

Above, to right—Miss Mabel Boardman, for years president of the Red Cross, was the first woman marcher in line.
Photo by Tribune Service

Above—Mrs. Josephus Daniels, wife of the Sec. of the Navy, headed the District of Columbia's volunteer workers, of which Mrs. Woodrow Wilson is vice-pres.
Photo by Tribune Service

Mrs. John Purroy Mitchel exchanged triumphant smiles with Mayor Mitchel in the review stand in front of the Public Library as she marched past the head of the New York City Red Cross Workrooms Division.
Photo by Tribune Service

(Insert) Mrs. H. P. Davison, wife of the head of the American Red Cross War Council, led the Nassau County (L. I.) chapter marchers.
Western Newspaper Union

The Red Cross parade, October 4, with its 25,000 marchers—15,000 of them volunteer nurses—was a thrilling sight even for a New Yorker. For over two hours the cheering thousands watched the seemingly endless procession of serious women mobilized to do their bit. The purpose of the parade was to stimulate interest in the various Red Cross activities.
Photo by Tribune Service

Mrs. Leo Wanner marched with her Red Cross dog Filax, decorated with a service flag. Filax has distinguished himself at the front.
Int. Film

A symbolical scene, "The Fruitage of the Year," under the direction of Mrs. Florence Fleming Noyes, and a part of the audience at the Rosemary Pageant, Huntington, Long Island. More than a thousand people took part in the gigantic allegory of War, among them the most prominent stage and opera artists, with Daniel Frohman in charge of the casting committee.

