

Looking out on the City of Jerusalem from the church tower atop the Mount of Olives. Jerusalem fell to the British army early this month, and General Allenby's troops will spend Christmas in the Holy City.
Brown & Dawson.

Left—The President's granddaughter, little Helen Wilson McAdoo, hangs up a Red Cross Service Flag in the White House window. The three crosses on the flag indicate that three members of the household have joined the Red Cross.
Inter Film.

To the right—The body of Auguste Rodin, France's famous sculptor (as life-like as one of his own statues), lying in state in his villa near Paris, where he died last month. Rodin, long the storm centre of art in France, rose from poverty to an envied place among his nation's greatest men.
Underwood.

Little do we city folk appreciate the hardships of our boys in camp during the cold and stormy winter months. This National Army sentry—like hundreds of others the country over—is having his first taste of patrol duty at Camp Dix during the recent snowstorm.
Kadel & Herbert.

No wonder the trains were late last week. This picture gives a good idea of the difficulties the railroad men have to contend with when a big snowstorm clogs up their switch points and disorganizes their train schedules.
Inter Film.

