

The youngest and the oldest man in the United States Navy—Seaman Campbell, aged 16, and Chief Boatswain's Mate James McCarthy, aged 61. The latter wears eight service stripes. Both these sailor men are "bunkies" on the same dreadnought.
© Burnell Poole.

Miss Abby Putnam Morrison, the first woman actually enlisted in the United States Navy. She is a first grade electrician and a member of the wireless class for women, founded and directed by Mrs. H. S. Owen.
© Underwood & Underwood.

A recent photograph of Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., taken in Paris, where she is "head waitress" of the American Y. M. C. A. Hotel for U. S. Army Officers.
© Lowell Thomas.

Miss Margaret Curtis, associate director of the American Red Cross Bureau of Refugees and Relief in France, photographed at her desk in Paris. Miss Curtis was three times national women's golf champion.
© Lowell Thomas.

How often you hear the question asked: "How do our soldier boys keep warm in their tents during the winter months?" Here is the clever, compact little wood-burning tent stove that does the trick.
© E. Harrison, from Press. Illust.

"Thank God!" THURSDAY NOVEMBER 29 1917. W. N. U.

Dr. Depoye, of the Belgian Army Hospital Corps, shakes hands with King Victor of Italy, while King Albert of Belgium is seen getting out of the royal motor car.
Pictorial Press.

Here is the way they serve midday "chow" at the U. S. Army's Training Camp, Fort Oglethorpe. This camp boasts of over six miles of trenches and the men undergo intensive training in them for twenty-four hours at a stretch.
© E. Harrison, from Press. Illust.