

RHEIMS CATHEDRAL UNDER DIRECT GERMAN FIRE! The above picture quashes the Teutonic claim that the structure was damaged "accidentally." A 380-centimeter shell is seen breaking over the chancel.

Exclusive Photo Underwood & Underwood.

Commanding officers of the Coast Defense are shown above working on a war map. The mimic submarines are arranged by them, and the students are required to show what they would do to meet the invading fleet.

Photo © American Press Association.

Above, probably the first picture seen in this country of the interior of Fort Douaumont, at Verdun. It shows the German officers in charge, and was taken from the pocket of a dead German soldier.

Exclusive Photo (publication in France prohibited) Pictorial Press.

To the left, the squirrel life on the Monastir front. An Allied soldier in his quarters in the roots of a huge tree.

Photo Pictorial Press.

Coast Guard recruits at Fort Trumbull, Conn., returning from a drill. The newly mounted six pounders can be seen atop the fort to the left.

Photo © International Film Service.