

the Final Chapter in the World Fight for Democracy

The Allies. A French, English and American army officer at the American Instruction Camp back of the lines. The American apparently has not acquired the habit of the swagger stick as yet. French Official by Pictorial Press.

President Wilson marches at the head of the District of Columbia's drafted men in Washington's stirring parade of last Tuesday. In the above picture, President Wilson can be seen at the extreme left in white flannels and carrying the Star-Spangled Banner. Behind him marched most of the members of the Senate and the House. (Photo Am. Press Assn.) On the right—A close up of President Wilson carrying the special silk flag presented to him for the occasion. Photo Central News.

Dr. Page, U. S. Ambassador to England, chatting with a group of American Army officers in Green Park, London.

These boys at Fort Wadsworth are learning to scale a wall with full equipment. It is necessary for the soldier to "get to the top" and get there ready to fight. Paul Thompson.

Below: A session of the school for buglers at the Marine Barracks, Paris, S. C. These marines must memorize 287 bugle calls before being qualified for the rank of trumpeter. Gillmans Service.

Funeral of Captain Mattis, of Chicago, who was killed recently trying to stem the tide of mutinous negroes of the 24th Infantry, stationed at Houston, Tex., who raided the town, causing the deaths of nearly a score of white soldiers and townspeople. International Film Service.

Above: One of the contingents of Pershing's Expeditionary Army detraining somewhere in France. These troops are on their way to their training camp. Their departure and arrival was unheralded, as it is necessary to conceal their movements from the Germans. Underwood & Underwood.

Left—Secretary of War Newton D. Baker delivering his address to the graduating class at West Point. These young officers will see immediate service with the new army. Paul Thompson.

Right—Kermit Roosevelt, son of Colonel Roosevelt, pays a visit to friends in London prior to joining his command at the front. Underwood & Underwood.

