

Look who's here! And look at the talent that's gravitating to the movies! Mme. Lina Cavalieri, famous beauty and grand opera star, as she will appear in one of a series of Paramount pictures soon to be released.

Above—Carol McComas plays the leading feminine rôle in "A Scrap of Paper" at the Criterion Theatre.

Irene McGrane with Walker Whiteside in his rôle of Japanese diplomat in "The Pawn." For an understanding of ways that are dark Mr. Whiteside repeatedly distinguishes himself in peculiar Asiatic parts.

On the left—Cathleen Nesbitt, who is to appear in "General Post," the new Dillingham production which we have been promised for this season.

Get the contagious grin! Bluch Landorf, in "Cheer Up," is helping the Hippodrome to break all records in mirth making—good for all kinds of grouches.

Left—Mona Kingsley—at piano—was as willin' as Barkis till she found that the he-Cinderella, alias "The Tailor-Made Man," was only a cross-legged apprentice.

The death of John Chilcote, as portrayed by Guy Bates Post in his dual rôle of John Chilcote, M. P., and John Loder, journalist, in "The Masquerader."
