, returned to the university and regained his standing in his class. The succession as principal of the high school at Battle Creek was awarded, after a sharp competition, to Miss Catherine Hitchcock Tilden, the elder daughter of the Honorable Junius Tilden, of Monroe, Mich., a descendent of Elder Nathaniel Tilden (Scituate, Mass., 1634); of five "Mayflower" pilgrims, Elder Brewster, Stephen and Giles Hopkins, Richard Warren and Henry Sampson; of the governors of four New England colonies, George Wyllys and Richard Treat of Connecticut, Thomas Roberts, of New Hampshire and Thomas Prence, of Plymouth; of William Pynchon, treasurer of the original Massachusetts Bay Company and founder of Springfield; of Urian Oakes, president of Harvard College (1675); of Samuel Newman, the author of the first concordance of the Bible; of Dr. William Ames, the learned English Puritan divine, one of the exiles in Holland, professor of theology at Franeker and a member of the synod of Dort (1618); and of Dr. William Avery, of Dedham, Mass. (1640), the founder of the family known as the Dedham Averys. At the end of his junior year, Elroy M. Avery married Miss Kate Tilden, thus uniting, for the first time, the Dedham and the Groton Averys.

In August, 1871, he became superintendent of the public schools of the village of East Cleveland, Ohio, constituting what is now known as the "East End" of Cleveland, the fashionable residence portion of the city. After the annexation of the village to the city, Mr. Avery became principal of the East High School. He subsequently became principal of the Normal School, then the apex of the school system of the city. During these years, he was seconded by the best of possible first assistants, his wife. Writing of Mr. Avery as an educator, a competent critic says: "He has no superior in this state, if, indeed, he has one in any state. His learning is broad and general and his mind and habits of thought are thoroughly disciplined and systematic. He has the happy and desirable but somewhat rare faculty of imparting his knowledge in the clearest manner. He is fond of teaching and never fails to excite in his pupils some of his own enthusiasm, so that, under his tuition, the pupil learns because he wants to do so, as well as because he cannot help it. These qualities have made him popular and successful in the school-room and render him an attractive, interesting and successful speaker." Mrs. Avery's success as a teacher was, certainly, no less than that of her husband. For several years, the services of both were in active demand as director and instructor of city and county teachers' institutes, the demand ceasing only when it was positively refused. In 1876, "Avery's Elements of Physics" was published by the Burrows Brothers, of Cleveland, and immediately adopted for use in the high schools of that city. In 1878, "Avery's Elements of Natural Philosophy" was published by Sheldon & Co., of New York City. It met an immediate and abundant success. Since that time, the continued call for "copy" has brought forth a volume nearly every year. In 1880, the author received the academic degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

In 1880, Dr. Avery entered the scientific lecture field with an object lesson on the new "Electric Light." In mining phrase, he struck "pay dirt." After two years of success in this field, he began the organization of Brush Electric Light and Power Companies—a work for which teaching, authorship and lecturing had given him peculiar qualifications. His success here was quick and complete. Dr. Avery has organized more electric lighting companies, and with a greater aggregate of capital, than any other man in America. This work has made his name as familiar to solid business men as his text-books have to their children. For several years, he acted as literary "Controversialist-in-chief" for the Brush Electric Company. His lance was pointed as well as polished, and many of his tournaments attracted general attention.

Even in this busy period, his scientific text-book authorship was not laid aside. His "Elements of Chemistry" appeared in 1881, and was followed by "The First Principles of Natural Philosophy," "Modern Electricity and Magnetism," "The Complete Chemistry," "The Teacher's Hand-Book," and "Physical Technics." All of these, as well as "The Elements of Natural Philosophy," are published by Sheldon & Co., constitute the "Avery's Physical Science Series," and are, at the present time, more largely used in the better class of American and Canadian schools than any other text-books on these subjects. Their annual revision constitutes no little part of their author's labor. Among his other published writings may be mentioned "Words Correctly Spoken," a plea for "Good English," of which twenty thousand copies were sold in the first six months; "What Can a Teacher Do?"—a plea for the introduction and use of the metric weights and measures; "Lexington and Concord,"—an historical sketch; "The Federal Plan of Municipal Government,"—a sociological study; "What to do with Delinquent Children"; "Children and Criminal Environment"; "The Liberty Bell"; "Columbus and the Columbia Brigade"; "Cleveland in a Nut-shell"; and the chapters on Christopher and James Avery, at the beginning of this volume. For the last seven or eight years, he has been engaged on an historical work, the completion of which will require several years more.

He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic; a Knight Templar; a thirty-second degree Mason; supreme president of the "Home and Benefit Union" (a fraternal benefit association); president of the Western Reserve Society of the Sons of the American Revolution; secretary of the Western Reserve Protective Tariff League; a member (for many years) of the Republican County Central Committee; founder and president of the Logan Club, the oldest Republican club in the city; a life member of the American Economic Association, the Ohio Archaeological and Historical Society and the Western Reserve Historical Society; a member of the American Historical Association; a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science; a trustee of a Congregational church; has been a member of the Cleveland City Council, and was the second president of the Ohio Conference of Charities and Correction. On his retirement from the city council, the leading Democratic journal of the city said: "No one will regret Dr.

Avery's retirement more than the newspaper men. He did much to bestow a dignity upon the office and, though he was oftentimes satirical and severe upon those with whom he had dealings, his language was always polished and refined. He was never coarse. If he had anything cutting to say, the English of it was always so excellent as to be a positive delight to everyone except his unfortunate victim." At the same time, another paper said that "Dr. Avery refused to be a candidate when he could have been re-elected without opposition. Here was one of the ablest men in any part of our country, giving valuable time to the public service to the neglect of far more profitable employment." In the fall of 1893, he was urged to become a candidate for the Ohio senate, but sturdily refused to do so. In nominating him for that office, one of the Cleveland papers said: "Where can be found a more able, eloquent or fearless advocate of the rights of the people than Dr. Avery. During his term in the council, he was outspoken at all times in advocacy of their best interests. In the legislature, he would be simply invaluable. His well known integrity, his marked ability as an orator, the fact that he can be depended upon at all times to do just as he agrees, and his extensive knowledge of municipal affairs would render him not only strong politically but especially strong as a legislator." Such testimony from those who have known him for a score of years has a deep significance. In spite of his refusal to become a candidate and of his public declaration that he was not even "in the hands of his friends," a dozen of the most prominent citizens of Cleveland quietly paid his assessment and entered his name for the nomination. At the Republican primaries, members of the party voted directly for their preference for each officer as well as for delegates to a county convention. Dr. Avery's opponent was the vice-president and actual head of a national bank, and had served as member and president of the city council; a man of high standing in the business world and of irreproachable private character. More than fifteen thousand votes were cast at the primaries and the desire that Dr. Avery should be the candidate was so general that two-thirds of the votes cast were in his favor. He carried his own ward by a vote of nearly ten to one, and his opponent's ward by a vote of more than two to one. Under the prescribed rules, his name did not go to the county convention, as it would have done had the victory of his supporters been less decisive. In that convention, the wards and townships carried for Dr. Avery's candidacy were represented by 348 delegates, and those carried for his opponent by 38. As these pages go to press, the election is pending and it cannot be foretold whether Dr. Avery will be elected or not. Whatever the issue of the party contest, the manner and the emphasis of the nomination constitute a glowing tribute to the ability and character of the man. It is seldom, now-a-days, that the office seeks the man. (See preface.)

On pages 484 and 485 I gave Mr. Avery the credit of giving the first impulse that has culminated in the publication of this volume. As early as 1888 he printed, at his own expense, and circulated a great many pamphlets relative to the family, and called attention to the contemplated volume. He afterwards visited the New England States in the interest of the publication, and in various ways assisted me in its preparation. His contribution of the first chapter, and subsequently the biographies of his line of ancestry, are models of completeness, and to the family are invaluable. His advice in numerous instances, has been accepted in almost all cases, and where not accepted, perhaps ought to have been. Any encomium upon what he has done would be superfluous, for his labor shows for itself. The family ought to be very grateful for the assistance he has rendered me and, through the publication of the volume, all who have a drop of Avery blood in their veins. I consider myself very fortunate in having so valuable an assistant, and language fails to express properly my appreciation of his services.

in the appendix. To many it will be a disappointment to know that Christopher was not connected with some noble family, but if he was the creator of a noble family on this side of the water, it is better than to have inherited a "coat-of-arms" and a dubious descent from some profligate scion of noble blood.

CHARLES HEDDING AVERY, second son and third child of Caspar Hugh and Dorothy (Putnam) Avery, was born at Monroe, Michigan, February 15, 1852. He was graduated from the high-school of that place and apprenticed to learn the carpenter's trade. After three years at the bench, love of learning drew him back to his books; he entered Cornell University in 1871. After attending the university for two or three years, and showing himself to be a student of more than ordinary ability, his college life was abruptly closed by the death of his father. In December, 1873, he went to Buffalo and began the study of law in the office of Laning and Willet. Subsequently, he studied with Lewis and Gurney, from whose office he was called to the bar January 5, 1877. He immediately entered the county clerk's office in a subordinate position. His life as a law student had been a life of struggle. Without a dollar and in debt, he began his political career in the Hayes and Wheeler campaign (1876), by rousing speeches which speedily brought him into favorable notice. In the fall of 1877, he was made special deputy in the county clerk's office at a salary of seven hundred dollars. This was too good to keep for himself alone, and so he married a young lady to whom he had been engaged for five years. The young couple began housekeeping free from debt and with a cash surplus of ten dollars. After passing through all the grades in the office, he was appointed deputy county clerk in January, 1883; and held the office through three administrations, till December 31, 1891. This year, he became a candidate for the Republican nomination of county clerk, but was handicapped by the fact that the office belonged by precedent to the country precincts. Mr. Avery led all the other candidates till the withdrawal of some of the aspirants threw a majority of the votes to a country candidate. That year, the entire Republican ticket was defeated. In 1881, Mr. Avery was the nominee of his party for member of the State assembly, but was caught in the tidal wave that made Grover Cleveland mayor of Buffalo and gave all the offices to the "Unterrified." Mr. Avery is a thorough, enthusiastic and determined Republican, and, as an eloquent and convincing speaker, is in great demand. For three years he was a member of the Erie County Republican Executive Committee and was also councilman from his ward.

His great executive ability is fully recognized by all who know him. For seven years he was receiver of the Marvin estate, which had been in litigation for a quarter of a century. When he took charge, the estate consisted chiefly of unproductive property; under his management, it realized a handsome income and was greatly increased in value. At the end of his receivership, he turned over to the heirs property amounting to $463,000. When discharged, the judge complimented him on having handled the estate with such marked success and both of the contending parties agreed to pass his accounts and to discharge him simply on his books as presented.

For fourteen years, Mr. Avery has been connected with the Royal Arcanum. He was unanimously elected grand regent of the State of New York in 1889 and re-elected in 1890. During his two terms, he instituted fifty-nine councils, a record which has never been beaten in any state. In 1891, he was elected representative to the supreme council, R. A., and again in 1893. Mr. Avery is also a member of the Masonic fraternity in its several branches; is past master of the De Molay lodge, F. A. M.; a member of the I. O. O. F., and of the Improved Order of Red Men.

Mr. Avery is now (1893) the head of the well-known firm of Avery & Murphy, attorneys and counselors at law, Buffalo, N. Y. Genial in all his intercourse, loyal to his friends, upright in all the relations of life, fearless in the advocacy of what he believes to be right and always "hewing to the line," he well deserves the success and popularity which he has.

WYLLYS AVERY was possessed of more than ordinary mechanical skill and invented quite a number of ingenious machines, for three of which he received patents. The first was a hollow arbor for turning tapering rods of wood. The next was a vegetable or root cutter and lastly a saw-set.

About the year 1826 he began the manufacture of rifles, in company with Erwin Byington, but after a few years they had the misfortune to have their shop burned, losing all of their stock and tools. About the year 1830, he, with his brother Edmond, as equal partner, entered into the same business and continued it until 1837, when he purchased his brother's interest. About the same time he turned his attention to land surveying and the making of compasses and chains and the practical use of the same, which required him to draw contracts, deeds and mortgages. He held the office of town clerk, 1832 to 1838, inclusive, 1841, 1842, 1856 to 1865. He served as justice of the peace for eight years from 1835 and was again elected in 1847 and held the office until he died. He held several other offices in the town and was justice of sessions several terms.

He wrote a very plain hand and the records he made while town clerk will be admired by all who have the privilege of examining them. He wrote the Lord's prayer on a space the size of a sixpence.

GEORGE AVERY was a mechanic and also had a small farm which he managed for a few years. He was quite a musician, played the violin beautifully and was leader of the Salisbury band. He was a strong democrat, for which the party rewarded him by the office of supervisor of the town one term.

BILLIOUS AVERY, junior, began life as a farmer in the easterly part of Salisbury when that part of the town was nearly an unbroken wilderness, and his first dwelling was made of unhewn logs, and he had to clear his land of the native wilderness. He was a successful farmer and business man and was often called upon to draw up contracts, deeds and mortgages. He served the town as justice of the peace for several years and as supervisor two or three times.

In February, 1857, he removed to Oneida Castle, N. Y., where he was elected justice of the peace in 1860 and held the office until he resigned it in the spring of 1870. He was postmaster from the beginning of Lincoln's administration till he died in 1870. He was foremost in establishing the Oneida Castle Union School, and was one of the board of education for some years, and he and his son, James B., have each served several terms as president of the village of Oneida Castle. ### 663

CAPTAIN ORIN AUSTIN AVERY was born at Corinth, Vermont, February 10, 1837. In 1855, young Avery went to Boston, residing there till 1857, when he enlisted in the 5th U. S. Cavalry and was sent to Carlisle, Pennsylvania, for instruction in cavalry tactics. In 1858, he went to Texas, and served there till the outbreak of the civil war, when he was sent with his regiment back to Carlisle and thence to Washington under command of Gen. Stoneman.

He served with the Army of the Potomac from the first battle of Bull Run to the battle of Antietam. His term of enlistment, five years, having expired, he was honorably discharged Oct. 28, 1862. The value of his services, however, was recognized by the government, and he was offered, by Governor J. Y. Smith, the lieutenancy of the 3d Rhode Island Cavalry, commanded by Willard Sayles, which he accepted and again entered the service. He was soon promoted to captain, in which capacity he served till the close of the war and was again mustered out of the U. S. service, Jan 25, 1866.

Captain Avery is now, and has been since 1879, engaged in the implement and stock business. He owns one of the finest farms in Clay County, Neb., and pays considerable attention to stock raising. He is also a heavy stockholder in the Edgar Brick and Tile Company, of which he was the first president. He is also one of the heaviest stockholders in the Edgar Creamery. He is a man of very positive character, correct and upright in business and justly deserves the prosperity he enjoys. Residence, Edgar, Nebraska.—From local paper.

ASAHIEL STEVENS AVERY was born Aug. 15, 1822. He is an artist and an author. Years ago he published a small drawing book, and later a large lithographic drawing of the village of Morris, N. Y. He was the postmaster of Morris for some twelve years, and was known as a public-spirited man. He occasionally wrote for the press. His reminiscences of the town of Morris were published in the Morris Chronicle, and afterwards embodied in the "History of Otsego County." He was one of the first spiritualists in the country, and occasionally wrote upon the subject, for the Religio-Philosophical Journal, of Chicago, Ill. In 1880 he furnished a series of letters for the Oneonta Press. He disclaims all pretensions to literary ability, however.

CHAPTER FIVE.

SAMUEL.

The following (see note) gives the line of ancestry of Susannah Palmes, who married Samuel :

The ancestral line here presented, embracing thirty-four generations, or from King Egbert to the present century, is a record of historic facts verified by proof ; for so much thereof, as comprises the interval of time between the reign of Egbert and the arrival of Lady Susan and her husband, Gen. John Humfrey, in Massachusetts Bay, is the well authenticated record given by Burke in his Peerage of Great Britain,<sup>1</sup> a work repeatedly approved and accepted by the courts of record in England, as furnishing the best evidence ; while the remaining or American part of the same is as fully and satisfactorily established, by the original official records and other documentary proofs, in the State Archives of Massachusetts and Connecticut, and elsewhere, much of which is here incorporated in the form of foot-notes.

No more than a casual glance along the line of the ten centuries here given is necessary, to discover a notable array of sovereigns, soldiers and statesmen famous in British or European history. Without attempting to show an exhaustive list of these historic personages, a few of the more renowned among them may here be pointed out.

And first, are noticed sixteen of the early rulers of England—namely, Egbert, Ethelwulf, Alfred, Edward the Elder, Edmund I., Edgar the Peaceable, Ethelred the Unready, Edmund Ironside, William the Conquerer, the first two Henrys, John, Henry III., and the first three Edwards. But Edward III.<sup>1</sup> was the son of Isabella, daughter of Philip the Fair, King of France, who descended from Hugh Capet and nine intervening French Kings; among whom were Robert II., Philip Augustus, Louis VIII., and St. Louis. The last is not the only saint who figures in this pedigree. The mother of Edward II. was Eleanor, daughter of Ferdinand III., King of Castile and Leon, who was canonized by Clement X. Again, through Richard of Conningsburg, Earl of Cambridge, whose mother was Isabel, daughter of Peter the Cruel, the line of descent is direct from Sancho the Great, and Alphonso the Wise. Other crowned Ancestors are the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, and several Kings of Scotland, notably Malcom III., and "the gracious Duncan," his father.

Finally, the Shakespearian gallery is, in truth, crowded with the portraits of those found in this line of ascendants—e. g., besides those already mentioned, Lord Hastings (of the reigns of Edward IV., and Richard III.), George Duke of Clarence, Richard Plantagenet "the Yeoman," Edmund Mortimer Earl of March, Edmund of Langley Duke of York, and Lionel of Antwerp Duke of Clarence.

NOTE—The above (preface to a line of ancestry of Lucy Walsworth, 800-1800, A. D.) and the following line of pedigree, from King Egbert to Susannah Palmes, inclusive, together with the notes relating thereto, are taken from the work entitled the "Williams-Walsworth Genealogy," by Alexander H. Wright, Esq., New York City (Tuttle, Morehouse & Taylor, New Haven, 1887, publishers), by kind permission of the author.

SECOND GENERATION.

SAMUEL AVERY, youngest son of Capt. James, was a large farmer, and most of his life a magistrate. He, like his brothers, was a captain of a train band, on the East side of the river, for considerable time, and the military spirit that he inherited from his father has descended to the present generation. The foregoing pages will amply prove that "blood will tell," and in every branch of the great family. He was a public man from the beginning; he was chosen moderator upon the legal organization of the town of Groton, in 1704, and its first townsman, at the first town meeting, in 1705, and held that office till his death, May 1, 1723.

Hill's Tract, of several hundred acres, was conveyed to him by Uncas, in exchange for Betty, an Indian woman, taken captive in Philip's war, and given to James Avery, who sold her to Charles Hill in 1678. His farm was in what is now called South Groton, and I have been informed that some parts of it are still in the hands of, and still cultivated by, some of his descendants. His descendants are not so very numerous; his first and third sons died very young, and the second, only left two, of whom we have any trace, and the others, Nathan and Waitstill, but one. The fashion of naming the sons from members of the family, is shown in this family in a marked degree. The first was named for his father, Samuel, jr.; the second for his uncle, Jonathan, his mother's brother; the third for his grandfather, William; the fourth for the father's grandfather, Christopher; the fifth for the mother's grandfather, Humphrey; the sixth, I have no clue; the seventh for the governor, John; and the eighth for a brother of the governor, and perhaps a cousin of the mother, Waitstill. Samuel died the youngest of the four brothers, and is buried about a mile northwest of Seth Williams' farm, in Ledyard, on the farm of C. H. Stanton.

Samuel, youngest son of Captain James and Joanna Green-married, Oct. 25, 1686, in Swanzey, Mass., Susannah [slade;

HUMPHREY AVERY, junior, was born in Groton, Ct., but we have learned but little of his early life. Soon after he reached his majority he purchased a large tract of land on Long Island, N. Y., many particulars of which will be learned from the following extract from the Genealogy of the Lefferts Family, by Teunis G. Bergen, of Bay Ridge, L. I.:

"Humphrey Avery, junior, of Suffolk County, N. Y., by fire and sickness, becoming involved in debt, procured the passage of an act by the legislature of the Colony, in 1756, authorizing him to dispose of his lands by lottery, to pay his debts, in which, from the following conveyance, Leffert Lefferts, of Bedford, appears to have drawn a prize: Humphrey Avery, of Winthrop's Patent, in Suffolk County, to 'Leofford Leoffords,' of Bedford, in Kings County, deed-dated July 17, 1758, and recorded in lib. B. p. 344, in off. of the clerk of Suffolk County. The conveyance set forth this, 'Whereas, the said Humphrey Avery, in the year of our Lord, 1756, obtained liberty, by act of governor and counsel and General Assembly of said Colony, to make sale of his real estate in the said County of Suffolk aforesaid by way of lottery, for the payment of his debts, and for that end managers were appointed and sworn, who on oath have divided the said real estate into thirty-six parts, numbered and appraised the same, published a scheme, and put out and disposed of tickets, and in the month of June, 1758, in the town of Brookhaven in said county, in the presence of His Majesty's justice of the peace, with two clerks on oath, did in the usual manner proceed to draw the said lottery, and, whereas, lot number three, which was as a land prize in the scheme of the lottery aforesaid, fell to the known by name of Pochang, being valued at £900, was drawn with the ticket number six thousand and nineteen, whereof the said Leofford Leoffords was the purchaser and possessor; now this indenture witnesseth that the said Humphrey Avery, in consideration of the money paid him by the said party of the second part,' etc., conveys premises 'called and known by the name of Pochang Neck, bounded south with the great bay, east by a creek to the head thereof, thence north to the country road, thence westerly by the road to the great gate, thence westerly half way between the two dwelling hoses (houses), to Pochang Brook, thence southerly by the brook and cove to the bay first mentioned, containing by estimation upwards of three hundred acres of upland and meadow.' There is no evidence on the records of Suffolk County, showing what Leffert Lefferts or his heirs made of this property.

Avery's tract, as per H. Onderdonk, jr, was once owned by Gov. Winthrop, of Mass., and appraised at £6,900. It stretched four miles along the south bay, extending seven miles back in the interior of the island. There were in the lottery 1,616 prizes, to 6,384 blanks, making 8,000 tickets, sold for 30 shillings each: of these prizes 1,580 were cash prizes of £3 each, equal to £4,740, and the tract or farm was cut up into 36 parts (each of which was a land prize), of a total valuation of £6,900, with a deduction of three per cent. The tract abounded in pine timber with a fine range for sheep and cattle, was divided by rivulets into seven necks, having on it four dwelling houses, a grist and saw mill, etc.

We next hear from him in connection with his brother in the New Hampshire grants. In Sept., 1774, the commissioners of the Land Office of the State of New York granted to him and 27 others, 28,000 acres, which they on the 29th of September conveyed to Samuel Avery. The probabilities are that he never removed from Long Island, as the tradition has always been that he died there. His son Humphrey, 3d, removed to Wyoming Valley, Pennsylvania, and has descendants there still.

SAMUEL AVERY, son of Humphrey, was educated for a lawyer, and soon after marriage he emigrated to Vermont, where he believed he had acquired a large quantity of land. The Burlington Free Press furnishes us with an interesting account of these lands, by Pliny H. White, of Coventry, Vt.:

"There are three Avery's Gores in the State, one each in Addison, Essex and Franklin Counties. In the former days there were three others, and perhaps more, but they have ceased to exist.

Samuel Avery, whose name they bear, was in 1782, and at least two years later, a Deputy Sheriff for Cumberland County, and keeper of the jail at Westminster. There is still on file in the Secretary of State's office, an account of his services in connection with the trial of Timothy Church, the Phelps, and other Cumberland men, who were indicted for riotous resistance to the authorities of Vermont. Avery continued to live at Westminster till 1799, and perhaps longer.

"Many years previous to 1780, Avery and his associates had bought of Col. Henry Lydius, two townships, one of 28,000 acres, lying north of Otter Creek, and the other of 24,000 acres, adjoining and south of Otter Creek. Lydius was an Indian trader and a land speculator at Albany, N. Y., who, in 1732 had what purported to be a deed executed by certain Mohawk Indians, conveying two immense tracts of land, one of which extended 60 miles from the mouth of Otter Creek and was 24 miles wide. He divided this into 35 townships, of about 36 squares in each, and sold several of them. In 1744, he procured from Gov. Shirley, of Massachusetts, a paper confirming, in the name of the King of England, the title acquired from the Indians. The State of New York, however, wholly ignored the title of Lydius, and granted the same land to other persons. [See Hall's Early History of Vermont, Appendix 8.]

"In 1780, Avery petitioned the Legislature of Vermont for a confirmation of his title to the lands purchased of Lydius, but it appeared upon examination that they had already been granted by the State to other persons, and it was thus made impossible to comply with the petition. He had previously entered a caveat against making such grants, but probably the caveat was not in season. The next year the petition was renewed. It affirmed that Avery had been nearly 20 years trying to perfect his title; that he was 'forty days in the wilderness' without shelter, surveying them; that after the Lydius title was treated as void he was delayed seven years in procuring a confirmation from New York, and then only succeeded by paying fees to the amount of £800, and incurring other expenses amounting in all to about £2,000, which nearly exhausted all his resources, and what he probably thought would be the most influential with the Legislature, that he had ever been a fast friend of this and the United States, and, early and ever, publicly and privately, espoused the cause of these New Hampshire Grants against the proceedings of New York. The petition, however, did not avail; nor was it till 1789 that he was able to procure the passage of a resolution granting him 52,000 acres of unlocated lands to be found therein, for such moderate fees as shall be deemed just and equitable.

"Avery could not locate his land, nor even a fourth part of it, in one body; and accordingly he located it in parcels wherever he could. The largest parcel was in Orleans County, west of Newport, and contained 11,080 acres. The next parcel in size was in Essex County, south of Norton, and contained 10,685 acres. It is mountainous land, and remains uninhabited to this day. He located 9,723 acres in Franklin County, south of Montgomery; 8,744 acres in Addison County, east of Ripton; 5,970 acres in Chittenden County, south of Huntington; 2,936 acres in Caledonia County, northeast of Kirby; and 1,318 acres in Windham County, between Athens and Grafton. Some of these lands he lost by means of 'squatter sovereignty,' and it is not likely that he ever received for them all anything like an adequate return for the time, labor, anxiety and cash which they cost. The Gores in Essex and Franklin Counties still retain their original proportions, but all the others have been extinguished, partially or totally, by annexation to neighboring towns."

After the Revolutionary war, in the settlement between New York and Vermont, the State of Vermont appropriated $30,000 for the benefit of the New York settlers.

Taking these alphabetically, the first claim is that of Samuel Avery, who for a considerable time was a resident of Westminster, in the County of Cumberland. He appears to have been one of the favored inhabitants of the New Hampshire Grants, to whom patents were freely issued by the New York government. His grants were of a late date, when it had become an object for the earlier city speculators to strengthen their interests in the territory, in order to overcome the formidable resistance of the settlers to their iniquitous claims. One of Avery's claims was founded on a patent issued to him and twenty-three other associates for 24,000 acres, bearing date August 16, 1774. On the 17th and 18th of the same month, these twenty-three associates conveyed their shares to him. Another claim was for 28,000 acres patented to Humphrey Avery and twenty-seven others, September, 1774, all of whom, on the 29th of that month, conveyed their titles to him, thus vesting in him the whole 52,000 acres, and showing very clearly that the grants were made for his benefit. These tracts adjoined each other, and were in the easterly part of the present county of Addison. These with a claim for 200 acres in Durham and 1,000 in another town, of which Samuel Avery was the grantee, made up the 53,200 acres, for which he was allowed the sum of $2,655 03. These grants were made by Lieutenant-Governor Colden.

About the year 1800, Mr. Avery emigrated to the Susquehanna Valley, near Tioga Point, now Athens, in Pennsylvania, and but a few miles south of the New York State line. He was one of a committee to settle difficulties between Connecticut and Pennsylvania land companies in 1802. Here he purchased a large quantity of land and began improvements, but was soon brought into litigation with those who had purchased of the heirs of William Penn. This was a long and costly suit and finally terminated in the defeat of Avery, who not only lost the land, but his money also. He now removed to near Owego, and made another purchase of land, the rise of which, coupled with an extensive law practice, soon brought him to affluence. He built an elegant mansion, and was at his death one of the most popular and wealthy men in that part of the State.

CHRISTOPHER AVERY removed to Pennsylvania as early as 1773, with the Connecticut Colony ; was sent as delegate to the Connecticut Legislature in 1774 ; was in the government employ in 1775, as shown by the following pass :

" To all whom it may concern :

"The bearer, Christopher Avery, is employed by the Continental Congress on business of importance, and is journeying in the protection of the Barriers and is to have free range to Wyoming, on the East branch of the Susquehanna River, and must not be hindered or molested, but all persons are requested to afford him every assistance he may need and forward him on his journey as quickly as possible.

" Given under my hand at Philadelphia, this 5th day of November, 1775.

" JOHN HANCOCK, President."

On June 1, 1778, he was commissioned by Governor Trumbull as justice of the peace for the county of Westmoreland. He was also appointed one of the justices "to assist the judges of Westmoreland."

He was an ensign in the Continental Army, and was killed at the Massacre of Wyoming, July 3, 1778.

"Wyoming Valley is a beautiful and fertile tract on the Susquehanna river, in Luzerne County, Pennsylvania. It lies N. E. and S. W., having an average breadth of three miles and a length of 21 miles, and is enclosed by ranges of rugged mountains about 1,000 feet high. The valley was purchased from the Six Nations in 1754, by an association formed in Connecticut and called the Connecticut Susquehanna company; but no permanent settlement was attempted till 1762. The next year the settlers were dispersed by the Indians. In 1769 a body of 40 Connecticut pioneers was sent thither by the Susquehanna company, but found themselves fore-stalled by some Pennsylvanians, the Six Nations, having in the previous year again sold the territory to the proprietaries of Pennsylvania; and for the next six years Wyoming was the scene of numerous conflicts between settlers from the two colonies, both of which, under their charters, as well as by purchase, claimed possession of the soil. The Connecticut people, however, so far succeeded in maintaining their hold in the valley, that at the commencement of the Revolutionary war they had established there a flourishing town called Westmoreland, containing more than 2,000 inhabitants. On June 30, 1778, a body of 400 British provincials, with about 700 Indians, under the command of Col. John Butler, entered the valley, which was ill prepared for defence, many of its best men having fallen in the Continental armies. On July 3, Forty fort (so called from the 40 Connecticut pioneers), the principal fortification, was summoned to surrender. A consultation ensued, and the available military force, comprising about 300 men of all ages, under command of Col. Zebulon Butler, a Continental officer, having decided to give battle, were on the same day, after a desperate struggle, defeated and driven back to the fort, with a loss of more than two-thirds of their number, who were massacred by the Indians and Tories with every circumstance of savage cruelty, not even the prisoners being spared. Some of the latter were put to death on the evening of the battle, and Queen Esther, a half-breed Indian woman, to avenge the death of her son, tomahawked 14 with her own hands near a rock which still bears her name. On the 5th, the fort surrendered; and, notwithstanding the promises of the British commander, the Indians showed so little respect for property or life, that most of the surviving inhabitants fled from the valley. The whole number who perished during the war by violent deaths probably exceeded 300. The barbarities perpetrated by the Indians and Tories, shocking as they were, were greatly exaggerated by contemporary and succeeding narrators. Brant, the Mohawk chief, whom Campbell, in his 'Gertrude of Wyoming,' stigmatizes as one of the principal actors in the tragedy, it is now generally believed, upon his own testimony and that of his friends, took no part in Butler's invasion. The troubles of Wyoming by no means ended with the war. The vexed question of title to the territory, which had been held in abeyance between Connecticut and Pennsylvania, was revived in 1782, and a commission by Congress to decide upon the controversy, reported in favor of Pennsylvania. But upon an attempt by the authorities of that State to eject the Connecticut settlers from their lands, the latter again took arms, and for several years the conflicts of the early colonists were renewed. In 1787, the legislative assembly of Pennsylvania confirmed the settlers in their possessions, but it was not until the commencement of the present century that all land claims were quieted by law. Wyoming is now the centre of a rich agricultural and mining region. A monument was erected in 1843 on the site of the battle-field of July 3."—[American Encyclopædia, Vol. XVI, p. 753.]

46

WAIGHTSTILL AVERY was educated at Princeton College, N. J., from which he graduated in 1766. He remained there as a tutor for a year, and then went to Maryland and studied law with Luther Littleton Dennis, and soon removed to North Carolina, where he was admitted to practice, February 4, 1769. In 1772, he was a member of the Provincial Assembly, and soon was appointed Attorney-General for the Crown. In 1774, he, with 185 other prominent patriots, signed the following Declaration of Independence:

"We, the subscribers, do declare that we will bear faith (sic) and true Allegiance to the Independent State of North Carolina, and to the powers and authorities which may be established for the Government thereof: And we will, to the utmost of our powers, maintain and defend the same against Great Briton, and all other Powers, Enemies to the United States of America. And this we most Solemnly and Sincerely declare without any Equivocation, Mental Evasion or Secret Reservation whatever."

He first, settled at Salisbury, where he remained for a year, then at Charlotte, where he soon acquired friends and rapid promotion. He was active in encouraging education and literature, and was a devoted friend of liberty. In the dubious and dangerous conflict with the mother country, he led the bold spirits of the day in the patriotic county of Mecklenburgh, and was a member of the convention in May, 1775, which passed the famous declaration. He was one of those selected to sign that immortal document. He was colonel of the Jones County militia, and as such was in active service in the war.

The minutes of the Council of Safety for Mecklenburgh show his zeal in the cause of liberty, and the confidence of his countrymen in his integrity and talents is proved by the important duties he was engaged to, perform.

This called down upon his head the vengeance of the enemy, for when Lord Cornwallis occupied Charlotte, in 1781, the law office of Colonel Avery, with all his books and papers, were burned.

In 1775, he was delegate from Mecklenburgh in the State Congress, at Hillsboro, which placed the State in military organization. In 1776, he was delegate from the same to the same, which met at Halifax, and which formed the State Constitution. He was appointed one of the signers of the Proclamation bills. In 1777, he was sent by the Council with orders to Gen. Williamson, at Keowee, in South Carolina. He was appointed by Gov. Alexander Martin, in 1777, with Brig.-Gen. John McDowell and Col. John Levier, to treat with the Cherokee Indians. This Commission did nothing, but subsequently with William Sharpe, Joseph Winston, and Robert Lanier, the treaty of Long Island of Holston was formed on the 20th of July, 1777. This treaty was appointed by Patrick Henry, Governor of Virginia. His instructions were issued to Col. William Christian, Col. William Reston, and Col. Evan Shelby, or any two of them. Gov. Caswell appointed Waitstill Avery, William Sharp, Robert Lanier and Joseph Winston. The Long Island of Holston is about three miles long, on the main Holston River, just above the point where the north fork joins it. He was elected the first Attorney-General of North Carolina, in 1777, and held this office for one year. He then removed from Charlotte, Jones County, to near Morganton, in Burke County, which he represented in 1782, 1783, 1784, 1785 and 1793, and where he enjoyed peace and plenty and the love and regard of his neighbors till his death, March 13, 1821. At the time of his death he was the patriarch of the North Carolina bar, an exemplary christian, a pure patriot and an honest man.

"A curious relic of Andrew Jackson has been obligingly sent us by a friend. It is related in Parton's 'Life of Jackson' that when Old Hickory was Young Hickory, just twenty-one years of age, he fought the first duel of his life with Colonel Waitstill Avery, a distinguished member of the bar of North Carolina. Young Jackson had a criminal case before the Court at Jonesboro, in which he was deeply interested, Colonel Avery being counsel on the other side. In the course of the trial, Avery was severe in his comments upon some of the legal positions taken by the younger lawyer, and used language which he afterward admitted was too personal and sarcastic.

"On the second morning of the trial, Jackson, acutely mortified by the repetition of the offence, tore a blank leaf from a law book, wrote a challenge upon it, and gave it to his antagonist with his own hands. This challenge, now before us, yellow with its ninety-four years, is the relic to which we refer. We copy from the original:

97

EBENEZER PUNDERSON AVERY was born in Groton, Conn., May 21, 1765 ; he consequently was not old enough to enter the war of the Revolution, but to show that he was of the right stock, we mention that at the massacre of Fort Griwold, on the 6th of Sept, 1781, nine of his relatives fell, and he waded in blood over his low quartered shoes, the next morning, to obtain their remains from the Fort. He married at Great Barrington, Mass. ; here he resided for some time, and then removed to the then so-called " Royal Grant," in Herkimer County, N. Y. ; here he built and ran a grist mill for a few years, and it was believed to be located farther west than any mill for grinding grain on the Continent. In 1796, he removed to Pompey, and settled on a farm a mile south of Oran ; here he reared his large family, and died Sept. 10, 1840. At his majority he dropped his first name, and after was known as Punderson.

Mr. Avery was peculiarly fitted by nature for a pioneer ; he was among the first in any enterprise to improve the minds, the morals or condition of his fellow men ; the church, the school and public library always found in him an ardent supporter ; his patriotism secured him a place as captain in the militia ; and his integrity, as administrator for many a widow and orphan, his love of justice, made him the arbiter in his neighbor's quarrels, and his excellent judgment often turned the scale, for or against, many an incipient undertaking.

But he was most useful to his fellow men, perhaps, as a mechanic. His trade properly was a mill-wright, but he was often employed on small machinery, and on one occasion, by a very wealthy man, to construct a perpetual motion. He had been taught to work by square rule, and a barn still standing next south of his old residence, is believed to be the first in the country framed by "square rule." He was almost continually employed in building grist mills, saw mills, fulling mills, carding machines, tanneries, and later, cider mills and threshing machines. About 1820, he constructed a cast-iron plow, which for many years was a general favorite in his locality ; his inventive faculties were large, and he would probably have allowed them some little scope, and at some cost, had not prudence and the demands of a family of twelve children, kept him busy in labor that paid every day. His maternal grandfather, for whom he was named, graduated at Yale College, in 1726, and was a Congregational minister at Groton, Conn. He conformed to the Church of England about the year 1732. Having received orders in London in 1735, he organized a congregation, on his return, in Norwich, at the village of Poquetanuck, about the year 1738. His name appears on the Society's lists as "Itinerant Missionary in Connecticut," until 1753, when he was settled in the church of New Haven, the place of his nativity. In the spring of 1763, being succeeded by the Rev. John Beardslee, he took charge of the church of Rye, Westchester County, and officiated there and in the adjoining towns until the following year, when he died (Sept. 22), aged 60 years.

HON. JOHN HUMPHREY AVERY was born in Vermont and followed the footsteps of his father in the study of law, and after the removal to Owego, N. Y., studied with Vincent Mathews. He was the representative of his district in the State Legislature in 1814 and till his death was in constant practice. His sons all followed him in the practice of law, and one, Charles, was a noted judge in Tioga County. None of them married, and but one is living that we can learn of, and in New York City.

John Humphrey, (Hon.) second son of 41-15-9 and Mary married, Nov. 3, 1806, Stella Seeley [Anna Rose; 234 Lesbia Platt, born Oct. 2, 1825, md. Isaac Newton Jerome.

235 Guy Hinchman, born Aug. 30, 1829; I believe living, single.

DR. JOSEPH HINCHMAN was born on Long Island, on the 28th day of August, 1762. He was the son of Dr. Joseph Hinchman and Anna Griffin. His father died while he was quite young. He enlisted as a soldier when he was sixteen years old, and was at Morristown during a winter of great privation and suffering. After the expiration of the time for which he enlisted he studied medicine with his uncle, James Hinchman, in Florida, a small town in Orange County, New York, and commenced the practice of medicine in Minisink. He married in December, 1787, a daughter of B. Seeley, of Milford on the Delaware. He came to Newtown, now Elmira, in 1788. He had an extensive practice as a physician and received the appointment of sheriff of Tioga County. He was a person of fine tastes and much cultivation for those times; he died July 25th, 1802; was the first person buried in the new burying ground at Newton, now Elmira. Within a few years the remains were removed and an appropriate monument erected by the doctors of Elmira. His wife was a lady of rare intelligence and composed with much ease. They died quite young.

Harriet Amelia, born June 27, 1815, died Feb. 8, '76. Stella Avery, born Sept. 19, 1817. Caroline Augusta, born Feb. 6, 1820. James, born Sept. 23, 1822, died Dec. 3, 1823. Lydia Abby, born June 26, 1827, died Aug. 12, 1876.

CHARLES PUMPELLY was one of the four brothers who founded the City of Owego. In the early history of the southern part of the State he was known as a power in every walk of life. In the settlement of that region he was one of the foremost of the pioneers, and his large landed estate rendered him, at all times, one of the busiest as well as one of the most influential of men. He represented his district in the Assembly of the State in 1825, and for many years was the supervisor of the town. He held many other public offices, and did his share in making the Tioga Valley bud and blossom like the rose.

His large family of girls married men of distinction and graced every walk of life they were called upon to fill. The eldest, Mary Ann, married Nov. 16, 1826, George Bacon, of Connecticut, a man of mark; the second, Susan Isabella, married April 24, 1832, George Pumpelly, a graduate of Yale, with N. P. Wilder and other distinguished men; the third, Frances Eliza, married Sept. 17, 1833, Joseph S. Bosworth, a lawyer and judge in New York for many years; the fourth, Catharine Ann, married Sept. 18, 1835, John Mason Parker, Judge of the Supreme Court; the fifth, Harriet Amelia, married Oct. 14, 1857, Theodore Frelinghuysen, President of Princeton College, for his second wife; the sixth, Stella Avery, married March 1, 1854, John Mason Parker, the husband of Catharine, for his second wife; he was the representative of his district in the 34th and 35th Congress and afterwards was Judge of the Supreme Court until his death; the seventh, Lydia Abby, married July 25, 1860, James Forsyth, for many years President of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, of Troy, N. Y.; the eighth, Caroline Augusta, never married.

106

Susan, fourth daughter of 41-15-9 and Mary Ann Rose; married, time not ascertained, in Owego, N. Y., Nathan Camp, of whom I have been unable to gather any facts. They had one son, who resided in Ithaca for some years. This son, Frederick M. Camp, married Sarah Platt; their children were John H., Mrs. Frank Griswold, of Auburn; Mrs. Patton, of Bath, Maine; Mrs. David Briggs, of Auburn.

HON. JOHN HENRY CAMP was born in Ithaca, N. Y., April 4, 1840. He received a common school education in Tompkins County, and then went to the Albany law school, where he graduated. He entered the law office of a Mr. Bishop, of Rochester, and a few months later was admitted to the bar. He chose Lyons as the scene of his labors because at that time there were fewer attorneys in Wayne County than elsewhere, in proportion to the population. He opened an office with the late Robert W. Ashley, but soon after, he was appointed by Judge Cowles to take charge of the Lyons office of the surrogate, and this appointment was of great service to him in making acquaintances all over the county. He remained in the same position under Judge Norton, but never became "surrogate's clerk," preferring to be free to practice his profession. His clientage grew rapidly with his reputation for ability and eloquence. He early evinced that fondness for politics which through his later years became a passion, and was remarkably successful from an early period as a stump speaker, his services being constantly in demand during the campaign season, and on the stump he had few equals in the country. In 1867, Mr. Camp was elected District Attorney, and he served during a most brilliant term, his labors including a brilliant prosecution of the murderer Graham, which attracted the attention of the whole country. In 1872, he was one of the Republican Presidential Electors, and a secretary of the Electoral College. Five years later he took his seat in the forty-fifth Congress, and he served there six years, giving place to Hon. Sereno E. Payne. His career there was brilliant, and his influence extensive. It was while at Washington that the dyspepsia, which has been the bane of his later years, first assumed a serious form. Pepsin was his ally, and he would go to Washington with two hundred powders in his trunk.

It was just after his last term in Congress, in 1883, that he was nominated for Justice of the Supreme Court. His colleague on the Judiciary ticket, Hon. W. Dean Shuart, of Rochester, had incurred the enmity of many of the leading members of the Monroe county bar, and an association was formed to defeat the Republican nominees. This, combined with the tidal wave of Democracy growing out of the Folger-Cleveland contest, the fact that the Democrats put up men of exceptional personal popularity, and treachery in his own county, sufficed to cause his defeat in a naturally Republican district. Despite the terrible odds against him, Mr. Camp was confident to the last, and could hardly believe the news. It was a crushing blow. For many months, perhaps years, it rankled like an arrow in his side, and he never forgave the men who had encompassed his defeat. But it was destined to give him more enduring renown than could have fallen to him as a judge. For a time he devoted himself exclusively to his profession, and with the most remarkable success. Well read, versatile, keen and original, hard work was all that was needed to make him recognized as a truly great advocate and counselor. His services were in demand not only in his own county, where at one time the firm Camp & Dunwell was connected with almost every case which reached the courts, but throughout the State. His partnership with Mr. Dunwell, formed in 1877, made the firm one of the strongest in the State, and the New York Central railroad and numerous other corporations sought their advice and assistance. The business was a most lucrative one and Mr. Camp was enabled to put by a handsome fortune, while never limiting expenditures which kept pace with his generous instincts. His home was for years a most hospitable one, and hundreds of men high in professional and political life have dined with him. Soon he again took a hand in politics, not now as a candidate, but as a controlling force which was felt not only in Wayne County, but throughout the State. As a politician Mr. Camp has had few equals. His talents were speedily recognized by the State leaders, and in all the important councils of his party his voice has been heard and his influence felt. He has for years been one of the men that Mr. Platt has implicitly trusted, and a year ago, when by reason of the infirmities of advancing years, Hon. John N. Knapp, of Auburn, was obliged to relinquish the State committeemanship, and the chairmanship of that body, Mr. Camp was chosen to fill the first office, and would doubtless have been placed in the second, had not his health forbidden. He died October 12, 1892.—Lyons Republican.

POLLY MYRA AVERY, daughter of Waightstill and Leah Avery, of Burke County, North Carolina, was born August 24, 1779. In July, 1796, being not then 17, she made a clandestine marriage with Caleb Poor. She lived, first, on one or another of her father's farms in Burke County, where her seven children were born. In 1813, she was divorced from Caleb Poor, by an act of the General Assembly of North Carolina. Afterward, she lived at Horse-shoe Farm, Henderson County, N. C., given her by her father. In 1823, she married Jacob Summey, of Asheville, N. C. After

Mr. Summey's death, she returned to Horseshoe, where she died, Feb. 20, 1857, and was buried at Shaw's Creek graveyard, Henderson County, N. C. Mrs. Summey was evidently a woman of repute and character, impressing upon her children and children's children a strong sense of her attractive personality.

COL. ISAAC THOMAS AVERY, was a very extraordinary man. The late Gov. Swan, who was president of the University of North Carolina, and noted for his knowledge of the history of families and his accurate estimate of moral and mental qualities of men, considered him one of the first men of the day.

Being an only son, he was compelled to suspend his classical education at the age of fifteen, at which time his father was disabled by paralysis. Yet in his old age he could read Latin with the greatest facility. From that early age he managed a large estate with fine judgment, relieved his father of some embarrassments, and established a reputation as the most successful farmer and the largest raiser of horses and cattle in his section. He was cashier of the Morganton branch of the State Bank for thirty years. But he found time with all his labor and the care of a large family to accumulate a vast fund of information. There was scarcely any subject on which he was not well informed. In early life he represented Burke County in the Legislature of the State, but in later years would not accept any office except that he acted as a member of the Governor's Council, whose duty it was under the old Constitution to advise the Governor when he made an appointment to office.

DANIEL AVERY was a man of rare business tact and enterprise. Early in his manhood, he received a military commission, which harmonized with the stir and bustle of his younger life. Joshua Avery, the father of Daniel, was a man of considerable enterprise and prominence for his time, and was evidently interested in the military profession, it being largely through his influence that each of his four sons received, when quite young, military commissions. About 1790, he removed from Stratham to Meredith Bridge, N. H., known in recent years as Laconia. Here he opened a store in a small building near the "Bridge."

His business rapidly increased and ere long became very extensive. He then operated the first cotton manufactory in the place. It was of wood, but served his purpose very successfully till its destruction by fire, Feb. 13, 1823. When returning homeward one day, after having just paid the last note due for the cost of the factory and water privilege, he was startled by an alarm of fire, and soon learned that his factory was past all hope of rescue. Not daunted, however, by the unexpected disaster, he soon erected a much larger building of brick, fitted it with the necessary machinery, and there prosecuted a very successful business until his death, in 1826.

By his personal efforts, Mr. Avery also secured the organization of a bank, of which, under the name of Winnipiseogee, he was the president until his death. He was the owner of a large tract of land which, till within a few years, has been retained by the family, but is now nearly all covered by buildings.

It is remarkable that, of the eleven grandchildren of Daniel Avery, only one is now (1892) living. Only four of the eleven married, and of the seven children of the preceding generation, not one now remains alive.

SAMUEL AVERY was a member for a considerable time of the academy at Exeter. He laid a good foundation for an intelligent career in every department of life to which subsequent years introduced him. While yet a young man, he received a lieutenant's commission in the company of artillery in his native town. In 1816, he married Moody Clark, daughter of Joseph and Comfort (Weeks) Clark, of Greenland. He with his young wife removed to Wolfeborough, where he entered upon his life-work. Having spent the previous year with his eldest brother, Daniel, of Meredith Bridge, now Laconia, he supposed himself, at this starting point of domestic life, to be the possessor of from four to five hundred dollars. He purchased the real estate on which he passed his subsequent life. There were then only a small house of one story, a barn, a store, and a cooper's shop, the last two of which he opened for business. The store being destroyed by fire, in 1824, he built another, in which he and his sons, who succeeded him, continued the old business till 1865. He engaged also at different times, in blacksmithing, shoe-making, harness-making, milling, coöpering, farming, and with Messrs. S. and D. Pickering and Hon. Nathaniel Rogers, in the manufacture of woolen goods.

Mr. Avery was thus a very busy man. Though starting with nothing, and suffering for many years from greatly enfeebled health, he pressed quietly, yet vigorously, forward, till he became one of the foremost men of the place. Always disinclined to public official life, he was yet persuaded to hold the office of town clerk for three successive years, 1819-1821, and again for two years, in 1830 and 1831. He also served in 1825, 1830, and 1835 on the board of selectmen.

From the outset of the enterprise, Mr. Avery took a warm interest in the Wolfeborough and Troftonborough Academy. After it was incorporated, January 20, 1820, its friends intended to erect a suitable school building by means of a stock company that should issue two hundred shares at ten dollars each. It was found, however, that only one hundred and fifty of these shares were sold to fifty-three stock-holders, and the progress of the enterprise was arrested for want of funds. Mr. Avery felt so strongly the importance of finishing the building already erected, and had so much faith in its usefulness that he took forty-three of the remaining shares, thus giving a new impulse and new hopefulness to the work.

Among the many men of subsequent prominence who were numbered among the early students, was Henry Wilson. He was born and reared in poverty not far from Wolfeborough, and had been unfortunate in losing the little he had gained as the result of his own persistent industry. Bitterly disappointed and depressed by this unlooked-for crisis in his cherished longing for education, "he found," says the writer of the life of Mr. Wilson, "a sincere friend in Mr. Samuel Avery, of Wolfeborough, who kindly offered to board him just as long as he might wish to attend the academy in that town." This generous offer was accepted; and many years afterward, when Mr. Wilson, as Vice-President of the United States, re-visited the place, it was with deep emotion, and his eyes filled with tears, as the old school building and his old home were both in full view, that he said in the presence of many friends, "For all I am, I am indebted to Mr. Avery. It was through his influence and kindness I received my education in the academy, when I was without money and discouraged, and when all others refused to aid me."

This thoughtful kindness shown by Mr. Avery to Henry Wilson was manifested in many other cases to young men who thirsted for an education which they had not the means of securing, and it should be added to their honor, that every man of these befriended students ultimately repaid the last dollar of his indebtedness.

Mr. Avery was a corporate member of the board of trustees of the academy and, with several others, held a deed of the property in trust. He was also a member and liberal supporter of the Congregational Society from its organization until his death. In every department of his life, Mr. Avery was known and trusted as an upright, honest man. No one ever accused or suspected him of meanness or fraud. His last years, though often affected by enfeebled health and sometimes not a little suffering, were in the main free from seriously disturbing incidents. His last sickness, which he bore without complaint, was long and exhausting. He died peacefully, trusting in Christ, October 5, 1858, and was borne to his grave sincerely mourned and universally respected. His wife, also highly esteemed and loved, died March 6, 1876.

162

REVEREND JOHN HUMPHREY AVERY was born in Boston, Mass., July 22, 1807. He weighed at birth but three pounds, and was of such a delicate organization that no one thought he could ever be raised to maturity. His mother said that his head could be placed in a common size coffee cup, and she often had to place her hand to his nostrils to ascertain whether he was breathing or not. He was subject to convulsive fits, which he and his mother attributed to the fact that his parents were cousins. He was so slender that he did not attempt to go to school until he was thirteen years of age, but such was his proficiency that in eighteen months, in a competitive examination, he won the Franklin Medal in the Boston public schools. He entered Phillips Academy, February 2, 1827, aged 20, and left in 1829.

By dint of earnest effort, he worked his way through Amherst College, and graduated at Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., in 1834. He afterward went to Andover, N. H., and graduated in the professional, educational and theological courses. He was ordained as a Congregational minister, and was pastor in Plymouth, Mass., in 1842 and 1843; at Danvers, Mass., till 1845; Austinburgh, Ohio, till 1854; and since at Amboy, Ohio. The honorary degree of A. M. was conferred on him by Union College, and also by Brown's University. He was a successful preacher, but withdrew from the active church work on account of a partial change of views not entirely consistent with the tenets of the Congregational church, to which he belonged. What has been his subsequent career, I have not learned. He was living at last accounts, 1891.

William W. Willard was born in Van Buren and was of a delicate organization and a feeble man all his life. He was a jeweler; learned his trade with Mr. Farr, of Manlius, and first opened a shop in Cazenovia. He removed to Syracuse in 1842, where he formed a partnership with J. Dean Hawley. They soon became the leading jewelers of the town. Mr. Willard took a deep interest in education, and was elected school commissioner several times. He was also interested in mechanics, and was one of the originators of the Franklin Institute, and later, the Onondaga Historical Association, of which he was an original director and remained as such till his death.

185

WILLIAM AVERY was born in Herkimer County, August 16, 1793. He early manifested a desire to be a mechanic, was continually contriving water mills, and long before he attained his majority he was employed in all parts of the country to repair machinery, and was considered the most skilful workman known in Central New York. His inventive faculties were of a high order, but often from a lack of books on mechanical subjects, he lost much valuable time in experiments that had long before been tried and exploded. His first invention of any importance was a machine for making wire harness for looms in 1824. His other inventions were numerous, and hardly a year passed without a patent being granted to him. The one by which he is best known, was the rotary engine, believed to be still the simplest and cheapest in the world, and in a limited sphere has proved for about fifty years extremely valuable. The first steam saw mill at Centerville, this county, was run by one of these engines for many years, and did a vast amount of work.

In 1822 he built a small steamboat, which was first launched on the mill-pond at Buellville; it was afterward taken to Cazenovia-lake, and finally to the Erie canal. The Onondaga Gazette, of October 1, 1823, says: "A steamboat built at Buellville, in Pompey, passed through this village last week." The engine from this boat was purchased by the late Henry Gifford, of Syracuse, who used it to pump salt water for many years.

Mr. Avery moved to Salina and carried on a large foundry and machine shop and afterward removed to Syracuse, where he was for a time in company with Elam Lynds. He built the machinery for the first steamboat on Lake Ontario, and was the first white man to navigate St. Lawrence river, from Kingston to the head of the Long Sault Rapids, passing two considerable rapids before reaching that point. Travel on that route in those days was so inconsiderable that it did not pay, and the proprietors withdrew the boat in a year or two. In 1837 he removed to Chicago, which he then described as a little, sickly, sunken hole. He soon took a contract of the state of Illinois to make the rock cut on the summit of the Illinois and Michigan canal; the price was $1.49 per cubic yard, and the estimated cost $240,000; this was considered the largest contract that had ever been taken in this country at that time. While completing this great undertaking, by which the waters of Lake Michigan were calculated to be diverted to the Mississippi, he was attacked by a fatal disease, and died on the 16th of November, 1840, at Athens, and is buried at Rockport, Illinois. Some of his feats of walking when the country was new were considered very good; he walked on one occasion from Oran to Ithaca in a day and back the next.

Candace, fifth daughter of 97-40-15-9 and Lovina Barnes ; married, Nov. 20, 1817, in Pompey, N. Y., Horace

Sweet, born April 1, 1796, died Aug. 4, 1858; children:

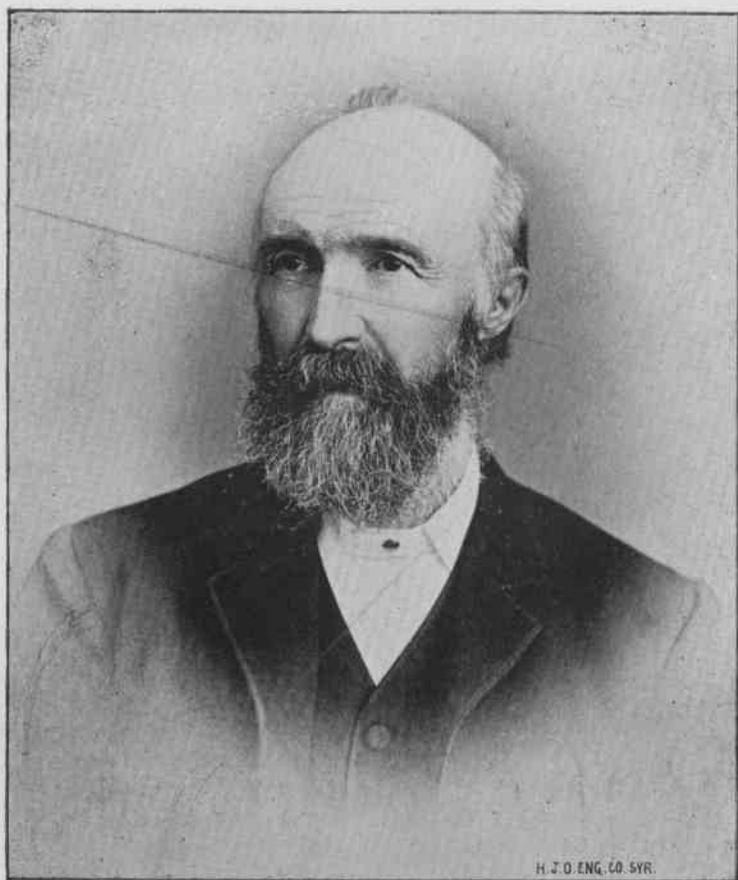

Clarence Hervey Sweet was born in Pompey, N. Y., June 23, 1819, and died in Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 10, 1883. He left his home, at 13 years of age, to become a clerk for Phares Gould, in Skaneateles, and was afterward with Abner and Cortland Bates for several years. He went to Weedsport to assist his brother-in-law, where he remained until he married Marion Zerviah Munger, late of Morrisville, Sept. 20, 1842, when he removed to Rochester, to assist his brother-in-law, Eleazer Conkey, till the spring of 1847, when he went into business for himself. In the spring of 1848, he was elected treasurer of the city, with a larger majority than had ever been given to any candidate for any office in that city. This so much interfered with his business that he failed, and for the remainder of his life, he always worked for others, and mostly in commercial business in the city of Rochester, where he died. They had two children: George M., born July 11, 1846, and Helen Z., born Oct. 25, 1855, died March 26, 1860

Helen Lucetta Sweet was born July 2, 1821, and was married to her cousin, Edmund A. Finck, of Weedsport, Jan. 23, 1840, and died April 19, 1842. She left one daughter, Helen L., born Oct. 12, 1841.

Anson Avery Sweet was born April 7, 1823, and married Lucinda M. Wheelock, Sept. 25, 1845. He remained on the farm until the spring of 1850, when he removed to the hamlet of Watervale, where he carried on a general repairing shop till the autumn of 1858, when, with other members of the family, he removed to the city of Syracuse. Here, in connection with his brothers, William A., John E., and brother-in-law, Charles C. Bates, they commenced the manufacture of agricultural implements. This they continued but a short time, when the two younger partners withdrew. The remainder, fortunately, secured a large contract for making mowing machine bars and sections. They soon discovered a process for tempering them in such a way that the edge was hard and would hold an edge, with the remainder soft. This was the secret of their unparalleled success. They added building to building, until the property was stocked in a company, at a valuation of $200,000. In February, 1865, Mr. Sweet was elected alderman of the 5th ward, and in 1878, was elected one of the general assessors of the city, which office he held for eight years. They had one son, Charles E., born April 6, 1856, who died May 24, 1869.

Homer DeLois Sweet was born Jan. 24, 1826. My life has been a checkered one. On the first of September, 1840, I went to Weedsport, N. Y., to assist my brother-in-law in a general store; lost my health, and in May, 1841, was sent to Messina Springs, where I staid till September. The first part of 1842 was spent on the farm, then went to Pine Plains, Dutchess County, with a drove of sheep and cattle. The first part of 1843, on the farm; in September, joined a teachers' class, at Pompey Academy, passed an examination, received a certificate, got a school, taught ten days and was turned out. Threshed corn and oats all winter. In the spring of 1844, was ill with the mumps, and likely to die for some time; unfitted for hard labor the remainder of the season. In 1845, was on the farm till November and then went to Rochester and sang comic and sentimental songs in Bishop's Museum till 1846, then went to Verona, N. Y., to take charge of the postoffice, till June; then on the farm till the spring of 1847, when I was 21 years old. I then went to Rochester to assist my brother, where I remained till the spring of 1849, when I returned to the farm. April 8, 1850, went to Cohasset, Mass., and shipped on a fishing smack and made several voyages, fishing for mackerel, which ended about July. In 1851, peddled lightning rods. 1852, on the farm till October, then organized a minstrel troupe and gave several concerts. After this, went to Cuba, Allegany County, and learned the telegraph business for the New York and Erie Railroad, where I remained till April. Made two trips as a brakeman from Olean to Dunkirk. Next was employed as an assistant by the engineers on the Genesee Valley Canal till near July; went to Rochester and was engaged to stand before a panorama of Uncle Tom's Cabin and tell the story, with songs, while the rolls were shifting. Got ready to "speak my

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions and activities. It emphasizes that this is essential for ensuring transparency and accountability in the organization's operations.

2. The second part of the document outlines the various methods and tools used to collect and analyze data. It highlights the need for consistent and reliable data collection processes to support informed decision-making.

3. The third part of the document describes the different types of reports and dashboards that are generated from the data. It explains how these tools provide valuable insights into the organization's performance and trends over time.

4. The fourth part of the document discusses the challenges and risks associated with data management and analysis. It identifies common pitfalls and offers strategies to mitigate these risks, such as implementing robust security measures and regular data audits.

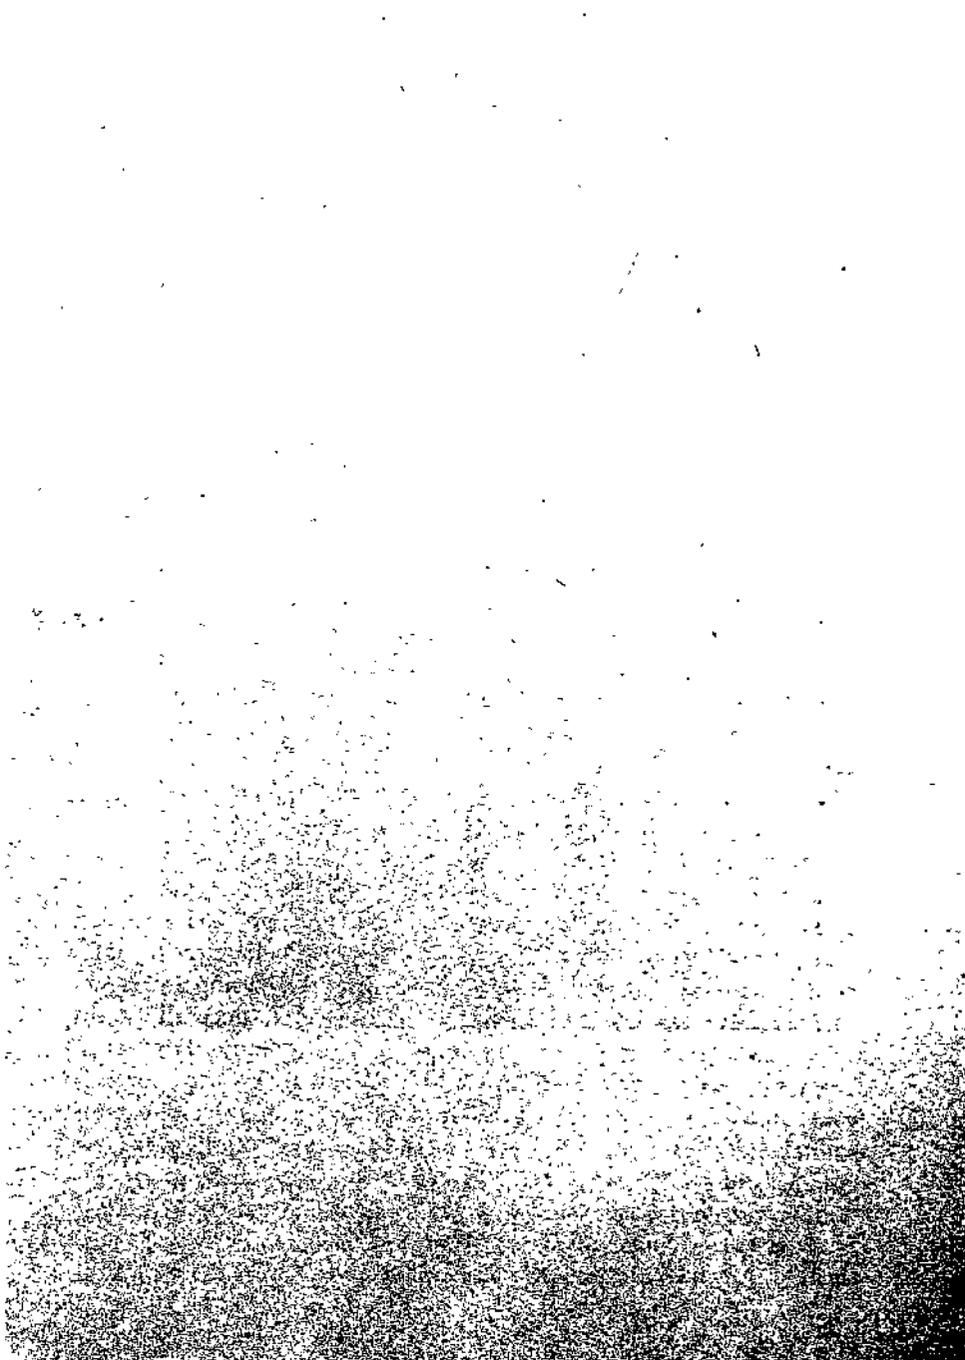

5. The fifth part of the document provides a summary of the key findings and recommendations. It concludes by emphasizing the importance of ongoing monitoring and evaluation to ensure the effectiveness of the data management and analysis processes.

piece," when the sheriff made a levy and took the box receipts, and I was out. I then went to Canada, looking for a job. On August 1, 1853, was engaged as a stake maker and driver at $1.00 per day; had my wages raised to $1.25 before night as a rodman, and before the month was out to $2.25 as a man-of-all-work. I remained with the Buffalo and Brantford R. R. Co. till the company broke down in October, 1854. I returned to the farm, and in 1855, was employed as foreman on the Cayuga and Seneca canal, building an immense dam at Seneca Falls, till the contractors failed, then went to work for another company, overseeing a dozen stone dressers, and laid out and dressed the stone for a lock and two culverts. This work was finished and I returned to the farm. The season of 1856 I was on the farm continuously. In the spring of 1857 I was employed by John H. French to revise and correct county maps, for the making of a large map of the State, and in gathering material for a Gazetteer of the State of New York. This occupied all of two years. In the spring of 1859 I commenced to survey the County of Onondaga, with an odometer, and traveled 2,700 miles. In 1860, labored on an atlas of the State, till the mutterings of the war stopped all business. In 1861, all quiet till about August, and then at the atlas, drafting, till 1862; went to Albany to copy maps, and staid till April; then to plotting, till September; was engaged to oversee the building of a reservoir for the Syracuse City Water Works; at this all the good weather in 1863 and 1864, and in the winters at Albany. In 1865, took charge of a company's work east of the city, in trying to prepare peat for fuel. In August was employed to plan and erect a large stone bridge, in the town of Onondaga, now in the city; the plan is original and the erection occupied about a year. It is the largest bridge in Central New York. In the winter of 1866-7 I made a map of the great wilderness of New York, of 3,600 square miles. In 1867 went to Europe, to the World's Fair, in Paris, and returned in September, when I was engaged to visit every portion of the county and write up its condition, agricultural, mechanical and manufacturing interests; this took me six months. I became ill, which continued at intervals till 1870, only surveying 8,000 acres of land for the State, in 1868. In 1870, was employed by the city to make an investigation as to the feasibility of supplying the city with water from Tully Lakes. Was taken ill again, but recovered sufficiently by the 24th of January, 1871, the day I was 45 years old, to go into the County Clerk's office as searcher of titles, where I remained for nine years. I next went to North Carolina to build a reservoir, to supply a gold mine, where on the 2d of November, 1880, I injured my back, which rendered me a cripple for life. Since then I have not done much, excepting in 1886, when I took charge of a party of engineers to ascertain the feasibility of supplying the city with water from Salmon River. Before this was completed I was again stricken down with overwork, which lasted me about six months; then I made a map of Oswego County, and then commenced on the "Avery Family," which is detailed in the preface to this book.

My life has been a dual one; from the age of thirteen, I have continually been making verses and even at that early period, was contemplating a book on the Philosophy of English Versification. When too ill for manual labor in 1868 and 1869, I revised my verses and fitted for printing my "Twilight Hours in the Adirondacks," which was published in 1870. A part of 1880 I labored on my Philosophy, and again in 1884-5-6, and finally completed it in 1889. My life has been a busy one. On October 19, 1871, I married Lydia Ophelia Alling, but we have had no children.

Wheaton Bostwick Sweet was born March 11, 1828. His education was practical and was mostly rudimental for the business he was calculated to follow for life. He, more than any of the others, from the start, was naturally a farmer, and through life, has endeavored to be not only a good one, but of the very best. He has an investigating mind, and of anything that is developed in agriculture he has been sure of ascertaining the value, criticising its defects and adopting its valuable points. He has been a successful grain raiser, wool producer, and an excellent dairyman. His farm, situated about 1,600 feet above the sea level, was used for several years for an experimental station for testing the effects of climate and elevation on new samples of seeds and grains, by the Agricultural Bureau at Washington. He has 165 acres under cultivation, on clayey loam, with a substratum of Hamilton shale. He was married, February 3, 1859, to Sophia E. Seymour. Their children are: Henry Morton, born July 7, 1861, died May 21, 1884; Helen Sophia, born Sept. 25, 1864; Clarence Hubert, born Nov. 21, 1882.

William Avery Sweet was born October 12, 1830. On the 7th of November, 1848, he went to work in an ax and edge tool factory, for $40.00 a year and his board and washing. In the first week, he forged, tempered and polished a butcher knife, turned, and put on a handle, with a brazed ferrule, and took it home and presented it to his father. He staid his year out, and then commenced roaming the country as a journeyman black-mith. This he continued for some time, and finally started a rifle factory in Syracuse. This he finally gave up and, as narrated above, came to Syracuse. His fortunes are identified with Anson A. till 1868, when he purchased the south part of the property and commenced for himself. He soon took in a partner, and organized the "Sweet's Manufacturing Company," with a capital of $200,000, of which stock he took 101 shares. In 1872, the company purchased the old distillery, a little west of the city line, and turned it into the "Sanderson Steel Works." He managed this for several years, and finally sold out, confining his mind and talent to the "Sweet's Manufacturing Company." This concern has grown to gigantic proportions, having in 1890, manufactured and sold $740,000 worth of steel. As some of the stock-holders became dissatisfied, upon one plea or another, he invariably bought them out, until he owns all of the original stock, which is worth a great deal more than par. The statistics of his plant are as great as any in the city, excepting one, and he has lately added to it an immense building for the purpose of making steel wagon tires. It is calculated for four sets of rolls. A part of a red-hot old railroad bar is run through the first set, and split into three pieces. Each one of these pieces goes to a particular set of rolls and is converted into the finished product before it gets cold. The "ball" of the old rail starts about 8 or 10 feet long, and when finished is from 110 to 120 feet long.

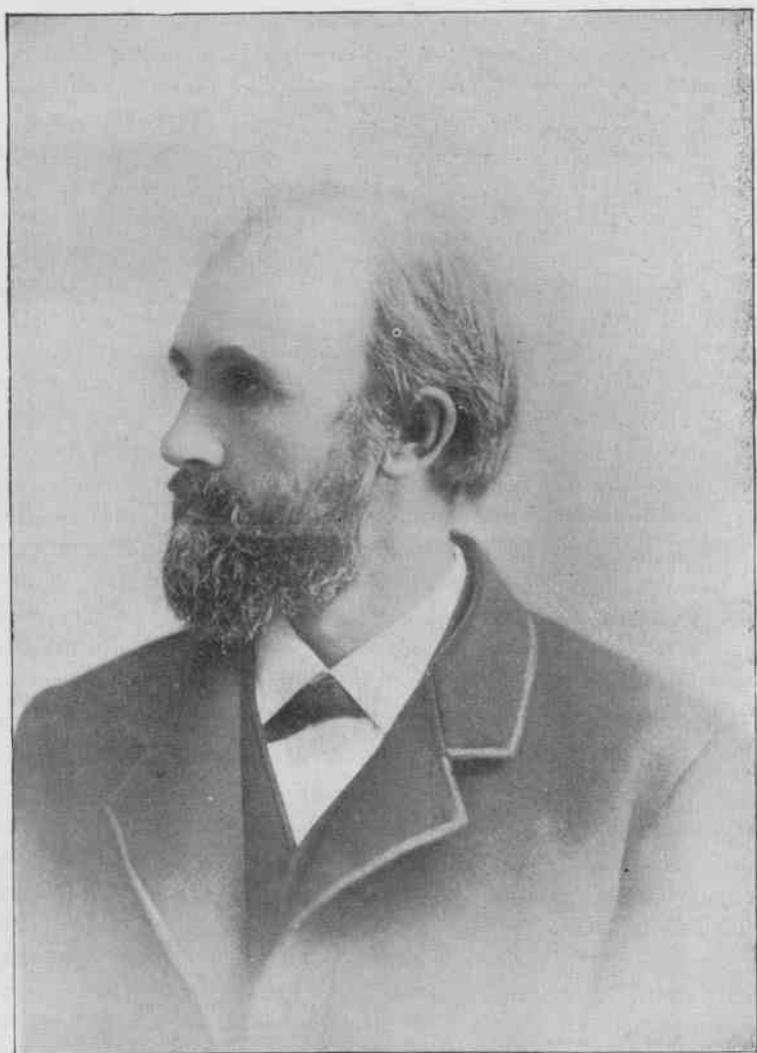

He was married, March 5, 1851, to Mary Ann Jones, who died November 27, 1864. He married, for a second wife, Mrs. Marie H. Tallman, daughter of John B. Hudson, Portland, Maine; children, Mary Mills, born March 14, 1868; Ethel, born April 23, 1875.

John Edson Sweet was born October 21, 1832. The boy's education was limited to that obtainable between the ages of seven and fifteen at the local schools. His taste for books was limited, but his aptitude for mechanics came promptly to the fore. When twelve years old he made a small violin, and his people, fancying he had made the instrument because he wanted to learn to play it, placed him with a distant relative to take lessons. In the two weeks of instruction, which he still remembers as being a very long time, he came home able to play a half dozen tunes. In 1850 he was apprenticed to the carpenter and joiner trade. In the winter of 1850-51 he obtained, through the efforts of a former neighbor, a position in the first, and at that time the only, architect's office in Syracuse. For ten years his life was devoted to carpenter and joiner work, building, and what was then called architecture, but what was, in fact, the making of construction drawings for buildings. A second winter as office boy with C. O. Holyoke. In the summer of 1857 he built unquestionably the most unique and best farm barn in the country. The plans for this barn received the first premium in a national competition held by the then leading agricultural paper in the country—the Rural New Yorker. They were repeatedly published in that paper and were followed by a series of articles, from his pen, on architecture, extending through a dozen years.

The breaking out of the war found him in Selma, Ala., as architect and superintendent of what was intended to have been the second best hotel in the South.

His services as architect being in little demand during these troublous times, he spent some time as pattern-maker and draughtsman in the railroad shops of Syracuse. In the summer of 1862 he went to the London Exhibition, spending some months on the continent and the remainder of the year as a draughtsman in the international patent office of Hazeltine, Lake & Co. An account of his travels was given in a series of twenty letters to the Syracuse Standard.

Securing a patent on a nail machine in which the Patent Nut and Bolt Company of Birmingham, England, took an interest, he went there and worked for them as draughtsman while superintending the construction of the machines. While there some short articles were furnished to Zera Colburn and published in Engineering.

Returning to Syracuse in 1864, he engaged with Sweet, Barnes & Co. as designer and draughtsman. In February, 1867, he attended the Paris Exposition, and returning to Syracuse he again connected himself with Sweet, Barnes & Co. and for three years had charge of their works. From 1871 to 1873 he was mainly occupied in bridge-building for Howard Soule, and during leisure in the fall and winter of 1872 made the plans and patterns and did most of the work on the first straight-line steam-engine. Also during this time he contributed twenty articles to Engineering under the title "Mechanical Refinements." From 1873 to 1879 was the period of his connection with Cornell University, the title of professor not being conferred, however, until 1878. As a teacher he was one of those—few and rare—whose pupils become disciples. Seeing no co-operation or support in doing what he felt to be possible and what has since been done, he resigned his position and returned to Syracuse. Experimenting with the original engine and obtaining what appeared to be the maximum of simplicity and perfection of action in the governor, he commenced building the engine in a very modest way. The Straight-Line Engine Company was soon organized with him as president and general manager, which position he still holds. In the organization of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers he was one of the prime movers. He was elected one of its managers, and, after repeatedly declining the honor, was elected its third president.

On November 24, 1870, he married Caroline V. Hawthorne, who died May 12, 1887, leaving no children. On May 9, 1889, he married Irene A. Clark; they have no children.—By F. A. Halsey, in Cassier's Magazine for April, 1892.

Ann Eliza Sweet was born January 3, 1837. She was educated at Homer, Manlius and Syracuse. She married Charles C. Bates, April 23, 1857. He studied law with P. G. Clark, and in the office of Morgan, Blatchford & Seward, in Auburn. He received an appointment as assistant clerk in the Court of Appeals in 1864, and attended the Albany Law School, and was admitted to practice in 1855. He graduated at the Albany University, and subsequently practiced in Auburn, Manlius and Syracuse, and died in Syracuse, December 9, 1869. Children: Isabel, born March 2, 1858; Georgianna, born March 6, 1862.

John and Mary Sweet came to Salem, Mass., in 1631, with their three children, John, James and Meribah. They removed to the Providence Plantations, in 1638, where land was granted them, and where John soon died. John, son of the above, born about 1620, married Eliza, about 1654, and their son, Henry, born about 1661, married Mary, about 1686: their son Joseph, born March 7, 1687, married Rachel, about 1709: their son, Timothy, born May 27, 1713, married Mrs. Alice Mitchell, nee Sweet, about 1750: their son, Timothy, born Oct. 24, 1753, married Eunice Woodworth, Sept. 14, 1780: their youngest son, Horace, born April 1, 1796, married Candace Avery, Nov. 20, 1817. Mr. Wood was in early life a wagon maker and resided in several places. About 1845, he removed to Mishawaka, Ind., and carried on the business for several years, and finally confined himself to fancy flourishing and striping wagons for the famous Studebackers, of South Bend, Indiana.

CYRUS AVERY was born in Pompey, Onondaga County, N. Y., in 1807. He grew up on the farm, and having the advantages of the use of tools and the experience of an elder brother as well as his father—both good mechanics—he early developed a love for machinery. At the age of 22, he bought a "water power" near Manlius, in the same county, and made his first venture for himself. Not meeting with success, he began working for his brother, at Salina, and was with him two years, a part of the time at Oswego.

He then went as engineer on the steamboat "Brockville," running from Brockville to Long Sault, on the St. Lawrence River. This was one of the first boats that ran on that part of the river, and the Indians still lived on the banks. He was also engineer on a boat on Lake Ontario, running from Oswego to some port in Canada. Some years later himself and a younger brother went to Illinois, where he assisted on a canal job. Mr. Avery trapped prairie wolves where the city of Chicago now stands, and brought home a robe of their furs and his wages for the time which he had worked, amounting to about $500, with which he said he could have purchased nearly all of the land on which that city now stands. After this he spent one year at Baldwinsville, N. Y., and in the spring of 1840, he removed to Tunkhannock, Pennsylvania, expecting to profit by the "good times" incident to the "digging" of the North Branch canal. He built a shop, foundry and dwelling, which, enlarged and improved, are now occupied by Judge Bearheart. There is still in the shop an engine lathe built at Cazenovia, N. Y., and transported from that place by team. Unfortunately for Mr. Avery, the State appropriation for the canal ceased about that time, and the good times were deferred for a number of years.

A few years later Mr. Avery took up the practice of mechanical dentistry, a profession then in its infancy, and acquired excellent proficiency therein, becoming quite famous in this and adjoining counties.

During the winter of 1842-43 he was converted to Christianity (having previously called himself an infidel), under the ministry of Revs. A. L. Post, of Montrose, and Jonathan Melvin, and with his wife and other converts were baptised in the creek near the old school house in the lower end of the town. This was about the beginning of the Baptist church in this place, and for some time the school house was their place of worship. With his religion he also became a convert to abolitionism, and his house for years was the home of the preachers and anti-slavery lecturers.

These events, more or less commonplace, bring us to a period in Mr. Avery's history where his life seems to have gradually taken on new developments. When about fifty years old he began to investigate the different phenomena of spiritualism, and as the years went by he gradually merged into a strong disciple of that doctrine. From the year 1857 until the end of life he became the subject of strange and remarkable dreams and visions, which he interpreted in his own way as bestowing great wealth on himself and family.

Believing himself to be under the influence of disembodied spirits, he by their impressions upon his brain invented several machines which he gave himself no credit for designing, but attributed to the power mentioned. One of these gifts, a horse-power, was to be of especial value, and he was informed by the same influence that a fortune awaited him for it in Russia.

Finding a congenial friend with means to carry out this mission in a Mr. Thompson, of Philadelphia, they in June, 1863, started for that country, taking a full-sized power as well as a threshing-machine. On the way they exhibited it with good success at the Hamburg International Exhibition, and in good time reached Moscow, Russia, his destination. Having a good business at home, Mr. Thompson soon returned and Mr. Avery was left in the land of the Muscovite. He sold the machine they took with them to the Grand Duke and put it in operation. He said of all the discouraging places in his life, that beat them all, when he tried to start that machine among those people who could understand not a word of his, nor he of their, language.

Mr. Avery remained an exile from his native land, spending most of his time in the two cities, London and St. Petersburg. During these years he "sought out many inventions," and he spent his time making models, writing specifications, sending letters, Bible study, etc. Suffice it to say here that he never lost faith in his "mission" and firmly believed until the last that he would live to bring back wealth abundant to reimburse every one who took stock in his inventions, to bless his own declining years and place every member of his family beyond the easy reach of adversity. During these years his health has been excellent and his friends at home had hoped he would return and have some years of life in his native land. His last letter was dated December 24, in which he wished all his friends a happy Christmas, and said: "My health is middling—not much to brag of. The nights are too long; I sleep too much to feel first rate. They will grow less now."

In social life Mr. Avery was companionable and interesting, being naturally humorous and an inveterate story teller. The incidents of his own life were sure to find an eager auditor and the repetition of his visions and dreams among mediums and at seances would rival the tales of Arabian Nights or Eastern fable.

To his old friends who knew him in the early days of the country there will be no need of eulogy in these lines. None could know him but to respect him, and all wished him success and will lament his death in a foreign land. In a letter dated February 1, James T. Griffin, of London, says: "With all his peculiarities he lived a pure and spotless life, and those who knew him hold his memory in high esteem."

Extract from a letter dated January 14-26,* 1884:

"Mr. Cyrus Avery died to-day at the Mary Magdalen Hospital, where he had been only three days. His death was caused by extreme old age and total loss of vitality.

"On Wednesday, 17-29, he will be buried from the little English chapel here, and thence taken to the cemetery at Smolensk, hard by. If you, his near relatives and friends, wish any stone placed over his grave, you can send me what you see fit and I will see that it is arranged.

"He spoke of his wife and children, and of Mr. Bement, and of all of you, especially Mr. Miller. His last words were: 'Gardner, I cannot die in Russia!'

"Respectfully,

"D. T. GARDNER."

* A difference in time of about twelve days exists between this country and Russia, and Mr. Gardner gives both the Russian and American dates, the former first.

SAMUEL AVERY was born in Pompey, about a mile south of the hamlet of Oran, February 18, 1812. In his youth he spent the most of his time on the farm, as most young men did, and his winters in the common school, having a taste for mechanics, which he indulged in at every opportunity. He continued to cultivate his father's farm for several years, and finally tried his talents at merchandise in the hamlet of Amboy, Onondaga County. He was unsuccessful and went to assist his brother William, who had a contract for making the rock cut on the summit level of the Michigan and Illinois canal. When the State of Illinois became bankrupt, he returned to Pompey, tried farming and some minor speculations, and finally was induced by Dr. Daniel Denison to commence to study medicine, in 1842. In the summer of 1844, he graduated from Castleton College, Vermont, and immediately began the practice of medicine and surgery in the city of Rochester, and in this line his extra mechanical ability aided him materially.

He staid in Rochester several years, but thinking it might be better to grow up with some thriving village, he removed to Phoenix, Oswego County, where, with the exception of a few months in Syracuse, and a year in Baldwinsville, he has since resided. He gave up the practice about 1870, and was chosen secretary of the Oswego and Onondaga insurance company, and during its life was an efficient officer. His inventive faculties were of no mean order, and several patents by the United States government give proof of their originality and usefulness. His cigar box making machinery has been in successful operation in hundreds of shops in the union, and none has successfully competed with it. He carried on the business of box making for several years, but increasing age began to tell on his originally rugged constitution and he disposed of the business. His time for the last ten years, or nearly, has been partially occupied with an interest in the knife factory in Phoenix, of which he has some time been president and at others simply a director.

About twenty years ago he became deeply interested in religious affairs, and from careful study and patient thought, without any violent conversion, he announced that he had changed his belief, and united with the Methodist Episcopal denomination. That he has been a true and consistent member of the church, a faithful adherent to their doctrines and tenets, all his neighbors will testify. His life has been a useful one and he has filled the measure bountifully.

CYRUS H. AVERY was born in Tunkhannock, Pa., July 28-1803. He went to Illinois in July, 1838, and located at Amesville, now called Garden Prairie. He was a man of active business habits, sterling integrity, and judicious in his counsels. He took a deep interest in all the prominent events of his earlier years; and was largely identified with the organization and building of the Congregational church, and faithfully administered toward its financial and spiritual strength to the full share of his ability and influence. As a justice of the peace, was known for his clear, impartial and faithful administration of law and right. A man into whose secular life was carried his Christian principles, one whom his friends could trust, and feel their interests safe in his hands. As a Mason, an honor to the fraternity, who built solid and true the fabric of character by the grand design,

"Beneath the Omniscient Eye above,
The glorious Architect divine."

As a Christian man he planted, in that mellow, receptive soil, the family, all the seeds of virtue, intelligence, devotion to God and their Redeemer, thus adorning his age with moral beauty, and preparing himself to be gathered to his grave as a shock of corn fully ripe in its season.

HON. JOSEPH CONANT AVERY was born in Tunkhannock, Wyoming County, Pa., June 9, 1817. He was educated in Wilkes Barre, Pa. After completing his education, he studied medicine for a year, but abandoned the idea of practising medicine, he emigrated to Stark County, Ill., at the age of twenty years. Having received a small patrimony from his father's estate, he there engaged in land speculations, such as tax titles, etc. He was there married to Miss Martha Marsh, March 13, 1841. Shortly afterward he went on a farm and cultivated it for three years, but he did not find the business profitable. As an instance of that accurate business habit which was one source of his subsequent success, we relate that he kept an accurate account of the minutest details of his farming operations, and was able thereby to know precisely his profits. The account book having these items is still in the possession of his family.

On the first of April, 1845, he started for the new land of Oregon, leaving behind his wife and three children. He brought with him an ox team and about twenty-five head of stock cattle. He reached the Willamette valley in October, 1845, and made his headquarters the following winter at Oregon City. But he spent most of his time in exploring the Willamette valley. During the winter he located a land claim on the spot where the city of Corvallis now stands, and in June, 1846 moved on the claim. This was at that time twenty miles south of any claim on the west side of the Willamette River. After locating the claim he wrote for his wife to come out to him. There were no mails in those days, and he sent the letter by Mr. Judson Sawyer, who started for the States the first of April, 1846. He delivered the letter to Mrs. Avery the August following. On receipt of the letter, the wife made the necessary preparations and started on the long and dangerous journey across the plains, traveling with Sawyer's company, in an ox team. She started the first of April, 1847, and reached their claim, now Corvallis, the first of October following.

In the fall of 1848, Mr. Avery went to the California gold mines, and returned the first of January. He returned to the mines in May, 1849, and worked four months, after which he went to San Francisco and bought a stock of goods, and returning home with them, opened a general merchandise store near his residence. It was then the only store south of Lacreole, in the Willamette valley, at that time, the next one being that of John Waymire, at what is now the town of Dallas, in Polk County. He made the mercantile business the principal occupation of his active life. He found here a tribe of Indians who claimed this section of country, known as the Calapooias. They were not troublesome, except that they were petty thieves and stole everything they could lay their hands on. At one time they stole his gun and horse and all his clothing except what he had on, leaving him no coat whatever. He recovered his gun and horse through the help of a friendly tribe of Indians, known as the Klicitats, but his clothing was never recovered. During the summer of 1846, while building his cabin, he lived several months on boiled wheat and milk and at one time several days on milk alone.

During the summer of 1849, the first court ever held in Benton County was held in Mr. Avery's log cabin near Mary's River. The only business transacted by the court was the public sale of a small sailing vessel then lying at the mouth of the Columbia River. Joe Meek was the United States Marshal and auctioneer; Judge O. C. Pratt was the judge. These two comprising the court, and Mrs. Avery and her three children comprising the constituency, were the only persons present at the proceedings. It would be interesting to know who bought the vessel.

He was a man of extraordinary intellect, of varied and extensive culture and was thoroughly posted in history and contemporary events. His integrity and ability were early recognized by the people of the territory of Oregon. He figured prominently in the politics of Oregon for a quarter of a century. He was elected by the people of Benton County to represent them in the first Territorial Legislature and was repeatedly elected and served in that capacity for many years afterwards. He was made Special Postal Agent, under Buchanan's administration, of the Post Office department for the district of Oregon, then comprising Oregon and Washington Territories. After serving as such for nearly two years and finding the office seriously interfering with his private business, he sent in his resignation, December 27, 1855.

Being the founder of Corvallis, it was an object of constant care and solicitude to him, and much of its prosperity is due to his enterprise and liberality. He was instrumental in securing the boundary lines of the county to run so as to make Corvallis near the centre of the county, north and south, and by this secured the location of the county seat here, which was made in 1851.

When a member of the Legislature he secured the location of the State University here. In the year 1855, being a member of the Legislature, he traded off the University for the location of the State capital. The capital was located at Corvallis until the next Legislature passed a law temporarily removing it to Salem, and leaving its permanent location to a vote of the people at the next election. Corvallis received a majority of votes cast at that election, but through a delay in the returns of some of the counties, and some sharp practice on the part of those interested at Salem, Corvallis was counted out. The Legislature held a part of a session here in the old building which now forms a wareroom in the rear of Zeb Davis' store.

Mr. Avery took an active interest in the Agricultural College. It was mainly through his efforts that it was located at Corvallis. He was appointed by the Legislature, with D. W. Douthit and Jno. F. Miller, to locate the college lands for the State. He went into the southern part of the State and made a personal examination of all the lands selected for that purpose. He was appointed by the Legislature, October 21, 1870, with L. F. Grover and N. H. Craner, to prescribe rules and regulations for the government of the college and a course of study. He was mainly instrumental in securing the money to purchase the Agricultural College farm and subscribed liberally towards it. He was a zealous advocate and a liberal subscriber to the fund raised by the people of this county to begin the construction of the Willamette Valley and Coast railroad from Corvallis to Yaquina. In fact through all his life he took more than an ordinary interest in all public affairs, and guarded with a paternal care everything of a public nature that was conducive to the interests of the community in which he lived. Being of a generous nature he always lent a helpful hand to the early emigrants, who often reached here destitute of clothes or food. He never refused to advance the necessaries of life in such circumstances and his deeds of charity and of kindly hospitality to the emigrants of those days will always be held in loving remembrance by them. And to show the sterling character of those pioneers, he said that he never lost a cent by aiding them, although he often sold goods to perfect strangers on credit.

While in the enjoyment of perfect health he was stricken with a shirroid tumor, which affected the blood vessels of his neck and after an illness of nine months he died at his residence in Corvallis June 16, 1876, at the age of 59 years. His widow and six children survive him — Benton (Oregon) Leader.

ALIDA CORNELIA AVERY, sixth in the family of three daughters and five sons of Hannah Dixon and William Avery, was born in June, 1833, in Sherburne, Chenango County, N. Y. Her father was one of the little band of abolitionists of Central New York, who marshalled under the leadership of Gerrit Smith, and he was wont to relate the personal perils and social ostracism encountered by these pioneers in advancing political freedom; especially was the first Anti-Slavery convention, held in Utica in 1834, and attacked by a fierce mob, a theme never wearied of by him or his home audience. He lived to see the end of American slavery and of the Rebellion, when, like old Simeon, he said: "Now, Lord, let thy servant depart in peace," for the prayer of his whole life was answered. The children of this Puritan Congregational deacon had the hardy regimen of farmer folk; work, school and meeting being much larger factors than play in their daily and yearly routine.

They had the fair educational training afforded by the district schools and academy of their native town, and before she was sixteen, the subject of this sketch began to teach, and continued in that vocation, with but brief intervals, for some years.

In the spring of 1857, she entered upon medical study under the tuition of Drs. S. O. and Rachel B. Gleason, of Elmira, N. Y., and in the autumn of 1858, she matriculated in the Philadelphia Woman's Medical College. A year later she entered the New York Infirmary for Women and Children—a noble charity founded and conducted by Drs. Elizabeth and Emily Blackwell—where for a twelve-month she was a resident student and had the advantages of clinical and general practice under careful supervision. Meanwhile the war began and most of the Philadelphia school volunteered as army nurses, and the trustees of that institution, not then, as now, richly endowed, thought it unwise to attempt a session with so small a class; for this reason Miss Avery's plans for the winter were changed and she went to Boston instead of Philadelphia, and in April, 1862, received her diploma of Doctor of Medicine from the New England Female Medical College.

After some months of private practice in Brooklyn, L. I., she accepted a place as assistant physician under Dr. T. T. Seelye, in the Cleveland (Ohio) Water Cure, where she remained until the opening of Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, in September, 1865, in whose faculty she occupied the Chair of Physiology and Hygiene for nearly nine years. This position included the functions of resident physician and general sanitary officer in this great family of between five and six hundred people gathered under one roof, and was of unique responsibility. There were no precedents to work from; there had previously been no college for women, and to this, eager students came from nearly every State in the Union.

Household sanitation was in its infancy, hence, each step taken was more or less experimental. No doubt some of the methods that were adopted would from the present point of view appear very crude and imperfect, but, judging from results, they served excellently, for the standard of health was steadily advanced and not a death occurred among the students during Dr. Avery's service of more than eight and a half academic years.

Those years—the genesis of Woman's Higher Education—were most valuable and inspiring in the living; the memory of them is beautiful. To be in daily communion with such men and women as Matthew Vassar, founder of the college that bears his name, John H. Raymond, President; Hannah W. Lyman, Lady Principal; Maria Mitchell, Professor of Astronomy, and her father, William Mitchell (an uncanonized Quaker saint), and their noble associates, was a rare privilege and would make in any life an epoch of incomparable value.

The old common law of half pay for women—unfortunately not yet obsolete—was found to be in force in the salaries of the Vassar faculty, though Miss Mitchell was the only member of that body who had more than a local reputation, and Miss Avery's responsibilities were certainly as important and exacting as those of any head of a department; so that these two women professors made common cause in a vigorous protest to the board of trustees, which resulted in establishing the principle of justice and equality—equal pay for equal work, regardless of the sex of the worker.

In the spring of 1874, Dr. Avery took up her residence in Denver, Col., and identified herself heartily with the young city and Territory. True to the teachings of her liberty-loving father she was most desirous that when Colorado became a State it should be really a free State for men and women alike, but the Constitutional Council was not of a similar mind, and, as everybody knows, Colorado did not celebrate her birth as a State and the Nation's centennial, in 1876, by incorporating in her statutes the higher interpretation of citizens' rights in a democracy which the age demands. But, undaunted by this disappointment, the Woman's Suffrage Association, of which Dr. Avery was president, made a truly "educational campaign" previous to the election of 1877, when a bill providing for equal suffrage was submitted to the vote of the (male) electors. That, too, failed; 10,000 votes were cast for it, 20,000 against it. A chronicler of those fervent efforts says: "Whatever the outcome, to Dr. Alida C. Avery a weighty obligation is due from all past, present and future laborers in this cause in Colorado." The Denver home was bright and hospitable; many choice friends from far and near met within it during the twelve years of its existence, 1874-1886. Among them were Lucy Stone, Henry B. Blackwell, Susan B. Anthony, Matilda Hindman, Margaret Campbell, the Doctors Gleason (three), Maria Mitchell, who came with a corps of Vassar students to observe the solar eclipse of 1878. No one who shared it will ever forget the breakfast, August 1, 1878, in honor of her 60th birthday. What red-letter days were those when Helen Jackson ("H. H.") and William H. Alger came! blessed memories all! The relentless march of western progress has obliterated the scene of these delightful re-unions; the smooth lawn with apple trees and elms, the rose garden and grape trellises at the north-east corner of Champa and 20th Streets, long since gave place to business blocks and their correlated activities.

Dr. Avery, like many others who inherit superb health and a vigorous physique, made unreasonable demands upon her strength under the climatic stimulation of Denver, and nature called a halt of the over-wrought nerves; a reluctant good-bye was said to Colorado and after various experiences in Chicago, Cleveland, New York, Philadelphia, again in Denver a while and subsequently in New England, searching for the lost, best treasure—health—Dr. Avery came to California in February, 1887, and happily went under the skilful care of Dr. Elizabeth J. Corbett, of San Francisco; that, supplemented by the genial environment, gradually brought a "renewal of life." In 1888, she established a home and opened an office in San Jose, the heart of the lovely Santa Clara valley, where she still abides, enjoying to the extent of her capacity the multitudinous delights that California bestows, impartially, upon the worthy and the unworthy.

She is a member of the California Century Club (Woman's), of the San Jose University Extension Club and of the N. A. W. S. A. She is a member of the First Unitarian Church of San Jose and strives as best she can to make the legend on the cornerstone of the beautiful church edifice—"Worship of God, Service of Man"—her guide and inspiration. She is glad that her early ancestor bore the significant name of Christopher, and she hopes that more and more his descendants will learn that to be Christ-carriers into every phase of life, physical, intellectual, spiritual, is to realize the noblest ideals.

WRIGHTSTILL W. AVERY graduated at the University of North Carolina, in 1837, at the head of his class. He studied law with the distinguished Judge Gaston, and soon acquired a reputation at the bar. In 1842, he was elected to the General Assembly from Burke County, although he was a Democrat, and the Whigs outnumbered the Democrats two to one. He was a member of the General Assembly, either in the Senate or in the House of Representatives, at nearly every session until 1860. In 1856, he was elected Speaker of the Senate, but declined an election in 1860. In 1861, he was elected a member of the Provisional Congress from North Carolina, and served until 1865. In July, 1864, he was mortally wounded while leading an attack on some Union soldiers who had made an incursion into East Tennessee and taken a large amount of property from Burke County.

ALPHONSO CALHOUN AVERY was born September 11, 1835; was educated at Bingham School and at the University of North Carolina, where he graduated, in 1857, with the highest honors of the class. In consequence of the death of his mother and the feeble health of his father, he suspended the study of law in 1857, and assisted his father in the management of two large plantations and a large estate, until 1859, when he resumed the study of law, under the late Chief Justice Pearson. He was licensed to practice law in 1860. He was made lieutenant in the 6th North Carolina regiment in 1861; was captain in 1862; was commissioned major and assistant adjutant-general in December, 1862; served on the staff of Major General D. H. Hill in 1863; on the staff of Lieutenant-General John B. Hood in 1864; and afterwards commanded a battalion in North Carolina until the close of the war.

He was a member of the State Senate of 1866-67; was again elected in 1868, but was excluded under the Howard amendment, because he had been elected county attorney in 1861. He was a member of the convention that revised the Constitution of North Carolina, in 1875, and was elected county judge of the superior court, in 1878. He was re-elected in 1886 for a term of eight years. He is living at Morganton, N. C.

WILLOUGHBY FRANCES AVERY was born in May, 1843. He left college in 1861, where he had taken a high stand in his class and joined a cavalry company in eastern North Carolina. In 1862, he was commissioned lieutenant in the 33d North Carolina regiment and afterward became captain of a company in the same regiment. He was wounded at Sharpsburg in 1862, at Gettysburg in 1863, and was dangerously wounded at Spottsylvania in 1864. His life was saved only by a very skilful operation.

After the war he developed a decided talent for editorial work. He edited first a paper in Ashville, N. C., and then had charge of a daily in Charlotte, N. C. He had established a paper in his native county, when he died in December, 1876.

THOMAS BURNS AVERY was born at Meredith Bridge, April 20, 1817. After graduating from Dartmouth College, where he spent most of his property in obtaining an education, he went south and there acquired what he regarded as a competent fortune. He returned to New Hampshire, where he proposed to remain, but, having entrusted his money to a bank that soon failed, he lost all he had gained. Not willing to surrender himself to life-long poverty, he again went south and there was again successful in accumulating a competency. Returning again to his native New Hampshire, in the midst of the Civil war, he soon settled quietly down for life, but his subsequent career was short. Greatly respected and lamented by all who knew him, he died June 27, 1894.

295

AUGUSTINE DECATUR AVERY was born at Wolfeborough, N. H., October 16, 1814. He occupies the old homestead of his parents. Though never seeking public office and often declining to be a candidate, he has from time to time filled various positions of public trust. Like many others of his kindred, he was in his younger years interested in military tactics, and for some time was lieutenant in a military company. He has been town clerk and town treasurer, each time for several years; representative to the Legislature for three years; county commissioner for two terms, and a corporate member of the Wolfeborough Savings Bank. He was also elected, though he did not serve, as a trustee of the academy. Besides his interest, for many years, and in connection with his brother, in the village store which his father early established, he has long been regarded as an enterprising and model farmer, having, in company with his brother, a large and one of the best conducted farms in New Hampshire.

Augustine Decatur, eldest son of 132-55-18-9 and Mary M. married, Dec. 26, 1854, Wolfeborough, N. H., Sarah E. [Clark; Libby, daughter of Dudley Levitt Libby and Sarah Ann Wig- children: [gin; 586 Belle, born March 27, 1866, unmarried.

296

JOSEPH LORENZO AVERY was born at Wolfeborough, N. H., January 12, 1817. The life and business of the brothers, Augustine D. and Joseph L. Avery, have always been so intimately associated, and, to some extent, even identified, that much that should be said of one might also be said of the other. They married sisters; have been connected in their business; have been interested in the same general objects as leaders in the community, as prominent members of the Congregational society, as the friends of education, good morals and good order, and, to a considerable extent, have sustained the same municipal and other offices. Joseph L. Avery has sustained the offices of town clerk and town treasurer; was a corporate member and trustee of the Wolfeborough Savings Bank and its first treasurer. Since leaving the last named office, he has been on the board of examiners. He was a captain of cavalry and received an appointment on Governor Weston's staff, with the rank of colonel. He was a trustee of Wolfeborough and Tuftonborough Academy from the time his father retired from the board till the adoption of the name of "Brewster Free School," of which he is a corporate member and trustee. During the construction of the Wolfeborough railroad, he was treasurer, the corporation not requiring any bond of him, and has been a trustee ever since that time.

Joseph Lorenzo, youngest son of 132-55-18-9 and Mary M. married, Jan. 8, 1857, Wolfeborough, N. H., Helen M. [Clark; Libby, sister of his brother's wife, birth not given; children :

587 Joseph William, born Aug. 14, 1867, died Oct. 16, 1867.

588 Joseph Clifton, born June 1, 1874.

Anne Eliza, only daughter of 132-55-18-9 and Mary Moody married, Nov. 6, 1839, Rev. Leander [Clark;

Thompson, born in Woburn, Mass., March 7, 1812;

children: Charles Henry, born Sept. 27, 1840, died Oct. 16,

1841. Edwin Wheelock, born Dec. 13, 1841, died Sept. 28, 1849. Mary Avery, born March 25, 1844, died Feb. 10, 1846.

Everett Augustine, born March 28, 1847, died June 10, 1890.

Anne Eliza, born Oct. 29, 1848, died Sept. 6, 1849. Samuel Avery, born Oct. 16, 1850.

REV. LEANDER THOMPSON graduated, in 1835, from Amherst College, and, in 1838, from the theological seminary at Andover. He was ordained as an evangelist and missionary in his native town, Nov. 30, 1838. Soon after his marriage he sailed, with his wife and others, from Boston for Syria and the Holy Land, the company of nine persons being a re-inforcement to the mission in that land, under the direction of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. During the sojourn of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson of several years in that country, a series of four terrible wars, very unexpected to those who composed the mission, desolated a large portion of the missionary field and seriously interrupted, and suspended, even, at times, the missionary work. The unavoidable cares and anxieties and, sometimes, perils which attended such scenes and the prostrating effects of the extreme heat of the climate during part of the time, at length completely broke down the health of some of the missionaries. After a long and very serious illness of Mr. Thompson in the city of Jerusalem, whither he and his wife had fled for comparative safety from the immediate and surrounding perils of war in and near Beirut, it was found that he could not there, if anywhere, entertain a reasonable hope of the recovery of strength adequate for labor in such a field. Accordingly he was advised, and thought it best, to return to the United States. Here, though never regaining his former health, he has twice been a pastor, but, for more than twenty years past, has resided, unable longer to preach, in his native village. In this home of his childhood he has, in his inability to do anything else, devoted a large part of his time to historical research and literary labor. And here, to the great surprise of himself and wife, a very large assemblage of friends from far and near came to celebrate in November, 1889, both in their dwelling and in the church, their golden wedding. It was an occasion of wonderful and unmarred interest throughout.

EVERETT AUGUSTINE THOMPSON graduated from Amherst College in 1871, and for many years was a successful and popular teacher in the classics and natural history in the high schools of Woburn and Springfield, Mass. In Springfield, in his enthusiastic devotion to his chosen profession, he spent years in constant overwork. Besides his regular duties in school, he was ever active as a prominent member of the Connecticut Valley Historical Society; a member and, for some time, president of the Springfield Botanical Society; a teacher of private pupils; teacher in the Sabbath schools; a teacher of a large class of convicts in the city prisons, and ever astir in various forms of educational, moral and religious work. In the midst of all this activity he was seized with a severe malarial fever followed by great nervous prostration, which made it necessary at length to abandon his position and work and return to his Woburn home. Here, though for a time he in some measure rallied, and, so far as able, busied himself with his favorite studies and pursuits, both within and without doors; he really never recovered, but, on the whole, gradually failed, till, on the morning of June 10, 1890, he was suddenly prostrated by a shock of apoplexy; becoming in a few minutes insensible, and dying as quietly as an infant, in about one hour. It is not too much to say that he had hosts of warm friends wherever he was known, and not an enemy anywhere. He died universally lamented.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF CYRUS AVERY.

I can't say much that would elevate the name of Avery very much. But I am in possession of a major's commission for the second battalion of the one hundred and sixteenth regiment of the militia of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in the second brigade of the eighth division, composed of the militia of the Counties of Northern Cumberland, Union, Columbia, Luzern, Susquehanna and Wayne, signed by David R. Porter, Governor of Pennsylvania, August 3, 1842, which I filled seven years. I also held an appointment as postmaster, which I filled under Buchanan and Franklin Pierce. I was in the mercantile business from 1849 to 1878 and was in the lumber trade down the Susquehanna river for many years.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF GEN. ROBERT AVERY.

I was born in Tunkhannock, then a township of Luzern County, State of Pennsylvania, on the 22d day of September, 1839. I entered the volunteer army of the United States on the 13th day of September, 1861, having been ill during the spring and summer of 1861; was a captain of an independent company afterwards attached to the 12th New York Volunteers, and finally to the 102d New York Volunteers. Before the regiment went to the field, and while stationed near Brooklyn, in Kings County, N. Y., the regiment mutinied while I was in command of it, and in suppressing it I killed one of the mutineers. I was tried for murder in the Court of Oyer and Terminer for Kings County, N. Y., and acquitted. I again proceeded to the front, where I participated in several skirmishes—the battles of Cedar Mountain, Second Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam and Chancellorsville; having in the meantime been promoted to be lieutenant-colonel. At Chancellorsville, May 3, 1863, I commanded a brigade and was wounded by a musket ball which entered the neck upon the left side, passing between the jugular vein and caralia artery and out of the lower jaw on the right side of the chin, breaking the jaw. I was partially paralyzed on the left side by the wound. As soon as I had sufficiently recovered I returned to my command, which belonged to the 12th Army Corps, and which had been sent to Tennessee under the command of General Hooker to re-inforce General Thomas, participating in a very sharp little fight in the Wanhatchie valley, on the night of November 28, 1863, and on the 24th of December, 1863, led the assaulting column in the assault on Lookout Mountain, where I was again wounded and lost my right leg, close to the body. For my services in these various battles I was brevetted brigadier and then a major-general of the United States Volunteers.

I was, in 1864, mustered out of the service and appointed a major in the Veteran Reserve Corps, and placed on duty as assistant commissary-general of prisoners. In 1866, I was placed on duty as inspector-general and judge advocate of a military commission for the trial of civil and criminal causes under the reconstruction acts of Congress, in the second military district, comprising the States of North and South Carolina; I remained here until the winter of 1868, when my health failing under the arduous labors of fifteen and sixteen hours per day, I went on sick leave and afterward on waiting orders, and in December, 1870, was placed on the retired list of the army.

So much for the military part of my life. I was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of New York in 1870, and of the United States in 1871. In 1871, I went to Texas to take the financial management of a great railway then in course of construction. I remained there until the summer of 1874. Having had the yellow fever in 1873, and my health having become impaired by the climate and hard work, I came north.

The Avery Family in France and England.

BY MRS. ELROY M. AVERY.

The origin of the name Avery has occasioned much discussion. According to the "Patronymica Britannica," it may come from any of the following:

Aviarius—A keeper of birds, as "avyries of sparrowhawks, falcons, eagles and herons," mentioned in the Forest Charter.

Avery—A place where forage for the king's horses was kept, derived either from Avena, oats (Lat.), or Haver, oats (Anglo-Norman), or Aver, a northern provincialism for a working horse.

Alberic—German personal name, Latinized Albericus, and softened in Norman times to Aubray.

In Burns we read:

"Yet aft a ragged cowte's been known To mak a noble aiver."

Another authority traces the name to Averum, from the French avoir, to have or to hold. Every Avery is, at least, equal to the average, both words having a common origin.

The name has been spelled in many ways, Avery, Avrey, Auvrey, Auerey, Auvray, Auery, Averie, Avyrie, Averye, and probably Auray and Aurey. The letters y and u were used interchangeably until the sixteenth century. De Magny, in his history of the nobility of Normandy, mentions a family of Auvrays of Avranches and, in another place, gives an account of the Aurays of the same locality and assigns to each the same coat of arms, "A lozenge of gold and azure." The Aurays have, as a crest, the crown of a marquis, and as supporters, two lions. The Aurays originated in Brittany, in the town of Auray, and were illustrious before the days of William the Conqueror. Members of that family accompanied William into England in 1066, according to Norman history, and, in 1364, other members took part in the battle of Auray, which put an end to the struggle for the succession to the dukedom of Brittany. The Aurays have always played an important part in the history of France and have been honored with many titles and emoluments. The Auvrays were and are numerous in Normandy. William Auvray was at Vaux in 1463. John Auvray was living at Montivilliers in 1570. Cyprien Auvray was alderman of Caen in 1589 and left a son James. John Auvray, of Coutances, lord of Vivier, ennobled in 1576, had a son Francis, who left sons, Francis, Phillippe, John and Robert, and, in 1666, all the rights, titles and coat of arms of this John Auvray, of Coutances, were confirmed to Adam and Michael Auvray. Marin Auvray, lord of Villy, Bayeaux, ennobled in 1543, had descendants confirmed in his rights in 1666. In 1667, Peter Auvray was confirmed in all the rights of his ancestor, Nicholas, who was ennobled in 1597. There were also Auvrays in Carentan, Lisieux and many other Norman towns. The English Averys are probably of Norman origin. (See histories of Normandy, particularly those of Ogilvy and De Magny.)

The Averys have been found in the southwestern counties of England. In Cornwall, Thomas Avery appeared at Bodmin in 1310; William Avery was defendant in a suit in 1333; Michael Avery was mayor in 1544; Thomas Avery had John baptised in 1560, and Thomas, in 1563; Walter Avery married Orige Williams in 1569, and Michael Avery died the same year. John Avery was in the parish of St. Endillion in 1465. In 1543, Richard Averye owned a messuage in Trewigget. William Avery was in Tintagel in 1603; Thomas Avery was mayor of the same town in 1605, William in 1746, and Richard in 1801; Argent, widow of Clement Avery, owned a field there in 1669 and, at the same time, Christopher Avery had a meadow near by. The tax rolls of Cornwall show long lists of Averys. Thomas Avery, a royalist, was mayor of Liskead in 1659. In 1844, Richard Avery owned "Honour Manor," in Boscastle, and in 1888, Cornwall Averys were still numerous. (See History of Trigg Minor, by Sir John McLeon and "Notes and Queries," vol. 7.)

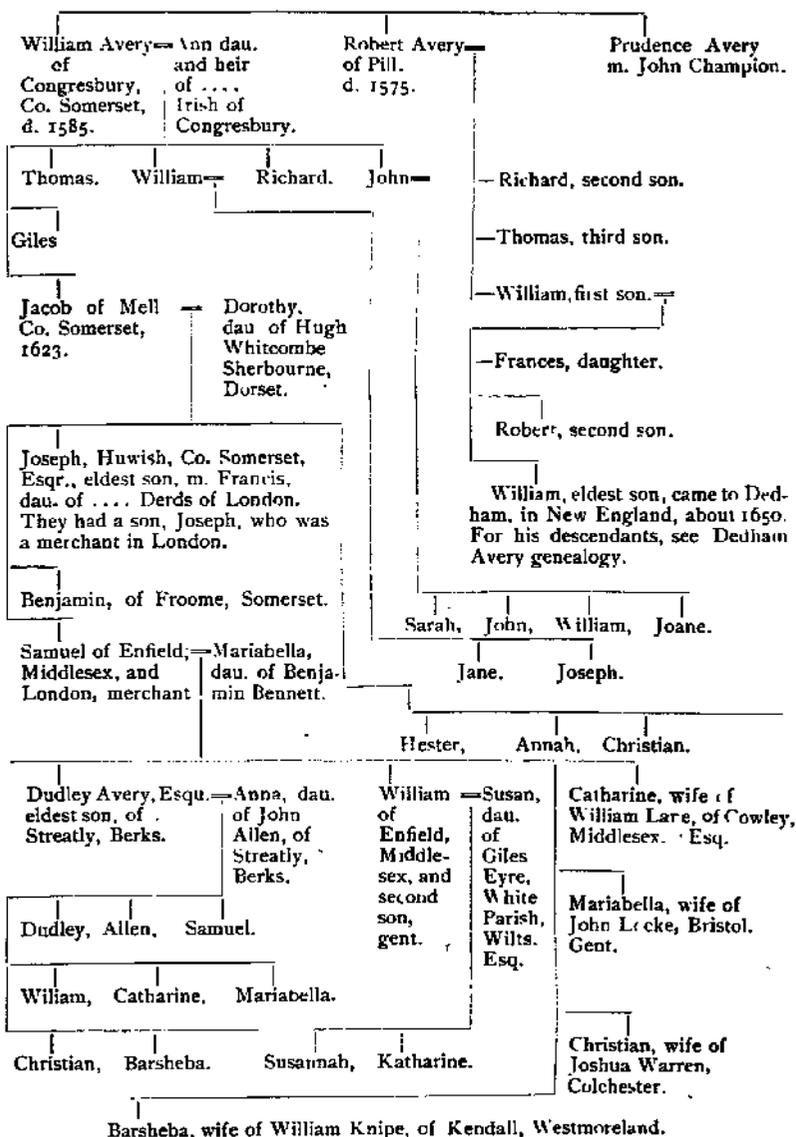

We also find the name constantly appearing in Devon, the adjoining county. William Avery held the manor of Corcham in 1270; a daughter of Thomas Avery married William Tilghman in 1399. About the year 1600, Phillis, daughter of Richard Avery, married Richard Roberts, and her sisters married

Stephens and Chichester. In Dowland, North Devon, Robert Avery buried his mother, the "weif of Thomas Stoffard," and his two wives between 1600 and 1612. The arms used were those of the Averys of Dedham. (See Figure 4.) In Idysleigh, John Avery married Elizabeth Copplestone in 1756. Lady Elizabeth Avery, of Devonshire, was buried in Westminster Abbey in the fifteenth century (See Dedham Avery Genealogy.)

The Dedham branch of the American Averys originated in Somerset, the county adjoining Devon. They appear to have been a family of importance, as they are found in the visitations of that county. The following pedigree of the family is compiled from wills, the visitations of Somerset and Middlesex, the Dedham Avery Genealogy and other sources.

SOMERSET AVERYS, INCLUDING THE NEW ENGLAND BRANCH.

Samuel Avery, of Enfield and London, was sheriff of London in 1647 and alderman in 1649, and joined in the act of May 30, 1649, abolishing kingly power. From the Somerset wills, we learn that Richard Avery, of Pitminster, made a will in 1586 and that his brother William was his executor.

Christopher Avery, of Salisbury, Wiltshire, buried his wife, Mary, in 1591.

Thomas Avery was witness to a deed in Southwark, Surrey, in 1466; Alice Avery married John Beard, of Cowfield, in 1485.

William Avery had land in Essex in 1565.

The Somerset Averys sent branches into Berkshire, Middlesex, and up to London, but there were Averys in Berkshire, apparently of other origin. Amos Avery was commissioner for Berkshire in 1656. Arnold Avery was a justice of the peace in 1650. Henry Avery was a soldier serving in Ireland in 1654. Joseph Avery was deputy governor of the Merchant Adventurers' Company in Holland, in 1660. Robert Avery was a royalist officer in the civil war. Benjamin, Richard and Timothy Avery were Presbyterians in Berkshire, in 1697. The Averys were in the clothing trade in Newbury; a branch of this family settled in Marlboro, Wiltshire; and Dr Avery, the second treasurer of Guy's Hospital, also belonged to the Newbury Averys. They used the same coat of arms as the Fillongly Averys. It is possible that a branch of this family came to America.

The following contains all that I have been able to learn concerning the Filongley Averys, in the county of Warwick. A family of Averys now living in Virginia are descended from an ancestor who had this coat of arms on his silver plate. During the late war it disappeared.

Rob<sup>t</sup> Cooke Alias Clarendieulx

(See Figure 4.)

A Grant of these Armes and Crest by Rob. Cook, Esq., Clarendieulx, to Will. Averey, of Felongley in y<sup>e</sup> County of Warwick, Gent., viz.: On a Palle Engrayled azure three Lyons heads coupey gold, And to his Crest on a Wreath gold and azure, an Owne Couchant Silver besantyd, mantelled Gules doubled sylver. Habend: to him and his posterity, dated 25 Junii, 1579: 21 Eliz. Produced at Coleshill 30 Mar., 1682.

Mem<sup>dam</sup>.—The Owne is gorged with a Coronet in the Painting but not mentioned in the blazon.

We hereby certify the above written Pedigree and Arms to be faithfully extracted from the Herald's Visitation of the County of Warwick made in the year 1619, and the Patent of Arms was again produced at the Herald's Visitation of the said County, Anno 1682, but no Pedigree recorded, but the above note was then made and the Arms and Crest allowed.

GEO HARRISON, Windsor Herald.
STEPHEN TUCKER, Rouge Croix.

The above was obtained by Mr. Sweet in the year 1875, through Charles Harrison, 3 Great Tower St., London, E. C. The name is spelled three different ways!

Agnes Arden, grandmother of William Shakespeare, in a will dated 1584, gives Avery Fulwood two sheep. Richard Avery of Arley died in 1703.

Elizabeth Avery of Enderby, Leicestershire, married Ralph Allen in 1655. I have found no trace of the family in England further north than this.

Itrisia, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Ogle) Avery, was given in marriage in London, by her uncle Sir Thomas Ogle, in 1671.

In Sussex, we find Thomas Avery in 1466, and William Avery in 1565.

In the chancery rolls for the reign of James I., we read: "Avery contra Woodford;" "Avery contra Lashmere;" "Avery contra Dummal ; " Avery Contra Reinal ;" Avery contra Harrys." To-day there is an Avery lane in London and an Avery street in Birmingham.

Turn now to a good county map of England, and notice that most of the early English members of the family lived in the extreme southwest of the " tight little isle," and that there they were very numerous. In the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, all of of whom we now have any trace, lived in Cornwall and Devon. These counties are directly north of an that part of Britty in which is the ancestral town of Auray and the distance between them is not great. Geography, heraldry, etymology and history join hands to suggest, with common voice, that all the Averys of both England and France were of the same stock.

In the seventeenth century, many of this name sought the shores of the new world. This book is devoted to the descendants of Christopher Avery, who settled in New England in 1630. Dr. William Avery came to Dedham, Mass., in 1650: a recent publication contains an account of those who claim him as their progenitor. Hotton's list of emigrants shows that there were many others who crossed the sea. Thomas Avery, a blacksmith, sailed in the " John and Mary " for New England in 1633. In 1635, Thomas Avery, aged eighteen, sailed from London, April 27, bound for Barbadoes; John Avery, aged eighteen, left Gravesend, in the " America," in June, for Virginia; and in July, Maria, aged twenty-two, left the same port in the " Association " bound for the same part of the new world. In August of the same year, George and Jacob Averie, aged thirty-three and twenty three years respectively, took passage in the " Globe " bound for Virginia, and, in October, John Avery, aged twenty-two, left in the " Amitie " for St. Christophers. William Avery was buried at St. Michaels, Barbadoes, in April, 1679, and Jane, daughter of William, died at St. George, in July. There was also in Dorchester, Mass., in 1642, a John Avery, who died in 1654, and the settlement of his estate showed that he had a brother Lawrence.

I have for many months been gathering material relating to the early history of the Avery family; this I now present in a compact form. It must be left to some abler hand than mine to supply the many missing points and make of the fragments one harmonious whole.
