

THE "FIGHTING 69TH"

The "Fighting 69th," now the 165th Infantry, under command of Colonel Hine (at left), left town for their camp in Garden City, last Monday on the first stage of their journey to France. Below they are shown en route to the ferry. Nineteen years ago (as shown on the right) they marched through the streets of New York on their way to the front in the Spanish-American War. A comparison of the two pictures plainly shows the marked changes in their military appearance.

Photos by Press Illus., Underwood & Underwood and Van der Wejde.

Above: The "Fighting 69th," which will form part of the new Rainbow Division, arriving last week at their temporary quarters, Camp Mills, Garden City, L. I., for intensive training before being sent overseas.

Amer. Press.

On right: New army identification tag for each American soldier before leaving for front.

Underwood & Underwood.

"Goodby! Good Luck! God Bless You!" A familiar sight these days around New York.

These people are hungry. Crowd of 50,000 in Molino, Sweden, demonstrating for more food. A socialistic orator may be seen speaking from the balcony of the Courthouse.

Underwood & Underwood